"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Unfair.

Senator John H. Bankhead, discussing a political move, said with a smile:

"Oh, it's too coldly calculated. It's almost unfair. In fact, it's like Mrs. Blank.

"Mrs. Blank is a leader of Bar Harbor society. Her husband said to her, one afternoon, as she made a very elaborate toilet for a garden party that she was giving to some members of the British legation:

"'Why did you write to all our guests that this party was to be absolutely informal?'

"Mrs. Blank laughed.

"'So as to be the best-dressed woman present, of course,' she said."

Dr. Robert L. Waggoner, the president of Baldwin university, said, in the course of an address on pedagogy at Berea, O.:

"And one of the most remarkable changes in the last 30 years of teaching is the abolition of corporal punishment. A boy of this generation is never whipped. But a boy of the last generation—well!"

Doctor Waggoner smiled.

"The boys of the last generation," he said, "must have believed that their instructors all had for motto:

"'The swish is father to the taught.'"

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.
Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.
"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.
Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.
"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."
Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.
Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.
"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.
Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.
"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."
Yours truly,
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.
Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910.
"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."
Yours truly,
Geo. Paskewitz,
Vesta, Minn.

The new branch leaves the main line, which was built to Superior a year ago, at Moose Lake and runs in a generally northwesterly direction. It runs through a rich farming country, and gives access to Duluth to the farmers of that district who may ship their produce there for sale.

Many new towns are building up on the new line and the construction of the line means the rapid development of the fine farming country east of here.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

The First Truth for Candidates to Learn.

At least one half of the voters of Red Lake county are reading every issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette. It does not require much figuring to show that the candidate can get more publicity for a modest sum of money by using Gazette advertising space than in any other way. For $5.00 a brief formal announcement will be run from now until the general election; for $10.00 the same announcement with a single column cut will be run. The sooner you make your announcement the more you can get for your money. Those whose announcements appear in the Gazette may purchase space for special announcements at a fair advertising rate. This statement is made to indicate to candidates that the advertising columns are open to any candidate who may desire to make use of them for legitimate advertising matter. This is an offer to sell space in the advertising columns only; not in the editorial or news columns.

HON. JAMES GRAY WILL SPEAK HERE

Democratic Candidate for Governor at Bijou Theatre Next Wednesday Afternoon

Hon. Edward Peterson, State Fire Marshal, Will Also Deliver an Address.

The first rally of the political campaign will be held at the Bijou theatre in this city next Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 5, at 2 o'clock.

Hon. James Gray, Democratic candidate for governor, and Hon. Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, will deliver addresses. Mr Gray is a brilliant public speaker and there is no doubt that he will have many things to say that will be worth hearing. This is the only opportunity that the people of Red Lake Falls and vicinity will have of hearing the popular candidate for governor during the campaign. Mr. Peterson is also an able speaker and no doubt these two men will give the people something to think about and talk about.

JAMES GRAY.

KAUFER IS BANQUETED

Given Hearty Send-off on Eve of His Leavetaking for the West.

A large number of business and professional men of the city participated in a banquet at Paul's hotel Monday evening in honor of L. A. Kaufer, who left Tuesday for his new home in the west.

After the excellent dinner that Mrs. Paul had prepared had been properly disposed of, Mayor Duffy, who presided, called for toasts. There were many appropriate and deserved expressions of appreciation of the good work that Mr. Kaufer has done for Red Lake Falls and many expessions of regret that he and his estimable family were to leave the city. Mr. Kaufer responded in a neat speech in the course of which he said that circumstances rather than his desire to leave Red Lake Falls had been what had caused him to decide to go west. Before the party broke up, it was moved and seconded and carried unanimously, Mr. Kaufer voting a loud and long "aye," that "Louie Kaufer don't want to leave Red Lake Falls."

Council Proceedings.

Regular meeting of the city council held at the city hall Sept. 1st, 1910.

Meeting called to order by President Paul.

PRIMARY ELECTION VOTE

The members of the canvassing board of Red Lake county, Chas. The tabulated returns showing the vote by precincts are published in this issue of the Gazette.

A VERY SAD TRAGEDY

Death of Octavo Morrisette Wednesday—Body Burned in House Same Day.

The death of Octavo Morrisette and the burning of his house a few hours later and his body being consumed by the flames, is the sad and most unusual tragedy which occurred on Wednesday.

Mr. Morrisette died at 5 oclock yesterday morning. Shortly after noon the house was discovered to be on fire. The fire originated in the room in which the body was being kept and it was impossible to get the remains out of the burning building.

The origin of the fire is unknown, though it may have started from candles that were burning in the room.

The fire was discovered by a neighbor, Pierre Emard, who had left the house shortly before, he having gone over to see if he could do anything for the bereaved family. Mrs. Morrisette and her daughter-in-law were in the house at the time, but knew nothing of the fire until Mr. Emard reached the house again. The fire had gained such progress that it was impossible to get into the room to remove the remains.

Mr. Morrisette was one of the pioneers of southern Red Lake county. For more than twenty years he had resided on his farm one mile east of town. He is survived by his widow and several children. The relatives have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Hay's Telling Speech.

The Thief River Falls News tells of a farmers' meeting at Highlanding a week ago Sunday at which John Hay, who gets a salary as superintendent of the Thief River Falls high school and has the job of writing the county division dope for the Thief River papers, is reported as having delivered a very telling speech.

There is no doubt that it was a very telling speech, for the Gazette has been reliably informed that Mr. Hay told the farmers at the meeting that if Red Lake county is divided the records could be transcribed for $2000. That certainly is telling something. That sum won't buy the books, files, etc., for the records and when the work of transcribing the records is completed there will be an expense account of something like twenty times $2,000.

It is evident that Mr. Hay is telling more in his speeches than in his newspaper articles and no one who has read his newspaper articles has ever doubted that he is a man of nerve.

FOOT BALL SCHEDULED

First Game of the Season Between Local and Fosston High School Teams.

The first football game of the season will be played in this city between teams representing the Fosston and Red Lake Falls High school teams, a week from Saturday afternoon Oct. 8. The high school boys hope that every rooter in town will be on hand to contribute his share of the glad noises and about two bits. The expense of the game with Fosston will be quite heavy and the money will be quite as much appreciated as the lung gymnastics. The line-up will be given next week.

INDUSTRIAL CONTESTS IN RURAL SCHOOLS

The New Work in Agriculture and Domestic Science In Rural Schools.

Supt. Anderson Will Hold Five Contests During Month of August.

The Industrial Contest for boys and girls of Red Lake county will be held at the following places: Brooks, Saturday Oct. 8th; Plummer, Monday, Oct. 10th; St. Hilaire, Saturday, Oct. 15th; Red Lake Falls, Saturday, Oct. 22nd; Thief River Flais, Saturday, Oct. 29th.

The Industrial Contest is a contest in the production or selection of corn, grains, fruit, vegetables and in sewing and cooking by boys and girls under eighteen years of age. This is the first year that a contest of this kind has been held in this county, but it has been conducted in the state very successfully for the past three or four years. Last year over forty counties held these contests or school fairs as they may well be called, and met with so much success that they are taking up the work again this year with the assurance that nothing can do more to interest the boys and girls in the general duties about the farm and home.

The object of this movement is not primarily to strengthen or develop county fairs, but to interest the boys and girls in the practical things of life; to bring them more closely in touch with the home, and lead them to take such vital interest in agriculture and farm life that they will have no desire to leave the farm. The city schools can have courses in agriculture, domestic science and manual training. The country schools, however, are not able on account of the expense to establish such courses, but this is a way to get some of this practical work done among the rural school children.

The contest work was begun here in the month of May when Supt. T. A. Erickson of Douglas county came here to help me begin it. The largest schools in the county were visited and many evening meetings were held. These meetings were well attended by school officers, teachers and others who all manifested so much interest and enthusiasm that I have felt that it is bound to prove a great success. Many teachers and children at once began the work of sewing and agriculture before the schools closed last spring and the work has been continued since that time. The boys have worked hard in helping care for the potato fields and gardens and have studied and selected corn and grains that they may be able to bring the best of these products to the fairs and obtain prizes. The girls also have done their part in sewing work aprons, shirt waists, etc., and have done darning, patching and cooking. It is, however, optional with the boys and girls as to which of this work they wish to do; the girls as well as the boys can select, clean and prepare the agricultural products and the boys can learn patching, darning, etc., if they wish.

The contest has been pretty well advertised by extension Bulletin No. 8, from the agricultural department of the University of Minnesota. This bulletin explains the contest thoroughly and should any be in need of them, they can be furnished from the office of the county superintendent on request. Letters have also been sent to a great many children about this work and I earnestly hope that parents are encouraging their children to take active parts in the work at home and at school and that there may be a co-operation with the teachers in every district to come to one of the places where a contest is held with many nice exhibits. It is expected that the days of contests be made a kind of a holiday and that teachers and children make it a point to come in a body from each school.

For the sake of convenience, a contest will be held at each of the above places and I trust that the people in these places are willing to help it along in any way they can. Some money for prizes has been obtained already, but business men and others will, I am sure, further contribute merchandise or money. Prizes will be announced later.

H. F. ANDERSON,
Co. Supt. of Schools.

Mrs. Linnihan, of Red Lake Falls, arrived in the city last evening and is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Lytl, where she joined her daughter who came over yesterday afternoon from Grand Forks where she had been ill for some time at St. Michael's hospital. Miss Linnihan will remain here as Mrs. Lytle's guest until she has sufficiently regained her strength to resume her journey to her home at Red Lake Falls.—Crookston Times.

OKLEE'S BEGINNING.

New Soo Line Town Commences to Make History.

The First State Bank of Oklee, in which Red Lake Falls people are interested, opened for business at the new Soo line town on Wednesday of last week. John L. Cruzen is incharge of the bank as a cashier. Falardean & Doucet have moved their store from Lambert to Oklee and there are other signs of business activity. There is no doubt that in a few months Oklee will be a thriving village.

LIFE STORY OF JAMES GRAY

Interesting Story of the Career of the Democratic Nominee for Governor.

James Gray, the Democratic nominee for governor, was born at Falkirk, Scotland, the site of Wallace's last great battle, Feb. 18, 1862, his father being a master miller and his mother the daughter of a sturdy farmer. In 1866 his parents emigrated to America and he was brought, as he expresses it, "together with other valuables," to Bellevue, a little milling town in Iowa, where they resided, save three years in Grant county, Wis., until 1880. At Bellevue he finished his common school education, his scholarship being uniformly marked "excellent," while his deportment was only "fair," owing to his penchant for seeing the humorous side of things.

Full of enterprise, he began his newspaper career when eight years old by delivering papers and incidentally heralding the news, and his peculiar bent began to assert itself. He took an eager interest in current history and became well informed on what was going on in the world, discussing weighty matters with a gravity and sagacity at once amusing and significant—a training of great value to him throughout his subsequent career.

Experience in Manual Labor.

As he grew older he spent his vacations in the village sawmill, piling lumber and, waist-deep in the water, pushing and shoving the logs to the "slip." During one summer he worked on a macadamized road on a plan of his own—contracting to work out the poll-tax of citizens and getting enough days' work together to do the whole job. Thus he was a practical exponent of good roads before the present crusade for better highways was born.

In 1879, during his last year in school, he acted as a supply teacher, and at the age of seventeen received a full-grade certificate and taught school the following year.

In the spring of 1880 his father concluded to learn the new process of milling and the family removed to Minneapolis, subsequently returning to Iowa. James remained, working in a sash and door factory, and traveled daily on the Milwaukee tracks to and from his work, a full-fledged member of the dinner-pail brigade.

Secures a College Education.

During the summer of this year (1880) an incident occurred which influenced his entire career. He attended a celebration of the anniversary of the discovery of St. Anthony falls at the University of Minnesota campus, where General Sherman advised young men not to leave Minnesota in quest of gold, because there

TWENTY-FOUR HOUR ELECTRICAL SERVICE

Probable That All Day Service Will be Put on by the Power Company This Fall.

Representative of the Company Here This Week Interesting People in the Plan.

W. L. Clure, an expert in the employ of the Red River Power company, has been in this city this week trying to interest users of power in a plan for twenty-four hour electrical service He is meeting with much success and it is probable that the improvement in the service will be made this fall.

If the all day service is put on it will result not only in longer hours, but also in better lighting service, for the plant will be much improved.

There is little doubt that the city is to have the better service. Mr. Clure finds the prospects very encouraging. There is no power quite so satisfactory in every way as electrical and every user of power should seriously consider what the company have to offer.

John King's Close Shave.

Will Wells has felt the charm of Battle Lake in Otter Tail county, where the fish do not bite you if you attend strictly to business, and has recently connected himself, by purchase or otherwise, with the Battle Lake Review, and is now holding down the position of the man who takes in the money. In the vicinity of the lake Mr. Wells found the barber who used to shave him in Iowa in prehistoric times. Mr. Wells records in the Review how this barber gave the present librarian his first shave. The story is worth considering. Mr. Wells says:

"Twenty years ago I was teaching King the art preservative in my Alton, Iowa, print shop. After weeks of meditation John concluded he was old enough to get shaved. The silken down upon his upper lip was almost invisable but John wanted a shave just the same. So down to Meis' shop forthwith went John. Meis gravely and carefully lathered his face, hot toweled it, lathered it again and rubbed it in, meanwhile signaling all those passing to attend the occasion of King's first shave. The populace assembled quietly and expectantly all with sober mien, while Meis shaved the recumbent state librarian with the back of an old rubber comb, asking solicitously now and then if it hurt much! John never noticed the comb. He was hay-rummed, powder-puffed, hair-combed, clothes-brushed, and turned out wearing the same silken down upon his youthful chin, that adorned it when he first came, all unconscious of the joke. The town of Alton laughs yet at King's first shave."

Since Mr. Wells' advent the Review has purchased a big two revolution four roller book press. He says:

"We believe that the new six-ton press will print a picture so the good folks will not mistake it for a second-hand mustard plaster."

Battle Lake is sure to have a readable paper and a spicy one. Mr. Wells will comment severely on contemporaries who refer to by mistake or otherwise as Bottle Lake

BIG DAMAGE SUIT.

Estate of Leon Champine Sues Lumber Company for $5000.

Attorney Chas. E. Boughton this week began an action for $5,000 damages against the Grand Forks Lumber company for the estate of Leon Champaigne of Brooks who was accidently killed in the woods near Northome last February.

About That Cartoon

in the Thief River Press—the Thief River people have been trying to turn that cow around for lo, these many years. Failing in that they now propose to divide, still leaving us the part of the cow that gives the milk. After all, doesn't that picture represent the condition of the farmers of the proposed "Pennington county"—if that county is ever born—who will have to feed the end of the cow that has the capacity without any prospect of returns?

If that county cow is divided the front end will have a hundred instead of sixty per cent appetite for tax money.

VIEWS ON RAILROAD RATE DECISION

Democratic Candidate for Governor Talks About the Otis Decision.

[Speical Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Sept. 27.—Frank Eddy, whose epigram about the candidate for governor who ate pie with a knife a certain Lac Qui Parle statesman has reason to remember to his cost, in a burst of eloquence last week at Austin referred to the "pin head progressive Republicans and wall-eyed Democrats" who were taking part in the primary campaign down there. Frank, I understand, is well paid for getting off that sort of thing. Since the defeat of Congressman Tawney he has been exercising his ingenuity to account for that catastrope. Naturally he overlooked the very plain reason that the long suffering people of the district had at last become impatient of misrepresentation and had decided to make a change.

"Pin Head Progressives" to the Front.

Mr. Eddy put the blame for Tawney's defeat primarily on the wall-eyed Democrats before mentioned. One might let it go at that who didn't know any better. The trouble in the First district is the same as it is in pretty much every part of the state or of the nation for that matter. We had an exhibition of it in St. Paul where certain Democrats who can claim much better title to being wall-eyed than those in the First district helped Cogressman Stevens out of a hole. There was another exhibition of it in the Fifth District. Still another occurred with happier results in the Sixth district. The "pin-beaded Progressive Republicans" are everywhere on the rampage and, as in the Fourth and Fifth districts are ready to take up almost any kind of a candidate in order to demonstrate their impatience of the kind of leadership into which the Republican party has fallen and the kind of tools they employ to go about the country calling better

CLYDE PRYOR A SUICIDE

Former Red Lake Falls Newspaper Man Took Carbolic Acid.

Clyde J. Pryor, well known here, having been connected with a Red Lake Falls newspaper at one time, committed suicide Tuesday at Bemidji, where he had resided for a number of years. The report from Bemidji says:

"Clyde J. Pryor, former newspaper man, at one time clerk of the court at Glencoe and nominated at last Tuesday's primaries as Republican candidate for court commissioner of Beltrami county, committed suicide here this morning by drinking a mug of carbolic acid.

'Physical deformities and poor health are believed to have worked Mr. Pryor into the determination to take his own life. He was found in a wood shed by his wife, who, worried because he had been away all night, went in search of him. Mr. Pryor was forty one years old. He was secretary of the Bemidji Commercial Club for two years, and at the time of his death was Ninth district member of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs.

Mr. Pryor came here six years ago from Crookston, and until a year ago was engaged in work on the Daily Pioneer. Since the first of last January he has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business. The body will be taken to Glencoe for interment.

Crookston College is the oldest and the largest school in the northwest. Every graduate in a good position. Send for a "Yard of Success." Address J.C. Sahtre, Crookston, Minn. tf

The agitation against the restrictions placed on the importation of foreign meats to Germany based on the inadequacy of the domestic supply, is increasing. Baron Schorlemer, Prussian minister of agriculture said he recognized the seriousness of the situation throughout the country.

The annual meeting of the permanent committee of the Young Egypt party opened at Geneva, Switzerland, and afforded an opportunity, of which several Egyptians availed themselves, to attack former President Roosevelt because of his speeches at Kharton and London. Among the epithets applied to the colonel were "vulgar blusterer" and "self advertiser."

NO CLOUDS IN SIGHT

COLONEL GEORGE HARVEY SAYS COUNTRY ALL RIGHT.

THE WRITER SEES NO CLOUD

Striking Article in North American Review That Is Attracting Wide Attention.

The attention of business and professional men in all portions of the country has been attracted to a strikingly strong article by Col. George Harvey in the September issue of the North American Review in which the writer takes a view of the greatest hopefulness for the future of America and Americans. The article is entitled "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense," and it is meeting with the cordial approval of business men of all shades of political opinion throughout the entire country. In part, Colonel Harvey says:

"Unquestionably a spirit of unrest dominates the land. But, if it be true that fundamentally the condition of the country is sound, must we necessarily succumb to despondency, abandon effort looking to retrieval and cringe like cravens before clouds that only threaten? Rather ought we not to analyze conditions, search for causes, find the root of the distress, which even now exists only in men's minds, and then, after the American fashion, apply such remedies as seems most likely to produce beneficent results?

Capital and Labor Not Antagonistic.

"The Link that connects labor with capital is not broken but we may not deny that it is less cohesive than it should be or than conditions warrant. Financially, the country is stronger than ever before in its history. Recovery from a panic so severe as that of three years ago was never before so prompt and comparatively complete. The masses are practically free from debt. Money is held by the banks in abundance and rates are low.

"Why, then, does capital pause upon the threshold of investment? The answer, we believe, to be plain. It awaits adjustment of the relations of government to business. * * * The sole problem consists of determining how government can maintain an even balance between aggregations of interests, on the one hand, and the whole people, on the other, protecting the latter against extortion and saving the former from mad assaults.

"The solution is not easy to find for the simple reason that the situation is without precedent. But is not progress being made along sane and cautious lines? * * *

Conserve Common Sense.

"Is not the present, as we have seen, exceptionally secure? What, then, of preparations for the future? Patriotism is the basis of our institutions. And patriotism in the minds of our youth is no longer linked solely with fireworks and deeds of daring. It is taught in our schools. A new course has been added—a course in loyalty. Methodically, our children learn how to vote, how to conduct primaries, conventions and elections, how to discriminate between qualifications of candidates and, finally, how to govern as well as serve. They are taught to despise bribery and all forms of corruption and fraud as treason. Their creed, which they are made to know by heart, is not complex. It is simple, but comprehensive, no less beautiful in diction than lofty in aspiration. Those are the pledges which are graven upon their memories:

"As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country. America is my own dear land; she nourishes me, and I will love her and do my duty to her, whose child, servant and civil soldier I am.

"As the health and happiness of my body depend upon each muscle and nerve and drop of blood doing its work in its place, so the health and happiness of my country depend upon each citizen doing his work in his place.

"These young citizens are our hostages to fortune. Can we not safely assume that the principles animating their lives augur well for the permanency of the Republic? When before have the foundation stones of continuance been laid with such care and promise of durability?

"The future, then, is bright. And the present? But one thing is needful. No present movement is more laudable than that which looks to conservation of natural resources. But let us never forget that the greatest inherent resource of the American people is Common Sense. Let that be conserved and applied without cessation, and soon it will be found that all the ills of which we complain but know not of are only such as attend upon the growing pains of a great and blessed country.

He Knows the Game.

According to the Metropolitan Magazine, Fire Chief John Conway of Jersey City, b. solved the baseball excuse question by the posting of the following printed notice on his desk at fire headquarters:

"All requests for leave of absence owing to grandmothers' funerals, lame back, house cleaning, moving, sore throat, headache, brainstorm, cousins' wedding, general indisposition, etc., must be handed to the chief not later than ten o'clock on the morning of the game."

Duty Smears.

"How can you go around," demanded his wife," with tobacco juice all over your face?"

"This isn't tobacco juice," responded the candidate, mildly. "It's molasses. I've been kissing babies."

Pretending.

"See the boys."

"Pretending to be soldiers, eh?"

"Yes; kids get lots of fun pretending."

"And grown-ups, too. I put in my vacation pretending I was rich."

HEADS MINNESOTA DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

JAMES GRAY.

GRAY IN PLACE OF LIND

NEWSPAPER MAN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

Says He Will Accept the Nomination and Make a Hard Fight.

St. Paul. — Hon. James Gray, editorial writer of the Minneapolis Journal, was selected by the Democratic State Central Committee as the Democratic candidate for governor. The selection was approved by John Lind. The former mayor also is said to have been the choice of Chairman Frank A. Day.

"I expect to accept," said James Gray when notified of his nomination. "I do not believe I care to say anything more than that I expect to make a vigorous campaign for the office. The whole thing has come on me so suddenly that I have not had time to make any plans. The first intimation I had of this action was last Monday. I expect to make a more extensive statement to the state central committee as soon as I receive official information of my nomination."

Rumors that the committee would endeavor to pass a resolution in favor of county option started a buzz of conversation on the floor of the hotel lobby, but the report was denied. It is understood that Mr. Gray will appeal to the country as a county option candidate, but no effort will be made to change the Democratic platform.

Previous to that Chairman Day had read John Lind's letter declining the nomination, and his resignation was accepted upon a motion read by Daniel Daily of Minneapolis.

"I confess I am somewhat disappointed over Mr. Gray's selection," said Ralph W. Wheelock, governor's secretary. "Having been vindicated in my opinion expressed several months ago that Mr. Lind would not be the Democratic candidate, I was in hopes that my further opinion that Mr. Day himself was the logical leader of his party in this campaign, would also be justified.

"Mr. Gray's selection, however, ought to insure a campaign free from personalities and like tactics, for in frequent co-operation with him in municipal matters in Minneapolis, I have always found him to be a gentleman and a scholar."

John Lind voiced the note of county option in the committee meeting. Called upon for a speech, Mr. Lind briefly enumerated why he couldn't accept the nomination. He said a victory by Democracy must be won by some candidate of whom it could not be said was elected for a personal reason.

AGENT DAVIS ARRESTED AGAIN.

Cass Lake.—James Davis, government agent engaged to keep intoxicants from the Indians, was arrested at Bemidji, charged with having threatened Charles Argalo of state counsel in the case of A. A. Oliver, who accused Davis of assault in the seizure of Oliver's grip. Davis pleaded guilty and was ordered to furnish a $300 peace bond, which he has not yet furnished.

State Tests For Cattle.

Minneapolis. — The Minnesota state sanitary board will begin a regular inspection of cattle in Minneapolis dairies. J. H. Lyle, city milk inspector, has received word that arrangements are being made to send inspectors into the city at once. The inspection will be monthly. Under the rules to be adopted by the board, every herd will be given a thorough test. The dairymen will not be allowed to add cattle to the inspected herd without having them examined first by the state officers.

REFORM SCHOOL HEAD CLEARED.

Charges Made Declared False by Board of Control.

St. Paul. — Mrs. Fanny French Morse is heartily praised by the state board of control. Her work at the Girl's Industrial school at Red Wing is commended.

Two specific charges which were made against the management of the school were found to have a little foundation, but the general charge that the discipline has become lax, that conditions generally were bad, that the morals of the school were rapidly deteriorating, was found to be unsubstantiated by facts.

Mrs. Morse assumed charge of the institution on Aug. 1, 1910, and 30 days after her installation the charges were made.

In its report the board condemns the criticism directed against Mrs. Morse, after her coming to Minnesota. It deplores the fact that a person coming here as a stranger to cope with conditions that are extremely difficult, should not have received proper assistance and co-operation.

must stand pat for it. Equal rights to all, no special privileges for any. We must restore the rights of the people."

INDIAN AGENTS FINED.

Sero and Davis Convicted at Cass Lake for Assault on Editor Oliver.

Cass Lake.—The trial of Indian Agents Sero and Davis was held here. Oliver was defended by Argall, while Assistant United Stated District Attorney E. S. Oakley appeared for the defendants.

Half a dozen witnesses were examined. The evidence showed that the agents struck Oliver and knocked him down after getting off a train at Bena while attending to his duties as state land appraiser.

The court imposed a fine of $100 and costs, or in default of payment, sixty days in jail. The fine was not paid and the men put in the lockup here. It is not known now what, if any, proceedings will be taken by Oakley in the agents' behalf.

Davis pleaded guilty to using threatening language against Attorney Argall in a local saloon Saturday evening, and was required to furnish a bond for $300 to keep the peace for six months. Being unable to furnish bail, commitment papers were made out tonight by Justice Ives sentencing Davis to the county jail at Walker, where he will be taken tomorrow morning.

WALKER POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

Burglars Use Dynamite and Get a Rich Haul.

Walker. — A gang of burglars dynamited the Walker postoffice and made away with about $2,000 in money and over $800 in stamps. Entrance to the building was gained through the basement and the job has all the appearance of being the work of professionals. The safe was not only cleaned of cash and stamps but the money drawer robbed and all registered letters taken as well. Two suspicious characters were in town last evening which is the only clue the police have at present.

MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Two Other Freeborn County, Minn., Residents are Injured.

Albert Lea. — John Yost was killed in an automobile accident at Oregen and Mre. and Mrs. Charles Marpe were seriously injured. They are prominent residents of Freeborn county. The machine skidded and the driver lost control. Yost had been active in political work. The latter is not expected to live. Mrs. Marpe is dangerously hurt.

Force of Habit.

"They say Doctor Sawyer, the famous surgeon, is a very rude man in social life—that he never speaks to anybody on the street."

"That's professional habit. You see he is so used to cutting people."

The Explanation.

"Jagsby said the neglect of his friend to ask him to dinner cut him to the quick."

"Oh, I guess he meant a cut to the quick lunch counter."

Not for Him.

"Ever use an automobile for a getaway?" inquired the first burglar.

"Nix," answered the second burglar. "We fellers run risks enough without taking chances on being pinched for speeding."

Not His Business.

"Doctor Grouchy is one of the men who never seems to like his neighbor to enjoy good fortune."

"Well, can you in justice expect a doctor to wish others well?"

CAN'T MAKE RATE

TWO CENT FARE ON NORTH DAKOTA RAILROAD LINES IS CONFISCATORY.

OF FAR REACHING EFFECT

Decision by Judge Otis as Special Master in Chancery—Enormous Resources of Railroads are Shown by Judge.

St. Paul, Sept. 21.—By the filing of his findings in the Minnesota commodity freight and 2-cent passenger rate case today in United States circuit court, Special Master in Chancery Charles E. Otis, held these rates to be unconstitutional and confiscatory.

The effect of this decision practically takes away the rate making power of the state and is one of the most important decisions handed down in many years.

In his decision Judge Otis finds the value of the Northern Pacific, excluding its outside properties and subsidiary companies and equities to be $452,000,000 and the value of the Great Northern, excluding its outside properties, etc., to be $457,000,000 and that these companies are entitled to earn 7 per cent on this valuation.

This places a value of about $175 per share on Great Northern and $130 per share on Northern Pacific and this on their operated railroad properties alone.

The Northern Pacific has equities outside of their railroad properties such as coal and iron lands, subsidiary coal company and land grant worth conservatively $200,000,000. The valuation placed by the master is as of June 30, 1908.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Veterans Once More Parade Before Commander-in-Chief.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 21.—Once again the "boys in blue" have passed in review before their commander-in-chief.

With the same old spirit they marched the broad avenues of this city by the sea today and were acclaimed by great crowds who came to see the big feature of the forty-fourth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. Ideal weather favored the old soldiers.

Forty-four states were represented in the procession, and while the parade was not as large as those of other years, there was no end of enthusiasm as the veterans marched.

The spectacle was a stirring one. Every building along the line of march was draped in the national colors and the sidewalks were massed with people whose interest did no cease until the last of the line had passed.

Near the end of the route the parade was reviewed by Commander-in-chief Samual R. Van Sant. On one side of him on the reviewing stand stood Vice President James S. Sherman and on the other was Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired.

TAWNEY DEFEATED.

Strong Fight Was Made Against Minnesota Congressman.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 21.—The insurgent cause in Minnesota made great strides yesterday when James A. Tawney of the first district was defeated for renomination. While at an early hour this morning Tawney's managers would not admit defeat, they conceded that the prospects were dark and that Sidney Anderson of Lanesboro had a lead of 1,600 votes with about one-third of the returns in. Anderson claims the nomination by a plurality of 2,000.

Tawney's defeat was no surprise as the fight against him was fierce.

Congressman F. C. Stevens who calls himself a progressive republican and a supporter of the Roosevelt policies, had a hard fight, but won out with a plurality of about 1,500 over H. T. Halbert, a radical insurgent.

The other Minnesota republican members and W. S. Hammond, the one democratic member, were all renominated by safe margins.

Plot Against Japanese Emperor.

Tokio, Sept. 21.—A sensation was created by the publication this afternoon of the alleged details of a plot among his own subjects to assassinate Emperor Mutsuhito. The startling story appeared in The Hochio Shimbun, which states that the plotters who are now under arrest, certainly will be sentenced to death after a trial before a special secret court.

This is the first time in the history of the country that the life of the sovereign has been plotted against by his own people and the fact made public.

Issues Patent for Coal Land.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 21.—The general landoffice has just issued a patent covering 640 acres of coal land, in Whatcom county. The United States received $20 an acre for the land. The patent gives the land in fee simple, subject to vested water rights and right of way for United States irrigation ditches.

Whatcom anthracite lands with a large number of other coal areas in this state, were withdrawn from entry Oct. 11, 1906. On the 20th of the same month they were restored.

New Island in Aleutian Channel.

Seward, Alaska, Sept. 20.—A new island was added to the Begeslof group in the Aleutian channel when the towns of Ounalaska and Dutch Harbor were shaken by an earthquake Sept. 1. The island arose from deep water at a point where a sounding by the geological survey last year showed seventy fathoms. It is in the form of a great round hill close to Percy peak, the island that arose last year.

The revenue cutter Bear, from Nome brought this news and also reported that officers of the revenue cutter Tahoma were making a survey of Begeslof islands to obtain full details of the Paralysis Closes Church.

Marshalltown, Ia., Sept. 20.—Because of infantile paralysis the First Congregational church of this city was closed for an indefinite period of time today. Very close, next door to the church, there is a case in the Chapman family, and rather than expose the children of the church and Sunday school the trustees decided to close the building.

100 Hurt in Wreck.

London, Sept. 20.—One hundred persons were injured today in a railroad train wreck near Oporto.

CITY IS GREATLY EXCITED

DEVILS LAKE PUBLISHER SHOT AFTER RAID.

Sheriff and Prominent Citizens Joined in Closing Up Places Where Booze Was Sold.

Devils Lake, N. D., Sept. 20.—Dan V. Brennan, publisher of The Devils Lake Inter-Ocean, son of Judge M. H. Brennan, a graduate of the state university and one of the best known men in this section of the state, was shot and quite badly wounded this morning following a wholesale raid on the blind pigs of Devils Lake.

The shooting occurred at 5 o'clock. Brennan was one of a posse which assisted Sheriff W. H. Belford, in a series of raids, the most sensational attempt to close up the illegal booze joints of Devils Lake ever made. The young publisher, following the raid, went to his office. He was about to leave the office and had just stepped into the hall and was in the act of turning out the hall light when an unknown man stepped from behind a door and opened fire on Brennan. The bullet entered the fleshy part of the left arm, making a jagged and painful wound.

Brennan at once pulled his gun and returned the fire and the would-be assassin leaped through an open window, tearing through the screen and falling a distance of fifteen feet to the street below. He escaped in the dusk. Brennan did not recognize him.

The city is in a furore of excitement after the strenuous doings of the early morning hours.

Sheriff Belford, Acting Assistant State's Attorney Traynor, Deputy Sheriff Flemmerfe't and twenty citizens of Devils Lake, including some of the most prominent people of the city, took part in the raids.

These arrests took about three hours to complete and it was nearly 5 o'clock when young Brennan went to his office. He was evidently followed by a sympathizer of the lawless faction who had determined on a summary vengeance and the shooting affair previously described took place.

No arrests had been made at a late hour today in connection with the shooting.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Is in Session at Capitol City With Helpful Program.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 20.—The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the North Dakota Baptist state convention opened at Bismarck this afternoon at 2 o'clock with a praise service, and will continue until the closing address is delivered by Rev. A. E. Peterson of Fargo, Friday evening. During the four days some of the most prominent speakers of the country will be in the city and contribute to the programme, which promises to be especially helpful to the Baptists not only of the state, but to the entire west.

All arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates have been completed and they are present from all parts of the state. The Norwegian and Swedish Baptists are affiliated with the English speaking church and the German Baptists co-operate with their English speaking brethren, and members of these denominations will also be in attendance during the services.

Rain at Encampment.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 20.—Veterans attending the forty-fourth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic were disappointed to see it rain today. Several of the organizations allied with the grand army opened their sessions today and others continued committee work preliminary to the formal opening of the business sessions.

The national council of the administration held its first meeting at headquarters on Ocean pier and the national council of the ladies of the G. A. R. held its initial session at Haddon hall.

The national council of Women's Relief corps also went into session. The sons of veterans' encampment was opened with addresses of welcome and reading of reports.

Girl Admits Murder of Two.

Newkirk, Okla., Sept. 20.—It is believed by the authorities that Ebby Shepard, the 16-year-old daughter of J. W. Shepard, who confessed last night that she had killed her father and his brother, Taylor Shepard, with an ax, had an accomplice in the crime. A coroner's inquest will begin this afternoon.

The officers said the girl's father and uncle returned home unexpectedly and found a young man in the house with the girl.

Rate Case Is Progressing.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—The western railroads today continued the presentation of evidence before the inter-state commerce commission in support of their contention that a general advance in freight rates is necessary to maintain the standard or service demanded by the government and the people.

Ballinger as Guest of Honor.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 21.—Secretary of the Interior Richard A. Ballinger, who is on his way to Washington to attend the reassembling of President Taft's cabinet will be the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered him today by the Chamber of Commerce.

The Baptist Convention.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 21.—The meeting of the Baptist ministers of the state which was held here yesterday in connection with the Baptist state convention was well attended, about seventy-five ministers and representatives being present.

The ministerial union held a meeting last evening and elected officers as follows: President, Rev. Ingrame of Grafton; secretary, Rev. Sam Batcheler of Fairmount; treasurer, Rev. A. E. Peterson of Fargo. Rev. Peterson preached the conference sermon last evening to a large crowd upon which he made a fine impression.

Fargo, N. D., Sept. 21.—Secretary W. C. Macfadden of the North Dakota Bankers' association said this morning that O. A. Anderson, president of the First National bank at Hannaford, would be a delegate to the meeting of the American Bankers' association which will be held at Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3-7.

The Los Angeles meeting will be one of the biggest gatherings of financial men ever held in America and four special trains will be run from the east to the convention. Trust companies, savings banks, clearing houses, national, state and private banks will have special programmes.

FORTS FOR CANAL

NEEDED FORTIFICATIONS WILL COST ABOUT FORTY MILLION DOLLARS.

PLANS OF PRESIDENT TAFT

Expected That Both Terminals of Panama Will Be Fortified—Main Pacific Fort Will Be on Sosa Hill.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Plans for the fortification of the Panama canal at a cost of $14,140,000, an increase of $9,276,521 over the estimate submitted in 1905 by the National Coast Defense board, of which President Taft was then chairman, was sent to Congress last April.

The proposed expenditure refers only to "seacoast defenses for the terminus of the canal," but it is also planned to provide means of defending the portions of the canal other than the terminal from attacks to which those portions might be subjected by forces operating on land with the object either of getting possession of the canal or of injuring the locks, dams, etc.

Twenty-five million dollars is a conservative estimate of what the final plans of the seacoast and land defences will call for, and it is thought by some that $40,000,000 will be nearer the final sum required for the defense.

The plans of President Taft call for: Ten 4-inch rifles, twelve 6-inch rifles, twenty-eight 12-inch mortars, besides an elaborate system of submarine defenses.

Six of the 14-inch rifles—the most powerful gun in the world—will be placed on the Pacific coast, and four on the Atlantic in pairs.

Although the greatest secrecy is maintained concerning the fortification plans, it is known that the main fort defending the Pacific entrance will be built on Sosa hill and armed with four 14-inch rifles, six 6-inch rifles and eight 12-inch mortars. This will be named Fort Amador, after the first president of the republic of Panama.

Two other 14-inch rifles will be placed on Ancon hill, with smaller artillery and the islands of Naos and Perico in the Bay of Panama will also be fortified with the object of enabling an American fleet to pass through the canal and form in line of battle on the Pacific side, outside the range of any gun on a ship that can come within range of the guns on the islands, which in turn will be protected and commanded by the guns of Sosa and Ancon hills.

This plan was adopted on the suggestion of Admiral Evans, who pointed out that no matter what fortifications were built a fleet passing through the canal would have to come out one by one and it would be impossible for a fleet to pass from one ocean to another if there was a hostile fleet awaiting it, the hostile fleet could destroy the vessels as they came out.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT.

Grand Army of Republic is Holding Its Reunion.

Atlantic City, Sept. 19.—The innumerable activities of the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic began today when the national headquarters were formally open on the ocean pier at the foot of Tennessee avenue.

The temperature is pleasant, but heavy clouds, that rolled in from the ocean made the air damp and indicated rain. Things were early astir at the pier and veterans who had not seen each other in many years held reunions. There were expressions of joy to see old comrades again and many moments of sorrow when some soldiers found that dear old friends had gone to their final rest.

The big crowd already here, was swelled by an inflow of thousands of veterans, from all parts of the country on the morning trains.

The reunion of the Philadelphia brigade on Steeple Chase pier and the meeting of Col. Hilary A. Herbert, member of President Cleveland's cabinet and a confederate officer, with Commander-in-Chief Van Sant and General Sickles, are still talked of among the hundreds of veterans.

It is probable that the proposition made by Colonel Herbert to bring about a great meeting of the blue and gray, will be considered during the week with the object of carrying out the suggestion.

Suffering of Miss Leneve Told.

London, Sept. 19.—Something of what Ethel Clara Leneve suffered, as half mad with jealousy, she impatiently awaited the fulfillment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed at today's session of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore.

In her distress Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson, and the story that the latter told on the witness stand rivalled the most sensational evidence introduced at the preliminary trial.

Will Speak at State Fair.

New York, Sept. 17.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt left here this morning on the New York Central railroad for Syracuse where he will deliver an address this afternoon at the New York state fair. The colonel will return to New York tonight.

New Island in Aleutian Channel.

Seward, Alaska, Sept. 20.—A new island was added to the Begeslof group in the Aleutian channel when the towns of Ounalaska and Dutch Harbor were shaken by an earthquake Sept. 1. Weyler's Book Justifies Our Intervention in Cuba

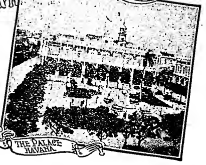
MORRO CASTLE HAVANA

CAPTAIN GENERAL WEYLER

CITY OF HAVANA



THE PALACE HAVANA

WITH an unpardonable lack of tact or a gruesome attempt at a sinister piece of humor, Gen. Valeriano Weyler, the former Spanish captain general of Cuba, who gained for himself the unenviable title of "butcher," has allowed the publishers to print the title of the sensational book in which he attempts to defend his conduct while the representative of the Spanish crown on that island,

MI MANDO EN CUBA
(My Command in Cuba)

in letters of gory scarlet on a paper of livid gray.

Whatever the motive may have been that prompted such a choice, that bloody "eye catcher" of a line fitly symbolizes the man and the work which caused so many years of discontent in Cuba. Weyler has been on trial before public opinion for butchering his enemies instead of fighting them; and he flaunts in our faces the ugly stains that show where he wiped off his knife.

Captain General of the most fertile province of Spain (and a province which more than once manifested her intention to throw off the Bourbon yoke), he makes such a case against the country that buys his services as no citizen of the United States could have ever made to justify America's attitude in the Cuban mix-up.

Weyler was the best hated man in Cuba when the government of his nation finally recalled him. This book will cause him to be cursed the length and breadth of the peninsula.

"I wrote it," he says, "to give all the facts about my conduct as general in chief, a conduct admired not only by army officers, high and low, who wrote me innumerable letters, but by privates, who, on their return to the peninsula, spoke of me with an enthusiastic fervor for which I can never thank them enough. Various reasons prevented me from doing years ago (when I could not have freed my mind from a certain bias) a work which I can now do in perfect peace of mind, thanks to the time that has passed, and which has soothed the irritation due to the injustice I suffered at the hands of some men.

"Furthermore I did not wish to sadden Senor Sagasta by retelling the story of our colonial disasters; neither did I feel any pleasure in censuring the illustrious Gen. Martinez Campos, my predecessor in Cuba, however uncharitably he acted toward me after his return to the capital."

A perusal of the book fails to prove that Weyler kept his promise to treat the subject with perfect moderation; the general's blood is still boiling, and with some justification, for atrocious as his conduct was in many instances, it could not very well be criticized in Spain by the Spanish government.

Had Weyler been endowed with the literary genius of a Marbot or a Las Cases, he could have made a much stronger case against Spain and presented his own actions in a much more favorable light. Unfortunately his knowledge of the writer's craft is as deficient as his fund of information touching political economy, general history, national and international politics is meager.

Weyler is not a diplomat; the slippery land of nuances and innuendos is to him terra incognita; a primitive brute, with rudimentary ethics, though unflinchingly frank and straightforward, he never ventures an assertion which cannot be supported by documents; he never pays any attention to hearsay but quotes people's letters in extenso.

A fascinating type, after all, for the observer blessed with the sense of history; just imagine what a Weyler would have developed into if he had not been born some 500 years too late; clad in steel, he had been riding a caparisoned mount, or, if he had been allowed to range over Europe during the Thirty Years' war!

General Weyler's style is very trying; even his proclamations vainly modeled after Napoleon I.'s oratorical gems, rarely sound the note that makes a people or an army vibrate. His relations of the Cuban campaign with all the facts, figures, names recorded in hophazard fashion day by day, is well nigh unreadable.

But the documents he publishes in support of his thesis (some of them of a confidential character and which must have been secured through "diplomatic means") make it well worth while wading through an otherwise dull, shapeless and indigestible piece of writing.

First of all we are made to realize how hopeless the plight of the Spanish commanders had become in the island when Weyler took the situation in hand; the many generals who preceded him had been losing ground from day to day; their cables to the Spanish government gave information of a pessimistic character of which the public and the press were seldom apprised; their confidential correspondence betrayed heartrending facts; more than once poor Gen. Martinez Campos had humbly confessed himself beaten, while the cabinet led the Spanish nation to believe that the war was practically over.

Weyler himself, when placed in command of the Cuban army, was not even given what he was entitled to, an honest account of the situation.

"When I landed in Cuba," he writes, "I did not even suspect the terrible conditions that prevailed in the island. I did not know anything besides what the minister of war had told me and what I had read in the papers or in anonymous letters sent by Spaniards living in Cuba, and I thought that all of them exaggerated the facts; I had no knowledge of the secret documents I have opposed to this book. How gloomy the outlook was is set forth graphically in a confidential letter from Gen. Martinez Campos to Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain.

" . . . Although from the very first I realized the gravity of the situation, I refused to believe it; my visits in Cuba, Principe and Holgin appalled me; however, in order not to appear pessimistic, I did not express all my thoughts, and I decided to visit not only the maritime communities, but the towns in the interior. The few Spaniards who live in the island do not dare to mention their origin except in the cities. The rest of the population hates Spain. Wherever you pass a farm and ask the women where their husbands are, they answer with terrifying frankness: 'In the mountains with Chief So and So.'

"You could not get anyone to carry a message for 500 our 1,000 pesetas; he would be hanged if he were ever caught. . . . "

The rebels who charged Weyler with wanton cruelty seldom restrained themselves from accomplishing deeds of violence likely to terrorize the few remaining supporters of the Spanish rule. To quote Weyler:

"The insurgents did not return in any way the considerate treatment accorded to them by this generous commander (Martinez Campos). At the beginning of the war Maximo Gomez showed himself very fair; but Maceo, as I shall prove by authentic documents, ordered his bands to set fire to all the sugar mills whose owners were not paying war tribute, to plunder and loot the country, to shoot mercilessly all the messengers, men caught repairing railroad lines or bringing provisions into the villages. Worse yet: The insurgent chiefs did not hesitate to kill with their own weapons defenseless islanders, and Maximo Gomez in his 'Memoires' confesses to having shot personally a man he had sentenced to death, a deed which I call willful murder. And still that individual presumes to call me 'assassin.'"

As his authority for the foregoing statement General Weyler not only quotes extracts from the Cuban papers, but appends a proclamation of Maceo, Gomez's lieutenant, to his bands.

"Comrades in Arms: Destroy, destroy everything, day and night; to blow up bridges, to derail trains, to burn up villages and sugar mills, to annihilate Cuba is the only way to defeat our enemies. We have not to account for our conduct to anyone. Diplomacy, public opinion and history don't matter. It would be sheer insanity to seek the laurels of the battlefield, to bear the fire of the enemy's artillery and contribute to the glory of the Spanish commanders. The essential thing is to convince Spain that Cuba will be but a heap of ruins. What compensation will she receive then for the sacrifice entailed by the campaign? We must burn and raze everything. It would be folly to fight as though we were an European army. Where rifles are of no avail let dynamite do the work.

A. MACEO."

The only way to subdue such bloodthirsty, desperate pirates was to adopt their own tactics. The insurgents, of their own admission, never gave nor accepted battle, but harassed the regulars and destroyed their sources of supply. "Concentration" seemed to be the only solution of the problem, for the wives and children of the insurgents gave them constant aid and kept them informed of every movement of the Spanish regiments. Says General Weyler:

"Of all the measures I took the most bitterly criticized was the 'concentration,' which saved my troops from being uselessly decimated and prevented the landing of arms and munitions consigned to the enemy. I need not defend that system. Whoever has a smattering of the history of modern wars knows that it was copied by the English in the Transvaal and the Americans in the Philippines, a fact most flattering to my pride as a general.

"If individuals were sometimes summarily shot under my generalship, as it happens in the course of every war, they were put to death in obedience to the laws and regulations, never for the mere reason that they were insurgents. I pardoned those who returned to the fold, and showed much clemency to all those who came to me, however black their past may have been."

It is a matter of regret that General Weyler should not have deemed it advisable to volunteer more information as to the organization of the concentration camps. He says that one pound of meat and a quarter of a pound of rice were allowed to every individual over fourteen, and one-half that ration to children, which seems quite sufficient under the circumstances. A few paragraphs, however, couched in his blunt, soldierly style, setting at naught the terrible charges preferred against him in connection with that stern system of warfare would have been interesting, but they were lacking. His silence amounts to a confession of guilt. He makes a weak attempt at explaining that the wives and children of insurgents were not "concentrated," but obliged to betake themselves where the head of the family was supposed to be found. This is worse yet, for one can conceive the appalling abuses which such an order emanating from the general in chief must have countenanced and justified. As the revolutionary bands were constantly moving from east to west and from west to east and could not be located with any certainty, what an existence must have been that of families whose men were not serving in the ranks of the regular army. Refused army rations, compelled to roam from one devastated village to a burnt down hamlet, they could not but succumb to hunger and exhaustion.

Had Weyler been less brutally honest, he would have omitted such a damaging admission.

Up to this day we have had books of many kinds dealing with the Cuban war; pamphlets put forth by the insurgents and notoriously unfair to Spain; Spanish publications which misrepresented grossly the attitude of the United States; articles in European newspapers almost unanimously censuring the Americans for "robbing" Spain of her colony.

Now, however, we have the facts presented almost without any comments and certainly without embellishment by a Spaniard who loves his country and frankly detests the Americans.

Once or twice he registers a protest against the senate's decision concerning the recognition of belligerency or the campaign of defamation directed against him in American papers.

He complains that in March, 1896, when he had the situation well under control, the senate of the United States interfered most unfairly, for it recognized the belligerency of the insurgents, thereby giving them new courage.

This is less convincing than the majority of his arguments, for if we compare dates we find letters in which he admits his failure to stop the progress of the insurrection.

His gravest charge against the United States is contained in the following paragraph, which is too vague to be taken as seriously as some other statements of his:

"The United States were against everything that would bring about a termination of the war—American citizens held several millions worth of Cuban bonds, issued with the provision that the island would pass under the domination of the United States ten years after Cuba would have separated herself from Spain. The Yankees saw that with the pace I set the much-longed-for independence of Cuba and its corollary, the annexation thereof, was becoming a more and more remote possibility. But there was no reason why the peninsula should have robbed all the gossip which originated in America."

But on the whole the picture his letters and reports, as well as the letters of Martinez Campos he publishes, present to our eyes of Cuba in the years preceding the Maine incident would have justified any nation, near or remote, in intervening for the sake of humanity; a population unanimous in its desire for independence; a bloody war which could only lead to an ephemeral peace and at best would have left the island a dreary waste for years to come; the rights of foreign land owners and investors trampled under foot; all this horror had to be stopped.

Spain did not lose Cuba as a consequence of the war with the United States; by the very admission of Spain's military representatives in that ill-fated colony, Cuba was irretrievably lost to Spain in 1897, and the few Spaniards residing in the coast towns, the only safe abode for them, felt themselves a despised, ostracised minority.

BUSTED IN CHICAGO

Hundreds Daily Shuffle Through Streets Without Money or Friends.

Young Hoosier Lad Leaves Small Town to Answer Advertisement of Employment Agency—Is Duped and Robbed of Coin.

In Chicago penniless and without a friend.

Were you ever in such circumstances?

Probably not, but every day sees hundreds of your fellows who are. The other day Walter Summers, a lad of only 17 years, good looking and apparently fairly well educated, shuffled into the Desplaines street police station.

The lad, tired and broken in spirit, sat down in a chair.

"Say," the boy asked timidly, "how far is it to Wabash avenue?"

"About a mile," was the reply.

He smiled half-heartedly.

"About a mile, eh? Gee, I wish I had a dollar for every mile I've walked today. I could buy some regular food and have enough left to get cleaned up and pay my railroad fare home."

"Where is your home?" was asked.

"Evansville."

"Indiana?"

"Yep."

And then the tired boy told his story.

"I had a job in West Salem, Wis.," he said, "and I was getting along pretty well. I had a few dollars saved up and thought I was satisfied. I saw an advertisement in a pamphlet up there, telling how easy it was to make money in Chicago. The 'ad' was signed by an employment agency. All you had to do was to give the agency $2 and it would ship you to Chicago, where a job would be waiting you. It sounded fine, so I thought I'd try it.

"I gave my $2 to the agency and took the rest of my money with me. I was shipped with about fifteen other fellows.

"When I got to Chicago I went to the place where the agency had told me I could land a job. The address which they had given me I found was a swamp—out that way somewhere," and the boy pointed toward the southwest side.

"Then I saw that I had been 'bunkoed.' The agency, I guess, was a fake, or else they had given me the wrong address by mistake. I thought, though, that I could get a job next day, so I gave a dollar for the room I slept in that night. I hunted around for two days, trying to find a job. Twice I was told to call next week, but that is as close as I've come, so far.

"It was Tuesday when I came to Chicago. The following Sunday night I slept on the dock, down there by the river. There were lots of other fellows there, too. I spread out some papers and lay down on them. When I woke up in the morning I found that some fellow had taken my last $10."

The boy paused a minute, looked at his lone auditor and smiled.

"Say, honest now, ain't I the 'fall guy'? I guess I need a guardian," he said, and in spite of the fact that he was hungry and without money, he actually laughed.

"Ever since that night I have had to beg what food I have had. And I haven't had a shave, either, not since I came to this town."

"Yesterday I gave up. I went in the station down there," pointing west again, "and the 'copper' at the desk gave me a postal card and a nickel. Then I wrote to my mother and told her where I was and that I was 'broke.' I expect to hear from her tomorrow and then I am going home. An' say," he went on, "for all the three years which I have been away, I haven't written to my mother. She didn't know but what I was dead. I had an argument with her one day," he admitted reluctantly, "and I ran away. I got along all right up in West Salem, but Chicago is a fierce place."

The boy got up to go. A plain clothes detective who had come out during the latter part of the boy's story gave him 50 cents.

"Here, lad," he said, "you're too young to be in this town without money."

The reporter added his mite to the boy's fortune, then turned to go into the station.

"Well, much obliged," murmured the runaway, "so long" and he was off.

THE FIRST WIRELESS TELEGRAPH INSTRUMENT EVER USED ON AN AEROPLANE

This photograph, the first of its kind, shows the tiny wireless telegraph apparatus designed by H. N. Horton and placed on Glenn H. Curtiss' Aeroplane for sending messages while in flight. Dr. C. F. Everitt of the signal corps, N. Y. National Guard is seen sending a message.

Order French War Planes.

Paris.—The ministry of war has ordered the purchase of ten military monoplanes and twenty biplanes within the next three months. This will give the French army an aerial flotilla of sixty by the end of the year.

Sea Lion is Life Saver.

Toledo, O.—The sea lion which recently won much publicity by its sojourn in the Maumee, escaped again some time early the other morning. Police Lieutenant Conway sent four officers to pursue the animal.

Coroner Charles J. Henzler says they ought to let the sea lion stay in the river and make no attempt to catch him.

"They should not have taken it out when it was in the river before," he says. "Why, as long as it was in the river there was not a single case of drowning. Kids were afraid to go in swimming, and people were afraid to commit suicide by jumping into the water."

Praise for American Girls.

New York.—"American girls do not go abroad to have a good time by drinking wine, smoking cigarettes and following other European customs. Those who say they do libel them."

Thus said Lady Francis Cook (Tennessee Claflin), herself an American girl, who arrived the other day from Europe.

"American girls have revolutionized Europe," she continued. "Continental streets, which were regarded as unsafe for women after dark, now are as safe as our own avenues. It is the American girl who has worked this change."

INDIAN IS GOOD COOK

Woman Wastes More Than She Uses, Says Prof. Barnard.

Specialist in Household Economy Says American Man, Because of Wife's Culinary Inefficiency, Not as Well Nourished as European.

New York.—Go to the squaw, thou housewife, consider her ways and do likewise.

At least such is the advice of Prof. Charles Barnard, specialist in household economy, and one of the foremost figures at the household show recently held in Madison Square garden, says a writer in the New York World.

What Professor Barnard is not telling eager inquirers at the garden of the superior housekeeping methods of our great-great-grandmother, Minnehaha, he is busy with the "housekeeping experiment station," which he maintains at Darien, Conn., for testing under the most simple housekeeping conditions all new materials, methods, utensils and appliances which may prove useful in the home.

"The American housekeeper, compared with the housewives of France and Germany, is an unlettered child," declared Professor Barnard to me yesterday.

"The American man, because of his wife's culinary inefficiency, is not so well nourished as the European making half the income. At least 20 per cent. of the money spent on the American table is absolute waste."

Professor Barnard, mild of voice and eye, spoke with an earnestness that belied his manner.

"The American woman," he added, "does not know as much about cooking as the Indian squaw."

"Cooking, though it is part of the profession of wifehood, does not interest her. She 'can't be bothered,' she says. The merchant's wife vies with the millionaire's wife in buying only the most expensive cuts of meat. Steak, chops; steak, chops! swings the unvarying pendulum of the week's bill of fare.

"Now, only 24 per cent. of a beef, for instance, can provide the expensive porterhouse steaks, Delmonico roasts, etc. The other 76 per cent. is made up of the cheaper cuts—chuck, rump, round, shank, navel, brisket, etc.

"This meat if properly cooked, that is, slowly cooked, is more nutritious and has a better flavor than tenderloin. But the poor man's wife won't take the trouble to cook it. Her husband may say, 'We'll have to economize. Let's buy a little cheaper meat.' But when she gets to the butcher's and sees another woman buying something more expensive she feels ashamed of what she intended to order or else says to herself, 'What's good enough for her is none too good for me,' and buys a porterhouse steak instead.

"There's another type of woman that would rather spend her husband's money than her own time. She 'can't be bothered' cooking. But"—here Professor Barnard brightened up perceptibly—"a solution has been found even for her. It is fireless cooking. Have you ever tried it?"

I confessed that my education had been neglected in that respect.

"That's a trick the Indian squaw has taught us," Professor Barnard continued. "There are 15 or 20 different fireless cookers on the market, so you see I'm not booming anybody in talking about them."

WEARING TWO VEILS LATEST

Double Protection Against Dust and Sun is Forced in English Society Circles.

London.—Woman is in future to wear two veils, so that she may suggest more and more the rainbow shrouded in a fine mist by her many colored garments veiled with transparent materials.

The fashion of the combination of colorings in veiling one over the other, which has become such a pronounced vogue in both evening and afternoon dresses, has spread to the veil itself.

Motor veils of different tints worn over each other to produce a shot effect lead the way to the same style of veiling for wear with the promenade hat.

Fair women are soon to be mysteriously hidden behind folds of mauve over blue, mole over pink, dark blues shading rose and pale blues.

A lining of pink under black lace or white has been recognized for a long time as very becoming.

It will require a decided artistic taste in the ordinary woman who chooses her veiling apart from her hat to know exactly what tones to blend and which will also suit her complexion.

"A combination of colors is the fashion for motor veils," a representative of a West end firm said, "and very fine gauzes and chiffons are sold for their construction.

"The several layers of veiling are effective as well as picturesque, as they protect the face from the dust better than a single veil.

"In the same way bright colored hats are covered tightly with a veil of chiffon, and many varieties of the veiled hat will be seen in the autumn modes."

STUDY SOUTH POLE WEATHER

Douglas Mawson of Sydney to Find Out Reasons for Australia's Queer Conditions.

Melbourne.—To find out why Australia has queer spasms of weather at times Douglas Mawson of Sydney plans to run an Australian expedition to the regions round the south pole. Not a dash to the pole itself, it should be borne in mind, but a long residence in Antarctic quarters to study the magnetic and meteorological conditions that reflect their influence on the climate experienced by those living under the Southern Cross.

The curse of Australian agriculturists is drought. Some summers all seems set for a banner harvest, when suddenly cyclonic depression shifts and the rains that would have been a boon are wasted on the ocean. Other times hurricanes sweep whole provinces, leaving a track of destruction such as the fringe of the Mexican gulf occasionally experiences. These conditions absent and the weather conditions remaining normal, Australia has bumper crops and record clips of wool; squatter millionaires are turned out by the back blocks and boom times set in for town and country.

THOUGHT "TEDDY" A TITLE

Chayenne Waitress Causes Former President to Laugh Heartily at Error.

Denver, Col.—While Colonel Roosevelt was in Cheyenne he stopped at the Inter Ocean hotel. His meals were served to him in his rooms, and as servitor he had a Swedish girl who had been in this country but a short time.

Whenever he asked the girl a question, she answered: "No, Teddy," or "Yes, Taddy," to the amusement of the colonel.

Her manner was so ingenuous, however, that he decided that she was innocent of intentional disrespect. Finally he made inquiries and the mystery was solved.

The girl thought that "Teddy" which she had heard so frequently, was "some sort of a title, such as king."

He laughed heartily when he heard the explanation.

Talking Motion Pictures.

New York.—With the announcement by Thomas A. Edison the other day that he has almost reached the solution of the problem of making moving pictures that talk, the future of the moving picture promises a revolution. Mr. Edison has obtained satisfactory results with a device for recording the words as well as the actions of actors and actresses.

Protect Lyre Bird.

Sydney.—So great has been the destruction wrought upon the beautiful lyre bird of Queensland that the state has protected the bird till the middle of 1915; a $25 penalty is attached to its capture, or injury, or taking its eggs. It is the extraordinary lyre-form development of the tail feathers which tempt the captor.

Uncle Called Odd and Even

Trough Dug in the Ground and a Contest in the Throwing of Stones.

Two boys may play this game with pebbles, peach stones, plum stones, nuts or acorns. Make a tiny trough in the ground about four inches wide and six inches deep, but as long as desired. Then the players in turn stand about six feet away from the trough. As each person takes his turn he picks up a handful of stones or whatever is being used for the game.

Each player uses from his own pile of 20 stones at the start of the game. The one to throw into the trough must not let the other player see how many stones he intends to use each time. The player not throwing must guess whether or not the one throwing will toss an odd or even number of stones into the trough.

If the guesser says "odd" just as the player starts to throw and an odd number goes into the trough the guesser takes all the stones which go in. If the guesser is wrong he gives to the thrower as many stones from his pile as went into the trough.

Before starting off the players agree on the number of throws each is to have. At the end of the game the person having the most stones or pebbles wins the game. The little children of Arabia like to play odd and even for they spend much of their time out in the sunshine and fresh air.

If ten players wish to take part in the game the long trough is marked off into five parts so two people may play at each section. At the end of the contest the two holding the most peach stones play each other to see who wins the final game. The peach stones won are always put back at the end of each game.

Tawney says the Democrats did it. Maybe they did a good job.

We'll bet Fred Stevens and Frank [illegible] aren't over the scare yet.

The primaries are over, and there are sore spots, of course. Lots of good men no longer come to the aid of the party.

Governor Eberhart has not reduced the tax rate lately. His recent efforts to help out the steel trust did not meet with the cordial approval of the farmers.

The straddler in politics stands no show. The voter insists that the candidate state his position on important questions of the hour. The voter at last realizes that the public official is only a hired man of the people.

That was a close fight for the Republican congressional nomination in the second district. Ellsworth wins by about 150 over Ward, the Fairmont millionaire. But Winfield Scott Hammond will run away with the bone in November.

The Republican orators will no longer point to the glorious victories from the "pine-clad hills of Maine to the orange groves of California." This will be obliged to start in at New Hampshire and end somewhere this side of the rockies, with sundry unpromising places between.

There are many reasons assigned for the defeat of Tawney, but the real one is his sponsorship of Cannon. Cannonism and Ballingerism and Aldrichism are words of reproach in Minnesota, and Jim Tawney was too close to this unpopular triumvirate. The standpat candidates on the Republican state ticket should take warning, for the avalanche is almost upon them.

Hon. W. J. Bryan has publicly announced that he will not support the candidate for governor on the Nebraska state ticket because of his stand for the liquor interests and against law and order. This position indicates, observes the Mapleton Enterprise, that Mr. Bryan is a man of character and that he would rather stand for principal than to remain a power in his party if he must give up his manhood to retain that power. Both Bryan and Roosevelt propose to use their efforts to relieve their respective parties from the influences which corrupt and prevent honest legislation.

This from the Adrian Democrat is good advice to the people of any town: "Pull together brethern. We are all hear for the same purpose. Then live and let live. The best way to build up a town is for each and every man to pull together and not strive to rend and tear down. All tho residents of a town are partners, not opponents. In all likelihood the more business done by your rival the more you will do. Every merchant who treats his customers honestly and fairly will get his sharo and the more business that can be secured by united effort, the better it will be far all."

One of the planks which was to have been in the platform of the late Clarence Dinehart, was one dealing with weights and measures, says the Mapleton Enterprise. We note his successor in office, State Treasurer Pettijohn also realizes the need of having the scales of the country inspected. Short weights have defrauded the people out of vast sums of money and in this era of high priced living those who have to buy should have what they pay for. Other officers of the state are of the opinion that the time is not far distant when eggs as well as many products sold by the bushel will be sold by weight entirely.

JAMES GRAY.

The only opposition to James Gray in the Democratic state central committee came from friends representing Mayor Haynes of Minneapolis. Mr. Gray didn't believe Mr. Haynes was as desirable a man for mayor as Mr. Jones, his Republican opponent. But the state central committee did not think that Mr. Gray's judgment in regard to a purely local matter should cut any figure in this case.

The committee was right about that. The theory that purely local affairs like city offices should be treated from the standpoint of national party politics is generally discarded nowadays. What a man's views are on national questions—the tariff, the navy, the Panama canal, conservation—has nothing to do with what his views are about police administration, the building of schoolhouses, making parks or constructing sewers.

More significant than that and of the first importance, perhaps, is the fact that Mr. Gray was the substitute tendered to the committee by Mr. Lind. Being unwilling to be a candidate himself, it was up to Mr. Lind to provide a substitute and relieve the party of its embarrassment as far as possible. In offering Mr. Gray he has undoubtedly made as wise a selection as could have been hit upon. Mr. Gray has qualifications that are not possessed by others of the candidates talked of. He is better known to the people of the state than any of them. He is favorably known, and he can make a good speech. While he may not be elected, and perhaps his supporters have slight expectation that he will be, he is a creditable candidate and will pull more votes in all probability than any other man who has been talked about since Mr. Lind's refusal to make the race.

FIRE PREVENTION.

Fire Marshall Edward Peterson has made his annual report to the governor in which he makes a number of recommendations, all of which sound reasonable and necessary if fire prevention is ever to be put on the right basis:

"1. The adoption of uniform building codes, such codes to contain regulations for electrical heating and lighting appliances.

"2. The adoption of regulations prohibiting the use and sale of those grades of matches to which so large a part of our fire waste is now due.

"3. To provide for the teaching for a few minutes every week in all our public schools on the simpler elements of fire dangers and fire prevention under a system similar to that now in use in the state of Ohio.

"4. To regulate and prohibit the necessary accumulation of waste and rubbish wherein so many fires are started and quickly spread beyond control.

"5. That the fire marshall law be so amended as to make it the principal duty of this department to inspect buildings and risks for the purpose of securing enforcement of all laws and regulations relating to fire dangers and fire prevention and to remedy any unnecessary exposures to fire dangers. To this end every city and village should have a local fire marshal who should also be a deputy state fire marshal serving without pay from the state except when under direct orders from the state fire marshal. Such local fire marshal should report all fires from his city or village to the state fire marshal, and he should be charged with the enforcement of all laws and ordinances regarding fires and fire prevention, and any failure to comply with any order of such local fire marshal should be immediately reported by him to the state fire marshal who should then have power to proceed with the enforcement of any law or local regulation relating to fire prevention thus violated. As it is a notorious fact that the laws and regulations on this subject are seldom enforced by the local authorities alone, the fire marshal department should be provided with sufficient means and assistants to efficiently carry out the line of work herein suggested together with added efficiency for the kind of investigations now conducted under the law."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Ortonville Herald-Star: There is still something new under the political heavens. A local aspirant has declined to be a candidate "at the earnest solicitation of friends."

Cannon Falls Beacon: While Mr. Hill is so explicitly denying that the federal government ever gave the Great Northern any land grants, let him come on across and tell how much land the state of Minnesota gave to the various lines that combined now constitute the Great Northern System and the approximate value of these lands.

Rochester Post and Record: A friend, in speaking of the ill-advised letter recently written by President Taft, in which he announces that he will receive the insurgents to the Republican party and treat them with the same consideration that he does the regulars, said that Mr. Taft must have providential aid, because no mortal man could make as many blunders in so short a time without the help of divine providence.

St. Cloud Times: Ex-Gov. John Lind has consented to make twenty speeches in the state during the present political campaign, and the committee has fixed upon St. Cloud for one of these addresses. While Mr. Lind would not accept the nomination, he is heart and soul in the contest, and will prove a tower of strength. Mr. Gray was his choice for governor and he intends to put forth every effort in support of his election.

men than themselves hard names. The day has arrived when in the main the voters of Minnesota have made up their minds to cast an independent ballot and send to the right-about the party hacks who, instead of giving the people honest service, are willing to be the subservient tools of the powerful interests who stand ready to finance their campaigns.

Keeping Quiet About it.

We have had an exhibition of that during the last week. Some years ago the Minnesota legislature, acting in harmonious co-operation with the policy outlined by Governor Johnson, passed a law reducing passenger rates to two cents a mile and decreasing and equalizing commodity rates at the same time. Although the law was passed as a result of an understanding with the representatives of the railroads who were willing to accept the schedule of rates which had been prepared, the bill had no sooner been presented to the legislature than the railroads repudiated the understanding which had been arrived at and later, through some convenient stockholders, instituted an action in the federal district court to enjoin the enforcement of the law subsequently passed.

A Radical Decision.

It is not necessary here to recite the phases which from time to time this action presented. The upshot of the matter was that a master in chancery was appointed to take evidence in the suit which had been brought and present his findings to the court for its approval. During the years which have elapsed a vast amount of testimony has been taken, the state has paid many thousands of dollars in attorney's fees, and ultimately a decision of the most extraordinary and revolutionary character has been reached by Judge Otis, the master in chancery.

Agrees With Railroads.

The judge has decided that the rates made by the legislature are so low as to be in their nature confiscatory. It should be stated that at the time these suits were instituted the railroad and warehouse commission had undertaken, under the supervision of an expert engineer, the physical valuation of the railroads of the state—what it would cost to produce them now. In order to arrive at this decision the judge rejected this valuation as too low and apparently accepted in the main the figures respecting valuation which the railroads had submitted in the testimony of their officials. According to a statement made by Attorney General Young, who conducted the case on behalf of the state:

"The master also found a valuation for the railroad property far above the valuation made by the state engineers, and decided that on the valuation found by him the rates were all confiscatory. The master designated exactly the amount of money invested in the properties and gave them a value in excess of all the valid and watered stocks and bonds issued by each."

The Governor's Deaf Ear.

One might have thought this decision a matter of sufficient importance to distract the governor's attention for a moment from the contemplation of pumpkin shows and to interrupt the chase for office which ever since his accidental elevation, has absorbed his energies. He does not appear to have thought it worthy even of a passing moment. Possibly the exigencies of the campaign make it inadvisable that anything should be said which might be regarded as cause of offense to those of his powerful supporters interested in the matter, and if he said anything they would approve the voters might not like it. This is the case in which it can readily be understood that silence is golden.

A Law Unto Themselves

But this part of the judge's decision, sweeping as it is, and forecasting an increase in both freight and passenger rates which no one, with the possible exception of an occasional master in chancery, believes the principal railroads operating in this state find unremunerative was far from being the most important part of the opinion. If his view is coincided in, in another the assumption that every state in the nation has acted upon that it has the right to regulate the rates charged by common carriers for service rendered entirely within the state will prove to be without legal warrant.

The Railroad Theory.

Those familiar with the suits to which I have referred will remember that at the time the two cent fare rate law went into affect the railroads protested that they could not exact a three cent fare over lines from Fargo for instance, if the rate from Moorhead was two cents a mile. In like manner if it would be unpracticable to charge Minnesota customers in the Red River Valley one rate on freight while they exacted from Dakota shippers across the line a higher rate. Predicated on this condition the theory was advanced by the railroad attorneys that no rate could be made in Minnesota on freight carried on an interstate road from one point within the state to another point within the state, if, in the view of the railroads and for their own purpose, they concluded it desirable to change the interstate rate.

The Law Laid Down.

This theory the judge has accepted. In his decision he lays down the rule that a rate cannot be ordered by state authority in Minnesota if as a result of that rate the rates the railroads charge to points outside of the state are affected. The rate in Minnesota may be never so reasonable if as a result of it rates are effected it constitutes inteference with interstate rates and the state authorities will be enjoined from enforcing it.

Different Law in Iowa.

It is to be remembered in this connection that the Minnesota law refers to Minnesota traffic only. The state legislature did not, of course, consider any incidental affects it might have. It is to be remembered also that it is practically impossible for a rate to be made in Minnesota which cannot be held to effect rates in adjacent territory. Further it may be borne in mind that there has for years been in affect in Iowa a distant tariff which must effect rates to points in this state and in other states which are contiguous to Iowa. What they have been doing in Iowa for years without protest and with the tacit consent of the federal authorities, if Judge Otis is right in his interpretation of the law, they may not do in Minnesota. A distance tariff law operative in Iowa would be enjoined in Minnesota, indeed, must be enjoined, by a court which accepts Judge Otis' view. One would think such a matter worthy of profoundest consideration by the governor of the state.

Awake to the Situation.

At all events Mr. Gray, who apparently hopes to be governor, thought it worthy of mentioning. Perhaps that is because he is a newspaper man and has a nose for news. He talked about it the other day at Northfield and he talked very straight. Evidently no one has yet succeeded in putting a gag in his mouth.

"If the railroads," he said, "are allowed to raise their interstate rates and the federal courts deny states the power to regulate rates at all, it must be apparent that the railroad problem is of pre-eminent importance, more so perhaps than ever before. For unless the people are awake to the situation they may discover presently that both interstate and domestic rates have been raised to such a level as to affect the prosperity of the country.

I do not believe that the people are going to lie down and concede that as citizens of the states they have no control over domestic corporations and institutions to which they have given existence, but will find some remedy." There is a rumor current the authority for which I have been unable to trace that the heirs of the lamented Joe Millar, a distinguished jokesmith of the early victorian era, are about to institute proceedings against Governor Eberhart on the charge he has appropriated certain of these progenitor's productions and is making use of them in addresses delivered at street fairs and other public gatherings. Those who have looked into the mater are inclined to make light of the claimant's pretensions, and declare that, even if such a suit were brought, the governor has an ample defense as most of his best stories ant date the Joe Miller period by at least half a century.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S. and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S. S. S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

THE NEW ERA SYSTEM PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

SPECIALISTS

Sending their free doctors to the principal cities of the United States.

Will be in Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Friday, October 14, 1910, at the Grand View Hotel from 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.

These doctors are licensed by the state for the cure of deformities and all nervous and chronic diseases of men, woman and children. They will give to all, who call, consultation, examination and advice, absolutely free, making no charge whatever, except the actual cost of medicine used in each individual case. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the results to their friends and thus prove to the sick and afflicted in every city and locality that at last treatments have been discovered that are absolutely sure and certain in their curative affects.

The experience of treating thousands of cases makes a physician able to cure diseases quicker than the ordinary doctor. The physician of experience and success is able to cure these chronic diseases that the ordinary physician can do nothing for. The physician of experienced success has his remedies at hand, those that are tested and tried and those he knows does not have to experiment with and knows that cure follows their uses as well as he knows that night follows day.

Few people realize the advantage of doctoring with special doctors. Not doctors that pretend to cure everything, but doctors that know how to cure the diseases they pretend to cure. An association of doctors where each and everyones' opinion is centered on the disease of an individual character is better than one opinion on the disease.

These physicians and surgeons are well known. They are one of the most sucessful combinations of physicians in the United States. They are the products of Modern Medical Science. They cure where others fail, and their skill is known throughout the civilized world. They want to prove that they can cure you and they want to prove it at their own cost and without a penny of expense to you, except what is necessary for such medicine as they may prescribe for you.

You may wonder why you have not been cured. It is easy to explain. Maybe your doctor never had a case which is like yours. Probably you have complications which baffle him so he keeps on guessing, hoping eventualy to strike the remedy which will help your trouble, and he is treating symptoms only, never getting at the root of the disease. Can you afford to be suffering while you are being experimented on? If you cannot then go to master physicians who treat more cases in one month than an ordinary doctor treats in a lifetime.

The master specialist knows how to treat you. He has treated others of the same disease. He is treating many of them now. No matter what your ailment may be, whether diseases of the lungs, asthma, bronchitis, catorrh, diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder, piles, rheumatism, gout, skin diseases, neuralgia, female diseases, epilepsy, appendicitis, goiter, eye and ear trouble or any chronic disease. Pin your faith on these specialists and you will be rewarded.

Cancer and tumor treated by the Hypodarmic Injection method, no pain, no loss of blood and no detention from business. Thousands cured, as their testimonials will show. Appendicitis and gall stones cured without operation.

Deafness often cured in sixty days.

was more gold in the soil than in all the known mines. James Gray then and there determined upon a college education, and the following September he was enrolled as a university student for a five-year course. He made the most of his opportunities, working his way through college and supporting himself by various kinds of employment. One summer he was a level-man on the Great Northern, another found him at hotel work, and one at Fergus Falls under Elmer E. Adams; during his college year he carried newspaper routes on the Pioneer Press and Tribune.

Stood High in College Work.

Throughout his course he maintained a standing above the average and excelled in oratory, taking first place in his junior year. He was twice connected with the Ariel, the college paper, and was president of his class; taking an active interest in sports, he was president of the athletic association and helped organize the first general field day. The climax of his college career was his speech of welcome on behalf of the students at the inauguration of President Cyrus Northrop.

In June, 1885, he was graduated with honor as the valedictorian of his class. Immediately on leaving the university James Gray went into newspaper work and has ever since been connected with Minneapolis newspapers excepting the two years' service as mayor of that city. At first he was engaged in general reporting, and later in executive and editorial positions, having been city editor of the Tribune, managing editor of the Times and associate editor of the Journal and had business experience in the advertising departments of the Times and Tribune—twenty-five years at the desk, varied only by a short vacation in the mayor's office.

Familiar With Public Affairs.

Mr. Gray's first work was on the Tribune, having the city hall and courthouse rune, which gave him familiarity with the people and a fund of information on public affairs and matters legal and historical, as well as a working knowledge of municipal government. At the time of the Republican national convention in 1892 he was so impressed with the dramatic and tragic, the total eclipse of the Plumed Knight, that he literally tore off a tremendous article on the downfall of Blaine, prefaced with the lines from Byron on Napoleon:

"'Tis done. But yesterday a King,
And armed with Kings to strive,
And now thou art a nameless thing—
So abject yet alive."

Reputation as a Correspondent.

When the article appeared great Eastern correspondents came in scores to see the rural genius who had beaten them all, and the New York Times man and others telegraphed the entire article to their papers. The reputation thus established was heightened by his correspondence from Washington at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war—able, eloquent and vigorous letters which attracted great attention.

During his term as mayor he won a number of triumphs for the people, one in refusing to sign a contract ordered by the city council for the purchase of coal because there was an evident combine between dealers; under Mayor Gray's orders wood and shavings were used as fuel at the water works until the trust surrendered.

Defeats Traction Company Plan.

Another victory of the people was the heading off of a scheme of the street railway company to charge a 15-cent fare between the Twin Cities; the Minneapolis council had granted this privilege by an ordinance. Mayor Gray vetoed the ordinance, which was passed over his veto, whereupon he secured the support of the Pioneer Press and the St. Paul city council and the scheme was defeated.

When the smallpox epidemic broke out, decisive and sweeping measures of Mayor Gray stamped out the plague; and another of his popular moves was his "I have—have you?" to bring home, in a style worthy of them, the boys of the Thirteenth regiment from San Francisco.

Strong Editorial Writer.

James Gray is known, and widely known, through his strong, fearless, characteristic editorials, which have a personality of their own so clearly marked that people commonly say, "That's Jim Gray's; I can always tell his articles." His serious articles are occasionally illumined by flashes of native humor. It is of the grave, serio-comic literary type. He is unconsciously humorous while he defends himself from the charge.

An important side of Mr. Gray's career is his public speaking, and he is perhaps more widely known in this capacity than any other; as an after-dinner speaker he has made a reputation that has become proverbial, and he has handled gridiron dinners with a zest, unction and brilliancy that have been pronounced incomparable by President Northrop and other well known men. The late Governor Johnson at one of these dinners said, "I have never heard, even at the Washington gridiron dinners, a feature that compared with it in originality of conception."

Connected With Church Work.

Mr. Gray has been prominently connected with church work in Minneapolis and has spoken from the pulpits of a score of churches of divers denomination, and his address in South Dakota on "The Layman's Age" has been widely quoted.

Now, as to the man—and, after all, that is the important thing: Mr. Gray is a man of unbounded popularity, genial, and always ready with an apt reply. He likes people, and is therefore generally liked; he is what men call "a good fellow," and women, "a splendid man," while politicians style him "a good mixer."

Mr. Gray's Home Life.

Mr. Gray was married in 1893 to Miss Grace Farrington, associate editor of the Times. At Linden Hills, where they have resided for over half a score of years, "Jim" Gray is a sort of landmark. They have four children. You may see him any summer evening with a baby on one arm and a pail on the other, bound for a nearby pump; or in his backyard playing tennis with his daughters or baseball with the small boys of the neighborhood, or, if nothing better offers, mowing the lawn.

To sum up, James Gray is one of the people and a self-made man. He has a natural taste for public affairs, an exceptional knowledge of the state and its needs. His pre-eminent characteristics are common sense, even balance, good judgment and caution. Above all he is a man of good principles and a kind heart.

PERRAULT STATION.

(Intended for last week.)

Last Monday noon the Northern Pacific southbound train set a fire about half a mile from the station. The fire burned a couple of hay stacks, hay rake and culvert. The fire was put out by the aid of two section crews and a few farmers with their plows. If the fire had not been stopped quickly it would have burned several hundred dollars worth of hay and buildings.

Master Thomas Ducharme, son of Moses Ducharme, broke one of his legs while at play at school. Dr. J. C. Wilkinson set the fractured leg.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

It Went Off, Right Through the Door.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants desert. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found. A ladder out of place deepens the mystery.

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued.

Apparently only a few minutes elapsed, during which my eyes were becoming accustomed to the darkness. Then I noticed that the windows were reflecting a faint pinkish light; Liddy noticed it at the same time, and I heard her jump up. At that moment Sam's deep voice boomed from somewhere just below.

"Fire!" he yelled. "The stable's on fire!"

I could see him in the glare dancing up and down on the drive, and a moment later Halsey joined him. Alex was awake and running down the stairs, and in five minutes from the time the fire was discovered three of the maids were sitting on their trunks in the drive, although, excepting a few sparks, there was no fire nearer than 100 yards.

Gertrude seldom loses her presence of mind, and she ran to the telephone. But by the time the Casanova volunteer fire department came toiling up the hill the stable was a furnace, with the Dragon Fly safe but blistered, in the road. Some gasoline exploded just as the volunteer department got to work, which shook their nerves as well as the burning building. The stable, being on a hill, was a torch to attract the population from every direction.

The stable was off the west wing. I hardly know how I came to think of the circular staircase and the unguarded door at its foot. Liddy was putting my clothes into sheets, preparatory to tossing them out the window, when I found her, and I could hardly persuade her to stop.

"I want you to come with me, Liddy," I said. "Bring a candle and a couple of blankets."

She lagged behind considerably when she saw me making for the east wing, and at the top of the staircase she balked.

"I am not going down there," she said firmly.

"There is no one guarding the door down there," I explained. "Who knows?—this may be a scheme to draw everybody away from this end of the house, and let some one in here."

The instant I had said it I was convinced I had hit on the explanation, and that perhaps it was already too late. It seemed to me as I listened that I heard stealthy footsteps on the east porch, but there was so much shouting outside that it was impossible to tell. Liddy was on the point of retreat.

"Very well," I said, "then I shall go down alone. Run back to Mr. Halsey's room and get his revolver. Don't shoot down the stairs if you hear a noise; remember—I shall be down there. And hurry."

I put the candle on the floor at the top of the staircase and took off my bedroom slippers. Then I crept down the stairs, going very slowly, and listening with all my ears. Just at the foot of the stairs I stubbed my toe against Halsey's big chair, and had to stand on one foot in a soundless agony until the pain subsided to a dull ache. And then—I knew I was right. Some one had put a key into the lock, and was turning it. For some reason it refused to work, and the key was withdrawn. There was a muttering of voices outside; I had only a second. Another trial, and the door would open. The candle above made a faint gleam down the well-like staircase, and at that moment, with a second, no more, to spare, I thought of a plan.

The heavy oak chair almost filled the space between the newel post and the door. With a crash I had turned it on its side, wedging it against the door, its legs against the stairs. I could hear a faint scream from Liddy at the crash and then she came down the stairs on a run, with the revolver held straight out in front of her.

"Thank God," she said, in a shaking voice. "I thought it was you."

I pointed to the door, and she understood.

"Call out of the windows at the other end of the house," I whispered. "Run. Tell them not to wait for anything."

She went up the stairs at that, two at a time. Evidently she collided with the candle, for it went out, and I was left in darkness.

I was really astonishingly cool. I remember stepping over the chair and gluing my ear to the door, and I shall never forget feeling it give an inch or two there in the darkness, under a steady pressure from without. But the chair held, although I could hear an ominous cracking of one of the legs. And then, without the slightest warning, the cardroom window broke with a crash. I had my finger on the trigger of the revolver, and as I jumped it went off, right through the door. Some one outside swore roundly, and for the first time I could hear what was said.

"Only a scratch. . . . Men are at the other end of the house. . . . Have the whole rat's nest on us." And a lot of profanity which I won't write down. The voices were at the broken window now, and although I was trembling violently, I was determined that I would hold them until help came. I moved up the stairs until I could see into the cardroom, or rather through it, to the window. As I looked a small man put his leg over the sill and stepped into the room. The curtain confused him for a moment; then he turned, not toward me, but toward the billiard room door. I fired again, and something that was glass or china crashed to the ground. Then I ran up the stairs and along the corridor to the main staircase. Gertrude was standing there, trying to locate the shots, and I must have been a peculiar figure, with my hair in crimps, my dressing-gown flying, no slippers, and a revolver clutched in my hand. I had no time to talk. There was the sound of footsteps in the lower hall, and some one bounded up the stairs.

I had gone Berserk, I think. I leaned over the stair-rail and fired again. Halsey, below, yelled at me.

"What are you doing up there?" he yelled. "You missed me by an inch."

And then I collapsed and fainted. When I came around Liddy was rubbing my temples with eau de quinine, and the search was in full blast.

Well, the man was gone. The stable burned to the ground, while the crowd cheered at every falling rafter, and the volunteer fire department sprayed it with a garden hose. And in the house Alex and Halsey searched every corner of the lower floor, finding no one.

The truth of my story was shown by the broken window and the overturned chair. That the unknown had got upstairs was almost impossible. He had not used the main staircase, there was no way to the upper floor in the east wing, and Liddy had been at the window, in the west wing, where the servants' stair went up. But we did not go to bed at all. Sam Bohannon and Warner helped in the search, and not a closet escaped scrutiny. Even the cellars were given a thorough overhauling, without result. The door in the east entry had a hole through it where my bullet had gone. The hole slanted downward, and the bullet was embedded in the porch. Some reddish stains showed it had done execution.

"Somebody will walk lame," Halsey said, when he had marked the course of the bullet. "It's too low to have hit anything but a leg or foot."

From that time on I watched every person I met for a limp, and to this day the man who halts in his walk is an object of suspicion to me. But Casanova had no lame men; the nearest approach to it was an old fellow who tended the safety gates at the railroad, and he, I learned on inquiry, had two artificial legs. Our man had gone, and the large and expensive stable at Sunnyside was a heap of smoking rafters and charred boards. Warner swore the fire was incendiary, and in view of the attempt to enter the house, there seemed to be no doubt of it.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Flinders.

If Halsey had only taken me fully into his confidence through the whole affair it would have been much simpler. If he had been altogether frank about Jack Bailey, and if the day after the fire he had told me what he suspected, there would have been no harrowing period for all of us, with the boy in danger. But young people refuse to profit by the experience of their elders, and sometimes the elders are the ones to suffer.

I was much used up the day after the fire, and Gertrude insisted on my going out. The machine was temporarily out of commission, and the carriage horses had been sent to a farm for the summer. Gertrude finally got a trap from the Casanova liveryman, and we went out. Just as we turned from the drive into the road we passed a woman. She had put down a small valise, and stood inspecting the house and grounds minutely. I should hardly have noticed her had it not been for the fact that she had been horribly disfigured by smallpox.

"Ugh!" Gertrude said, when we had passed, "what a face! I shall dream of it to-night. Get up, Flinders."

"Flinders?" I asked. "Is that the horse's name?"

"It is." She flicked the horse's stubby mane with the whip. "He didn't look like a livery horse, and the liveryman said he had bought him from the Armstrongs when they purchased a couple of motors and cut down the stable. Nice Flinders—good old boy!"

Flinders was certainly not a common name for a horse, and yet the youngster at Richfield had named his prancing, curly-haired little horse Flinders! It set me to thinking.

At my request Halsey had already sent word of the fire to the agent from whom we had secured the house. Also, he had called Mr. Jamieson by telephone, and somewhat guardedly had told him of the previous night's events. Mr. Jamieson promised to come out that night, and to bring another man with him. I did not consider it necessary to notify Mrs. Armstrong, in the village. No doubt she knew of the fire, and in view of my refusal to give up the house on interview would probably have been unpleasant enough. But as we passed Dr. Walker's white and green house I thought of something.

"Stop here, Gertrude," I said. "I am going to get out."

"To see Louise?" she asked.

"No, I want to ask this young Walker something."

She was curious, I knew, but I did not wait to explain. I went up the walk to the house, where a brass sign at the side announced the office, and went in. The reception room was empty, but from the consultation room beyond came the sound of two voices, not very amicable.

"It is an outrageous figure," some one was storming. Then the doctor's quiet tone, evidently not arguing, merely stating something. But I had not time to listen to some person probably disputing his bill, so I coughed. The voices ceased at once; a door closed somewhere, and the doctor entered from the hall of the house. He looked sufficiently surprised at seeing me.

"Good afternoon, doctor," I said formally. "I shall not keep you from your patient. I wish merely to ask a question."

"Won't you sit down?"

"It will not be necessary. Doctor, has any one come to you, either early this morning or to-day, to have you treat a bullet wound?"

"Nothing so startling has happened to me," he said. "A bullet wound! Things must be lively at Sunnyside."

"I didn't say it was at Sunnyside. But as it happens, it was. If any such case comes to you, will it be too much trouble for you to let me know?"

"I shall be only too happy," he said. "I understand you have had a fire up there, too. A fire and shooting in one night is rather lively for a quiet place like that."

"It is as quiet as a boiler-shop," I replied, as I turned to go.

"And you are still going to stay?"

"Until I am burned out," I responded. And then, on my way down the steps, I turned around suddenly.

"Doctor," I asked at a venture, "have you ever heard of a child named Lucien Wallace?"

Clever as he was, his face changed and stiffened. He was on his guard again in a moment.

"Lucien Wallace?" he repeated. "No, I think not. There are plenty of Wallaces around, but I don't know any Lucien."

I was as certain as possible that he did. People do not lie readily to me, and this man lied beyond a doubt. But there was nothing to be gained now; his defenses were up, and I left, half irritated and wholly baffled.

Our reception was entirely different at Dr. Stewart's. Taken into the bosom of the family at once, Flinders tied outside and nibbling the grass at the roadside, Gertrude and I drank some home-made elderberry wine and told briefly of the fire. Of the more serious part of the night's experience, of course, we said nothing. But when at last we had left the family on the porch and the good doctor was untying our steed, I asked him the same question I had put to Dr. Walker.

"Shot!" he said. "Bless my soul, no. Why, what have you been doing up at the big house, Miss Innes?"

"Some one tried to enter the house during the fire, and was shot and slightly injured," I said hastily. "Please don't mention it; we wish to make as little of it as possible."

There was one other possibility, and we tried that. At Casanova station I saw the station master, and asked him if any trains left Casanova between one o'clock and daylight. There was none until 6 a. m. The next question required more diplomacy.

"Did you notice on the six o'clock train any person—any man—who limped a little?" I asked. "Please try to remember; we are trying to trace a man who was seen loitering around Sunnyside last night before the fire."

He was all attention in a moment.

"I was up there myself at the fire," he said volubly. "I'm a member of the volunteer company. First big fire we've had since the summer house burned over to the club golf links. My wife was sayin' the other day, 'Dave, you might as well 'n' saved the money in that there helmet and shirt.' And here last night they came in handy. Rang that bell so hard I hadn't time scarcely to get 'em on."

"And—did you see a man who limped?" Gertrude put in, as he stopped for breath.

"Not at the train, ma'm," he said. "No such person got on here to-day. But I'll tell you where I did see a man that limped. I didn't wait till the company left; there's a fast freight goes through at 4:45, and I had to get down to the station. I seen there wasn't much more to do anyhow at the fire—we'd got the flames under control"—Gertrude looked at me and smiled—"so I started down the hill. There was folk here and there goin' home, and along by the path to the Country club I seen two men. One was a short fellow. He was sitting on a big rock, his back to me, and he had something white in his hand, as if he was tying up his foot. After I'd gone on a piece I looked back, and he was hobbling on and—excuse me, miss—he was swearing something sickening."

Durability of Concrete.

In the orange garden of the old Capucian monastery, on a hillside about three hundred feet above the Gulf of Amalfi, Italy, there are a number of queer mushroom-shaped tables. These tables, apparently used by the monks for reading purposes, are about two and a half feet high and three feet in diameter at the top and two feet at the base. They are of concrete, and, though, according to local authorities, of an age varying from four hundred to eight hundred years, are in an excellent state of preservation. The excellent condition of these old tables furnishes additional proof of the durability of concrete as applied to lawn and garden ornaments.

Would Make Mother Peevish.

"Your boy is perfectly healthy and happy," said the eminent surgeon. "The trouble with him is that the nerve centers of his brain are atrophied, or perhaps I should say undeveloped, so that he is slow to receive the impressions of his senses. Time may bring about an improvement in his case, but as to that I cannot promise. He is young yet—"

"But, doctor," interrupted the man, "I've read of such things as transplanting a sheep's vein into a human organism with perfect success. Don't you think a sheep's brain might be transferred into the boy's—but that wouldn't do, I suppose—I know his mother would make an awful fuss about it."

Trade in Chinese Girls.

At Chaotong, a city of some 40,000 souls, I was told that one of the briskest directions of local trade was the selling of female children into slavery, and at the time I passed through prices were fairly high, a girl who could boast good looks fetching the alarming figure of 300 taels— this was the highest figure reached—while small children could be had for anything up to 20.

This wholesale disposal of young girls, although the traffic in some quarters was emphatically denied to exist, is one of the chief sorrows of the district. And well it might be, for thousands of children are annually disposed of for a few taels by heartless parents who watch them being carried away as so much merchandise to be converted into silver.

A Bad Memory.

Hervey Worthington Loomis once went abroad to study music.

He was a young man, and when, after two weeks' voyage, he landed in France, he was very homesick. He stood it for two days and then booked his passage on the same ship and returned to America.

When he rang the bell at his home in Brooklyn, his sister opened the door.

"Why, Harvey" she exclaimed, "What is the matter?"

"Oh," he replied innocently, "I forgot my toothbrush."—Success Magazine.

BEE CULTURE PROFITABLE INDUSTRY WHEN UNDERSTOOD

Means of Obtaining for Human Use Natural Product Which Would Otherwise Be Lost to Us—Extremely Fascinating Pastime.

(By E. F. PHILLIPS, Ph. D.)

Bee keeping for pleasure and profit is carried on by many thousands of people in all parts of the United States. As a rule, it is not the sole occupation. There are, however, many pieces where an experienced bee keeper can make a good living by devoting his entire time and attention to this line of work. It should be emphasized that it is unwise for the average individual to undertake extensive bee keeping without considerable previous experience on a small scale, since there are so many minor details which go to make up success in the work. These must be thoroughly understood before there is any hope for continued success. It is, therefore, most desirable to begin on a small scale, make the bees pay for themselves and for all additional apparatus, as well as some profit, and gradually to increase as far as the local conditions or the desires of the individual permit.

Smoker.

A Well-Arranged Apiary.

The annual production of honey and wax in the United States makes agriculture a profitable minor industry of the country. From its very nature it can never become one of the leading agricultural pursuits, but that there is abundant opportunity for its growth cannot be doubted. Not only is the honey bee valuable as a producer, but it is also one of the most beneficial of insects in cross-pollinating the flowers of various economic plants.

Bee keeping is also extremely fascinating to the majority of people as a pastime, furnishing outdoor exercise as well as intimacy with an insect whose activity has been a subject of absorbing study from the earliest times. It has the advantage of being a recreation which pays its own way and often produces no mean profit.

It is a mistake, however, to paint only the bright side of the picture and leave it to the new bee keeper to discover that there is often another side. When any financial profit is derived, bee keeping require hard work and work at just the proper time, otherwise the surplus of honey may be diminished or lost. Few lines of work requires more study to insure success. In years when available nectar is limited, surplus honey is secured only by judicious manipulations and it is only through considerable experience and often by expensive reverses that the bee keeper is able to manipulate properly to save his crop. Anyone can produce honey in seasons of plenty, but those do not come every year in most locations, and it takes a good bee keeper to make the most of poor years. When, even with the best of manipulations, the crop is a failure through lack of nectar, the bees must be fed to keep them from starvation.

The average annual honey yield per colony for the entire country, under good management, will probably be 25 to 30 pounds of comb honey or 40 to 50 pounds of extracted honey. The money return to be obtained from the crop depends entirely on the market and the method of selling the honey. If sold direct to the consumer, extracted honey brings from 10 to 20 cents per pound, and comb honey from 15 to 25 cents per section. If sold to dealers, the price varies from six to ten cents for extracted honey and from 10 to 15 cents for comb honey. All of these estimates depend largely on the quality and neatness of the product. From the gross return must be deducted from fifty cents to one dollar per colony for expenses other than labor, including foundation sections, occasional new frames and hives and other incidentals—not, however, providing for increase.

Above all it should be emphasized that the only way to make bee keeping a profitable business is to produce only a first-class article. Too many bee keepers, in fact the majority, pay too little attention to making their goods attractive. They should recognize the fact that of two jars of honey, one in an ordinary fruit jar or tin can with poorly printed label, and the other in a neat glass jar of artistic design with a pleasing, attractive label, the latter will bring double or more the extra cost of the better package. It is perhaps unfortunate, but nevertheless a fact that honey sells largely on appearance, and a progressive bee keeper will appeal as strongly as possible to the eye of his customer.

Bee Veil With Silk Tulle Front.

Feed for Dairy Cows.

In the production of feed for dairy cows the silo has played an important part in a few instances and it will in the near future play a much more important part in the cheap production of milk. Many of the ordinary dairy farmers, having read of the expensive silos constructed in the early days, where a solid wall 20 to 30 feet in height or depth had been considered necessary, felt that they were not prepared to financially undergo that expense, although there might appear a profit in the feeding of the forage in that manner.

Cleaning Cows.

Cleaning the cow with card and brush daily is good practise and almost essential to good dairying, not only for the sake of its effect upon the cow and her yield, but because of its advantage to the quality of the milk during the process of manufacture. It should therefore be a part of the practise in every well-managed dairy, but it is not a substitute for good practise in other respects, and a cow's yield cannot be doubled by carding and brushing alone.

GOOD ROADS MEAN PROFITS

Improved Highways Permits Farmer to Carry Much Larger Loads to Market With Ordinary Team of Horses.

(By HOWARD H. GROSS.)

A Pittsburg paper has the following item:

"H. E. Beasley, living three miles east of Pittsburg, has sold about 3,000 bushels of corn within the past ten days to the Pittsburg Elevator company, receiving 59 and 60 cents therefor. This is not only a good deed on the part of the farmer, but there is another thing in connection therewith. In delivering this corn Mr. Beasley is able to haul from 60 to 70 bushels at a load upon a wagon with an ordinary team, there being a good gravel road from Pittsburg to his farm. Farmers from other directions where the good roads movement has not been prolific of results, haul from 25 to 50 bushels to the load."

This is in no sense an exceptional instance. A farmer in the corn belt of Illinois told the writer:

"I had 6,000 bushels of corn to market and at one time I could have sold for 62 cents, if I could have delivered it, but I could not. Later I sold for 60 cents. With good roads I could have had the top price, and I would have saved as much more by being able to haul larger loads. I figure that I would have been at least four cents per bushel better off if I had had a good hard road instead of a soft mud road to use. With 50 bushels to the acre the lose was two dollars per acre for that one crop."

With good roads a more diversified crop can be raised; the area of market gardening, which is very profitable, is more than doubled by good, permanent highways. This gives the farmers increased opportunity and the city people a better market in which to purchase supplies. Good roads are the best investment any community can make.

Work of the Crow.

It is claimed that the average crow destroyed 700,000 insects a year.

Pierp's Appetite

J. P. Morgan, Sr., was always a good trencherman in his youth and he has as good an appetite today as he ever had, not only for corned beef and cabbage—his favorite dish—but for other foods. If the Morgan, who dazzled the Teutons with his mathematics when he was a German university post-graduate student, had accepted the chair of mathematics offered to him by Heidelberg, instead of his Yankee corned beef and cabbage it might have been frankfurters and sauerkraut.—New York Press.

Mrs. M. A. Jinkins, Quenah, Texas, says: "I was bloated almost twice natural size. I had the best physicians but they all failed to help me. For five weeks I was as helpless as a baby. At this critical time, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and soon felt relief. I continued and was cured."

Maud—No, you see they're one now, and it takes two to make a quarrel.

She Took No Chances.

A happily-wedded matron is the principal of an odd incident, which one of her "dear" friends relates.

Before the matron's engagement to her present husband was announced, she met her "dear" friend on the street. The new matron was hurrying toward one of the large jewelry stores of the city.

"John gave me an engagement ring," she explained, without a shadow of embarrassment, "and I am going down to see how much it cost. You see, I got the jeweler's name off the box," and she hurried on.

The same friend said that another bit of information the matron got was the commercial standing of the prospective husband, which she secured by paying for a special report from a commercial agency.

PUZZLED

Hard Work, Sometimes, to Raise Children.

Children's taste is ofttimes more accurate, in selecting the right kind of food to fit the body, than that of adults. Nature works more accurately through the children.

A Brooklyn lady says: "Our little boy had long been troubled with weak digestion. We could never persuade him to take more than one taste of any kind of cereal food. He was a weak little chap and we were puzzled to know what to feed him on.

"One lucky day we tried Grape-Nuts. Well, you never saw a child eat with such a relish, and it did me good to see him. From that day on it seemed as though we could almost see him grow. He would eat Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I think he would have liked the food for dinner.

"The difference in his appearance is something wonderful.

"My husband had never fancied cereal foods of any kind, but he became very fond of Grape-Nuts and has been much improved in health since using it.

"We are now a healthy family, and naturally believe in Grape-Nuts.

"A friend has two children who were formerly afflicted with rickets. I was satisfied that the disease was caused by lack of proper nourishment. They showed it. So I urged her to use Grape-Nuts as an experiment and the result was almost magical.

"They continued the food and today both children are well and strong as any children in this city, and, of course, my friend is a firm believer in Grape-Nuts for she has the evidence before her eyes every day."

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others."—Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The KITCHEN CABINET

This learned I from the shadow of a tree,
That to and fro did sway upon the wall,
Our shadow selves, our influence, may fall
Where we can never be.

Summer Breakfasts.

To most housewives the first meal of the day is the one most difficult to prepare. Start the day right with a good breakfast, and we are at peace with the world and one's self, at least until the next meal.

Many a case of indigestion and bad temper may be followed back to a poorly planned and worse cooked meal. Our food has much to do with our dispositions. At no season of the year is fruit more plentiful or more of a necessity than during the warm months.

Blackberries, blueberries, plums, pears and apples are abundant this season and offer a pleasing variety.

For the cereal course have at least five varieties. It will be an easy matter to have a different one for every day in summer.

If a cooked cereal is used it is worth noting that a cereal is either made or marred by salt. Too much spoils it, too little makes it flat, and no amount of salt added will season it as if it were cooked in it. Cream is another necessity. If you cannot have cream, give up having the cereal.

No matter how great the heat, hot breads are always popular. Light puffy rolls are not easy to have unless the housewife is willing to rise at a very early hour. Popovers are a choice hot bread and with a little practise easily made. The oven heat is the important thing in making popovers. Here is a good recipe for them: Take one cupful of flour and half a teaspoonful of salt. Pour over this very slowly one cupful of milk, beating well until smooth, then add the beaten yolk of two eggs and lastly the whites beaten to a stiff broth. Bake in hot gem pans thirty minutes.

Graham muffins and corn cake are other well-liked breakfast breads. For the substantial course there may be fresh fish or hash of the meat of the day before. Croquettes are excellent and omelets of different kinds are also good. Veal or chicken finely minced and well seasoned is delicious served on a thin slice of buttered toast and a poached egg on top. These are but a few suggestions as to what may be used for summer breakfasts.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,

—John Vance Cheney.

Peach Time.

When peaches are ripe, the matter of suitable desserts becomes a very simple one for peaches are of all fruits most delicious. There are hundreds of ways in which the peach may be served either cooked or in its natural state. A dainty way to bake them is to pare them thinly and cut off a small piece of the top through which the pit may be removed with a spoon and a nutpick. This leaves the peach whole. Fill the cavity with sugar after placing in a baking dish, cover the bottom of the dish with water, cover and bake in a slow oven. When cooked in this way peaches become transparent. Serve either warm or cold with whipped cream. Many prefer to bake the peaches with the pit left in them as they give a flavor liked by many.

For old-fashioned peach tart, make a crust for a deep pie plate and bake. Fill the crust with sliced peaches and sprinkle with powdered sugar, cover with whipped cream, chill and serve. A dessert that is both attractive and appetizing.

Tapioca pudding with peaches makes a delicious dessert. Serve with cream and sugar.

A pudding liked especially by the children is made by pouring a batter over sliced peaches and bake; serve hot with cream and sugar.

Baked Peaches.

Another way of serving baked peaches: Peel and cut in halves six peaches, remove the stones and place in a shallow pan. Fill each cavity with a teaspoonful of sugar, one-half a teaspoonful of butter, a few drops of lemon juice, and a slight grating of nutmeg. Bake 20 minutes.

Peach cake is a delicious dessert and one not common. Bake an angel food in two layers, use sliced sweetened peaches for the filling, and serve with a thick layer of whipped cream.

Lemon Sirup.

From six well scrubbed grate the yellow rind, pour over this a pint of water and steep an hour, then drain. To a cup of sugar add a pint of water, cook for ten minutes, add the juice of the lemons and the water in which the rind was steeped and bring to the boiling point. Put away in the ice box and use a few teaspoonfuls of the sirup in a glass of water. More sugar may be added if needed.

Be prompt at meals,
And don't find fault;
Let wit provide
Both spice and salt;
Smile at mistakes,
And overlook
Some of the blunders
Of the cook.

Hot Weather Hints.

All the energies are exercised to endure the heat and the enervating atmosphere while performing household tasks during the summer. Dress comfortably and rise early to do the bulk of the work that has to be done each day before the heat of the day.

The simplest style of living comformable to health and comfort, should be the aim.

Bread may be mixed at night and kneaded the first thing in the morning and then baked before nine o'clock. Soups and vegetables may be cooked early, salads and desserts prepared and with a gasoline, gas or oil stove the meal may be easily prepared. A fireless cooker is an invaluable aid to the busy housekeeper as the dinner may be started in the cool of the day and put in the cooker to still cook without fire or attention.

Avoid entirely cold meals in hot weather, if the meal is to be cold have a hot drink of some kind or with a hot meal, serve a cold drink.

Care and planning will do much to lessen the fatigue and shorten the hours of labor. There are some things that must be done, each housekeeper being a law unto herself. For some it is neither convenient or economical to buy prepared food, for those the baking and cooking must be done in the home.

The flour and lard or butter for pastry may be prepared in sufficient quantity to last for several days and kept in the icebox to be used when needed. It is even better than when freshly prepared as the cold mixture makes a flakier crust.

The washing, ironing and cleaning may be done early if planned for and the lighter work be left for the hot part of the day.

Work is good for us and those who sit around panting with the heat, doing nothing but talk of the weather and their sufferings are much more uncomfortable than those who are busy and have the mind well occupied. This has been proved over and over again. A busy worker has no time for worry about the weather or other things beyond control.

Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep, and you weep alone,
For this grave old earth has need of mirth;
It has sorrows enough of its own.

Canning Hints.

Put a silver knife in the empty fruit jar before turning in the hot fruit and you will not have a cracked jar.

Let the air bubbles up by thrusting a fork or knife down the inside of a jar filled with fruit before sealing it.

After the rubber and lid are adjusted screw the lid down as tight as possible, then with the back of a knife tap the edge of the lid firmly down on the rubber, this will prevent it from leaking.

To Can Green Corn.

Corn that is as fresh as if just taken from the cob may be canned now.

Take nine cupfuls of corn freshly cut from the cob, a cupful each of sugar and water and a half cupful of salt. Stir until the salt and sugar is well dissolved, then can without cooking in air-tight cans. Freshen awhile before using.

Old-Fashioned Home Remedies.

For toothache dampen a small piece of cotton with oil of cloves and put in the cavity of the tooth.

For pain in the chest or headache with a cold, apply camphorated oil with rubbing, then cover with a cloth.

For sprains, mosquito bites and heat rash, apply witchhazel.

For chronic indigestion add one-half an ounce of lime water to a pint of boiled water, take a tablespoonful at a time for relief.

For sour stomach take a teaspoonful of soda in a glass of water and sip slowly before meals.

Green Tomato Lemon Meringue Pie.

Line a dish with good pie crust, fill two-thirds full with alternate layers of green tomatoes and lemon, sprinkling each with sugar. The rind, both white and yellow must be removed from the lemon and the seeds carefully taken out. Let the top layer be of tomatoes. Bake and then cover with a meringue.

Sunshine Cake.

Cream one cupful of butter, add three cupfuls of sugar and the well-beaten yolks of ten eggs. Add one cupful of milk alternately with five cupfuls of flour that have been sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder four times. Flavor with almond and bake in a broad shallow pan.

THE OUTCAST GYPSY

Now the Modern Ishmael Among Civilized Nations.

England and the United States Now Turned Against Them—Efforts to Induce Them to Settle Down Unavailing.

Washington.—Everywhere throughout the civilized world the hand of mankind seems to be raised against the gypsies. The last two refuges to which they betook themselves—the United States and England—have set their faces against them. Hereafter in England they are to be treated like common vagrants, without visible means of support, while in the United States the immigration laws serve to debar them as idle and dangerous nomads.

France decided some years ago that the gypsy was a public menace and, in the summary fashion of the republic when it makes up its mind to a thing, expelled him as relentlessly as it has expelled the monks.

Germany, which is a grim manufacturing establishment, after all, simply ordered its thousands of sentinels along its bayoneted border to turn back every gypsy who showed his nose at the line.

Wrathful and perplexed, the Romany moved on to Belgium; but hostile bayonets met them there. Desperate, for they hate water like so many wildcats, they took to the canals of placid Holland. But the phlegmatic Dutchmen, every tradition of their plodding industry outraged at sight of the gay wanderers, drove them out again.

Meanwhile, the Balkans, where the gypsy has ever roamed as free as any other bird of prey, have begun to feel the call of settled prosperity—if Balkan politics will ever give agriculture its chance—that attends the lowing kine and the importation of American reapers and binders. Sheep stealers and horse swindlers are impressing the fiery-souled mountaineers less than they used to, and the bars are being steadily raised against the gypsy, on the ground that he is a common tramp, who contributes nothing to the country and deserves nothing from it.

Transylvania, time out of mind, has been the gypsy's native heath. The hills and caves let him live the life of the early troglodyte, and the industrious among the population afforded him sustenance. But all Romany can't subsist on the loot of Transylvania, and Hungary and Austria received the first overflow.

American Type of Gypsy Woman.

Maria Theresa a hundred and fifty years ago had a brilliant idea for squelching the dangerous nomads. She provided doweries for all gypsy maidens who would marry her Austrian subjects. It was the most popular move any empress ever made, especially with the gypsy maidens. They applied for the dowries in beautiful, bridal droves; got them; and ran off with their gypsy husbands and lovers day after day, until Maria Theresa concluded that gypsy maidens were likely to prove unprofitable investments.

Emperor Joseph II. thought he had them fixed forever when he gave them houses and lands, seed, grain and farming implements. The seeds were promptly eaten; the houses became horse stables; the implements were sold, and the owners moved on.

There are believed to be 300,000 of them in Austria and Hungary still; 100,000 in Turkey; 150,000 in Russia; 200,000 in Spain and Portugal; 50,000 in Italy; 10,000 in the United States, and several thousand in South America, to whose broad pampas and rich plantations their nomad fancy has been turning for some years past. In all, the whole race of gypsies, as known to the white nations, numbers fewer than a million; and the whole mass of them is forever moving on.

The great traveler and ethnologist, Sir Richard Burton, whose translation of the Arabian Nights has immortalized him, is one of the few genuinely scientific men who have studied the origins of the gypsies in a genuinely scientific manner. He does not condemn them utterly, and is at pains to note that the race has, at times, produced men of real distinction. He quotes the families of the Hungerian Hunyadis, the Russian Tolstoys, the Scotch Melvilles, the Casellis and the Contis in France under Louis XIV., and the famous gypsy chief, Thomas Pulgar, who, in 1496, gave Bishop Sigismund the help he needed to beat back the Turkish invader from Europe.

Denmark's Ancient Flag.

Copenhagen.—The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner bearing on it a white cross, is the eldest flag now in existence. For 300 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag.

In the year 1219 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw or thought he saw a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of divine aid and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country and called it the Daanebrog, that is, the strength of Denmark.

Saucy Soldier Shut Her Up.

Col. Robert C. Carter at a Nashville banquet was talking about campaign comrades.

"Then there was Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest tongued man in the regiment.

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress.

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away.

"'No,' she said, 'I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this; I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up.'

"'Made up, is it?' said Dash. 'Like the rest of you, eh?'"

Beware the Dog!

A family moved from the city to a suburban locality and were told that they should get a watchdog to guard the premises at night. So they bought the largest dog that was for sale in the kennels of a neighboring dog fancier, who was a German. Shortly afterward the house was entered by burglars, who made a good haul, while the big dog slept. The men went to the dog fancier and told him about it.

"Vell, vat you need now," said the dog merchant, "is a leedle dog to veke up the big dog."—Everybody's.

Fire Warden John Drier last Friday caused the arrest of Jos. Bruman for burning rubbish in his yard. Mr. Drier informs the Gazette that regulations regarding the starting of fires must be complied with or prosecutions will follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krueger shipped their household goods to St. Hilaire Tuesday and are now residents of the neighboring town. Carl is opening a harness shop at St. Hilaire. St. Hilaire ought to be a good location for a shop and Carl's friends believe and hope that he will prosper.

Co. Supt. Herman F. Anderson went to Brooks Tuesday to make arrangements for the first of the series of industrial contests that are to be held in connection with the new work in agriculture and domestic science in the rural schools. The first contest will be held at Brooks Saturday, Oct. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Kaufer and family left Tuesday for their new home in the west and with them go the best wishes of their large number of friends in Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county. They will visit for two or three weeks with relatives at Tacoma, Wash., and will then go to Seattle, their future home.

Notwithstanding the fact that many have been killed, bear are still quite numerous in this vicinity. Several have been seen within the past few days in different parts and it is claimed that there are about twenty in the small strip of timber along the river in the south part of Highlanding township.—Eleven Towns.

This week the Gazette received an unsolicited order for a large amount of advertising from Montgomery, Ward & Company. The advertising is not accepted because the fairness of the competition is questioned. However, this is an illustration showing that it pays to advertise—a fact that has been proven conclusively several times before.

E. A. Nelson, Herbert Findeisen, Frank Broulliet and Fred Westphal went to Thief lake on a hunting trip last Saturday night, returning Monday morning. They got tired and sleepy and wet—and a few ducks. Nelson has a dandy hunting outfit that he will sell cheap. Dont' offend him by offering him too much for the outfit; he wants to sell it cheap.

Mrs. W. G. Lytle returned this afternoon from Grand Forks bringing with her Miss Mamie Linnehan, of Red Lake Falls, who has been ill at St. Michael's hospital for three weeks following a serious appendicitis operation. Although still very weak Miss Linnihan is improving slowly and will remain here, the guest of Mrs. Lytle, for some time, or until she regains strength sufficiently to resume her journey home.—Crookston Times.

Meteors.

Swift meteors become visible at an average height of eighty-four miles and disappear at fifty-six miles, while the very slow meteors come in sight at about sixty-five miles and fade away at thirty-eight miles. Of the very slow meteors those that become visible at the greatest heights come twenty miles nearer the earth than those of very low radiant.

Leif and Columbus Dethroned.

The paths of great discoveries have always been thorny ones, as our aspirants for polar honors can testify, but it remains for an old farmer to put forth an as yet unheard of rival to the great Columbus.

The farmer's wife was greatly stirred up by the agitation of the woman's rights question. One evening the old lady was condemning the men in very strong terms and expressing herself in favor of women's voting. The old man got tired of it. He dropped his paper and exclaimed:

"Marendy, the men hev made out to govern this kentry ever since Robinson Crusoe discovered it, and I guess they will for a spell longer, so you keep still."—Youth's Companion.

"Whuppity Scoorie."

The ancient custom at Lanark, Scotland, of "Whuppity Scoorie," the origin and meaning of which are lost, is celebrated annually and watched by a crowd of grownups. The town bell is rung nightly at 6 o'clock from March to September and then lies dumb for six months. On the first night of the ringing all the young folk congregate at the cross, and after parading three times round the parish church the Lanark lads meet the New Lanark boys in a free fight, in which the only legitimate weapons are their caps tied at the end of pieces of string.

HON. JAMES GRAY IN RED LAKE FALLS

Democratic Candidate for Governor Made a Good Address in This City.

Hon. James Gray, Democratic candidate for governor, and Hon. Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, were the speakers for the first political rally of the campaign at the Bijou theatre yesterday afternoon.

This was Mr. Gray's first appearance in Red Lake Falls and he was very well received. His speech here dealt with the state questions that were discussed in his keynote speech delivered at Fergus Falls last week. The full text of the Fergus Falls speech is published in this issue of the Gazette. Those of the Gazette readers who did not hear Mr. Gray's able address yesterday should read his keynote speech.

Mr. Gray spoke on state issues, Mr. Peterson on national issues. Mr. Peterson gave a rapid fire, logical talk that was very well received.

Game is Postponed.

The foot ball game between the Red Lake Falls and Fosston high school teams scheduled for Saturday afternoon has been postponed. The game may be played a week from Saturday. If so, the Gazette will make the announcement next week and will print the line up.

Munch Gets 'Em.

Jake Burkhardt, of Illinois, paid a fine of $27 for hunting in the state without a license.

Charley Knutson, Raymond Buhn and Arthur Buhn, all of Mentor, were fined $12 each for hunting ducks from a launch.

Emil Hanness, a merchant at Maple Lake, was fined $12 for shooting a partridge in September. The season for partridges opens Oct. 1.

WAR AT CASS LAKE?

People Rebel Against the Closing Order of the Federal Authorities.

The order of the Indian agents representing the interior department that saloons at Cass Lake and other nearby towns must be closed after Oct. 15 has stirred up a nice mess of trouble and some of the local authorities threaten to resist the enforcement of the order by force of arms if necessary. They insist that the federal authorities are setting aside the police laws of the state without warrant.

Editor Ives of the Cass Lake Times has addressed open letters to Governor Eberhart requesting that he make an appeal to the president. In one of his letters Editor Ives says in part:

"The mayor of this village has determined to protect each and every citizen and his property by persuasion if that will suffice, by force of arms if the situation requires such force. Other towns around us that have been closed are now making preparations to issue licenses to the number of applicants permitted by the provisions of our state law and each town has determined to employ a sufficient police force to carry its mandates into action and effect. Your determination to permit the situation to remain as it is until the courts have acted will not save the conflict that is now too imminent to be ignored. The only question before the court is, did the special agents exceed their authority? The main and most important question is, can the chief executive of this great state afford to lie perdu until rebellion is actually begun?

"You, as chief executive can prevent a conflict, not of law but of arms, and you, by an appeal to the president of the United States can secure an order withdrawing the marauders from the jurisdiction of the state you govern and allow your authority to prevail and your police officers to see that the laws are obeyed. The president has authority, coextensive with congress to abrogate the complained of provision of that ancient treaty, and it is your duty, and your province to demand that the police laws of the state be not set aside and that executive dicta, from any department of the federal government, with all the brutality of western cow-boy rule be not permitted to terrify and maltreat a defenseless and law-abiding people."

Guns and Small Boys.

Attorney and Mrs. Chas. E. Boughton had a narrow escape from being shot last Sunday afternoon. They were at the Healy dam at the water's edge when a charge from a shot gun struck the water not more than two feet from them. Looking across the river they saw two boys armed with shot guns. Mr. Boughton thinks that if one of those boys thought he'd see how near he could come to hitting him without doing so, he made a very good shot and ought to get a job with Buffalo Bill's show. Mr. Boughton thought he'd move out of range, but when he turned around he found that four boys armed with rifles were standing behind him so he decided to beat it for town and give the boys a clear field. There may be a moral to this story.

LIND AT THIEF RIVER

Will Deliver an Address There Thursday Evening, Oct. 20.

The people of Thief River Falls are due to have a big political rally when on the evening of Thursday, Oct. 20, Hon. John Lind is to deliver a political address in that city. No man in the state can make a better political address than the former governor and there is no doubt that he will be greeted by an immense audience.

Irrigation and Water Saving.

Doubtless many a Minnesota farmer has thought, during the past season, as he witnessed the destruction or curtailment of his crops by the long continued drouth, "What a fine thing an irrigating plant would have been this year!" A few horticulturists and market gardeners in this state have already installed such plants and others are planning to do so. "By use of pumps and windmills or gasoline motors, many small pieces of land can be supplied with water. On many farms small streams, lakes or swamps are so situated that their water can easily be turned upon land for irrigating purposes. These methods of helping nature to help itself have long since been learned by the settlers of the semi-arid regions of the west, where the irrigated lands are now the most highly productive of all lands." But the farmer to whom such sources of water supply are not yet available may, if he will, "bottle up" such quantity of water, just under the surface of his land—by plowing it deeply in the fall so that it will absorb all the rains and melted snows, and then cultivating so as to keep it covered with a dust mulch,—so to assure a sufficiency of moisture for his crop. This is the whole secret of so-called "dry farming" which is in reality only irrigation under another form.—C. R. B. Extension Division.

THE CANDIDATES ARE OFF IN THE RACE

The Race for the Gazette Piano and Other Prizes is Now Worth Watching.

Many Candidates Nominated—Others are Hustling and Will be Out Next Week.

Who are the young ladies in this community who can get the votes? That is the question that is interesting hundreds of people, for the Gazette great voting contest is on. The large number of nominations indicate that the valuable prizes offered have induced many to get into the race.

The beautiful $400 Don Pierre piano that we offer is sufficient to make any lady compete for it—saying nothing about the organ, New Fireside sewing machines, Elgin gold watches and other prizes that we offer.

If you or your friend's name does not appear in the list of candidates remember that it is not too late to be nominated. Send in your name or that of your friend immediately as the contest is just starting, and you have plenty of time to get in the race and win. It costs nothing to enter and only a little effort is required in gathering ballots and coupons. Ballots are had by clipping them from this paper every week and are worth ten votes. Coupons can be had from the merchants on every purchase and are worth 100 votes each. Get busy and ask your friends to gather ballots and coupons for you and send them to this office as soon as possible.

Below are the nominations sent to this office, and many of the candidates would be surprised if they knew the large number of votes they have at the present time. We will publish the standing of the candidates Oct. 27th thus giving those who are not nominated a chance to get in the race and have a large number of votes to their credit when the standing is published. It also gives the ambitious candidates a chance to poll a large vote before we make the announcement. Read the rules and regulations in another column.

Next week we will make a special offer and it will be to the interest of every candidate to get out and hustle merchants' coupons to receive the benefit of it. Ask your friends, neighbors and relatives to secure merchants' coupons for you, as they will increase your standing immensely.

Two weeks hence we will offer a fine inducement on subscriptions; therefore, line up your friends and relatives and have them save their subscription money for you. No trouble at all to go out and collect on subscription as the new law now compels us to collect our subscriptions in advance, and we have not the time to attend to it, we will give prizes to the ladies that can collect the most. The reward is great, the time is short, the roads are good and you cannot help but collect a lot of money. What will pay you better than one of our prizes for so short a time?

The following are the candidates who have been nominated. Is your name among the popular list?

Agnes A. Anderson, Red Lake Falls.
Lucy Crompe, Red Lake Falls.
Mayme Laurent, Red Lake Falls.
Eva Lizee, Red Lake Falls.
Zelia Quesnelle, Red Lake Falls.

JAMES GRAY IS NOT A FANATIC

Democratic Candidate Has Sane Ideas on the County Option Question.

St. Paul, Oct 4—The outspoken declaration of James A. Gray the Democratic candidate for governor, for county option has put a new phase on the political situation and upset all the calculations of the sages. That it will lose him Democratic votes goes without saying. The problem is to what extent will he gain votes to offset them.

Thinking It Over.

The sacrifice he made in this respect will, without doubt, appear greater at the outset than at any other time. The doctrine has been industriously taught that county option and prohibition are one and the same thing. Both Democratic and Republican leaders have joined to advance this view, and of course it has been promulgated in other quarters. The men who have hitherto sought to impress the view that county option was merely a form of home rule have been discredited at the outset because of the extreme views on temperance questions they have been known to hold. Among the rank and file of party men the question never had a hearing.

Mr. Gray no Fanatic.

It is different now. Mr. Gray is far from being an extreme man. Least of all can he be accused of fanaticism on the temperance question. He has been Mayor of Minneapolis and in that position has been obliged to deal with saloon regulation in a practical way. Results were what he was after then—not the advancement of any theory. He was then for such regulations as would regulate. He was for putting the question to the people and carrying out the popular verdict. That is where he is today.

He says, "I am no temperance crank," said he to the people of Alexandria where if anywhere there are "temperance cranks." Then he proceeded to point out that the enactment of a county option law did not decide anything. It is permissive and permissive only. It merely gives them the right to decide. Any county can have license or no license as it seems best. There is nothing compulsory about it.

Mr. Bryan's Attitude.

The Democratic party was already being educated up to this view. It has been advanced by the man whom the majority of the party had long looked

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Talented Reader at Bijou Theater Next Tuesday Evening, Oct. 11.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church have secured Mrs. Jeanette Jewell Kellogg, a talented reader, for an entertainment to be given at the Bijou theatre next Tuesday evening, Oct 11. Mrs. Kellogg is an entertainer of unquestioned ability. The press speaks of her work in terms of praise, and there is no doubt that the people of Red Lake Falls are to enjoy an entertainment of high order. It is probable that some scenic moving pictures will be shown as a part of the evening's entertainment. The admission price will be 25 cents, and 15 cents for children.

DEATH IS MYSTERIOUS.

Sick Man Instantly Killed by Train on the Iron Range.

A report from Thief River Falls, dated Monday says, the body of Raymond Arndt of this county was buried today in Greenwood cemetery by the local lodge of Odd Fellows. Arndt came to his death in a violent manner near Mountain Iron on the range three days ago. He had not been well and left his office for a short time and never returned. Search revealed that he had been struck by a train and killed instantly. He occupied a responsible position with a mining company.

TRUANT OFFICER HERE

He's Going to See That All the Boys and Girls are Attending School.

Geo. M. Wolz, representing the state department of labor and commerce, will arrive in Red Lake Falls this evening. Mr. Wolz comes in the capacity of truant officer. It will be remembered that Mr. Wolz was here last year and he saw to it that all boys and girls of school age who were not attending school enrolled at once.

Mr. Wolz represents the state and the state insists that the children attend school so the truant officer must insist that all children of school age be in the schools. There are few excuses that will be accepted. Mental or physical incapacity are always excuses, but aside from these there are few excuses that the state department will accept.

Mrs. Kellogg proved herself an exceptional entertainer, and her efforts as an elocutionist, reader, and impersonator, were among the best ever heard in Ashtabula. She was repeatedly encored. Hope has been expressed that the reader may be prevailed upon to return to Ashtabula at a future time when a more generous hearing will doubtless await her.—Ashtabula Daily Beacon Record. Nov. 17.—At Bijou theatre, Red Lake Falls, Tuesday evening, Oct. 10.

INDUSTRIAL CONTESTS NEXT WEEK

Contest at Plummer Monday, Oct. 10 and at St. Hilaire, Saturday, Oct. 15.

The Industrial Contest announced for Brooks Saturday, Oct. 8, has been postponed. The following week two contests will be held, at Plummer Monday, Oct. 10, at St. Hilaire Saturday, Oct. 15. Later in the month contests will be held at Red Lake Falls and at Thief River Falls.

The Industrial Contest is a contest in the production or selection of corn, grains, fruit, vegetables and in sewing and cooking by boys and girls under eighteen years of age. This is the first year that a contest of this kind has been held in this county, but it has been conducted in the state very successfully for the past three or four years. Last year over forty counties held these contests or school fairs as they may be called, and met with so much success that they are taking up the work again this year with the assurance that nothing can do more to interest the boys and girls in the general duties about the farm and home.

The object of this is to interest the boys and girls in the practical things of life; to bring them more closely in touch with the home, and lead them to take such vital interest in agriculture and farm life that they will have no desire to leave the farm. The city schools can have courses in agriculture, domestic science and manual training. The country schools, however, are not able on account of the expense to establish such courses, but this is a way to get some of this practical work done among the rural school children.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

New Rules Adopted by the Board of Education.

At the meeting of the board of education held Monday evening, the following rules were passed by the board:

3. No pupil shall use a cup owned and used by any other pupil.

4. The individual cups are to be kept in cases furnished for that purpose by the board of education. These cases will be placed in the class rooms and the cups shall be returned to the cases immediately after use by pupils.

Brief Mention of What Is Transpiring In Various Sections of Our Own and Foreign Countries.

Washington.

Plans were announced here of a campaign to be conducted by the national tariff commission association to have congress enact legislation which will make the tariff board a permanent body to be affiliated as a bureau with the treasury department.

"Who is president of the United States?" asked Judge Mullowney of William Thomas, a jail breaker, who was being examined today by a lunacy jury. "Deed, jedge, ah doan rightly know. They say theys two of 'em—one's Mr. Taft and the other's Teddy," was the prisoner's reply. "Not guilty," was the verdict.

There is a new counterfeit ten-dollar national bank note at large. It is a poorly executed, photo-etched production, printed on two bits of paper, with a few pieces of silk thread distributed in it. It is drawn on the Home National bank of Stauntoa, Tex., series of 1902-1908, check letter D. The note is supposed to be the work of the same counterfeiters that recently produced a five-dollar Carlsbad, N. M., national bank note.

Up to date 1,250 banks in the various states of the country have made application to the postoffice department to be designated depositories for postal savings banks, and 648 postmasters have made the requests for the establishment of postal savings banks in their offices. The greatest number of applications thus far have come from Pennsylvania, where 147 banks and 486 postmasters have applied.

Deplorable as it was, the accident on the battleship North Dakota, resulting from an explosion of oil, will not be permitted to check the development of the use of petroleum as an auxiliary fuel on naval vessels. The lesson learned in the case of the North Dakota is that the settling tank containing 400 gallons of oil should be at once removed from the fire room to some convenient place where any small leakage in it would not be exposed to heat sufficient to set the oil on fire.

Foreign.

Police of Naples are searching for Timothy Sheckly, who is said to have escaped to Italy after having been sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment in the United States.

Sobriety is in the ascendancy in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales and licenses to public houses are decreasing in number, according to statistics communicated by Consul General John L. Griffiths of London.

Prince Tsai Hsun, Chinese minister of naval affairs, Prince Tsai Hsun, who is an uncle of the Chinese emperor, is coming to this country to look into American methods of naval construction, and it is stated to place an order for China's new navy. Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel company was in San Francisco to meet the prince.

A violent outbreak of hostilities against a number of prominent Albanians in the city of Elbassan, Western Turkey, who are known to be connected with the movement for progress in education and for religious tolerations, is reported in a dispatch received by Rev. JAS. A. TAWNEY

AVERS HIS OPPONENT WON THROUGH "KNOCKS" OF OPPOSITE PARTY,

WHO VOTED REP. TICKET

Under the Present Primary Law This Could Not be Prevented.—Democratic Candidate Buck Issues Denial.

Winona. — After declaring that his defeat is directly attributed to the voting by the Democrats in the Republican primaries, Congressman Tawney, defeated on Tuesday, issued the following: "My defeat for nomination cannot be charged to the bolt of the Republicans. In seven of the 10 counties in this district, there was no contest for any Democratic nomination. One vote, therefore, in these counties would nominate the Democratic candidate.

"The Democratic vote in these counties two years ago was over 7,000. At the primary election in these counties there were less than 150 Democratic votes cast. In a single precinct in one county there were 70 more Republican ballots voted than were cast for President Taft in the same precinct two years ago.

"It will be seen, therefore, that the Democrats of the district have made the Republican nomination, as it was intended they should do when my opponent was selected only a short time before the time for filing expired and after the insurgents had spent more than three months in a fruitless endeavor to obtain a Republican to file as candidate against me.

"The Democrats knew this was their only opportunity to accomplish my defeat, and they naturally took advantage of it. Under the former system of making nominations this would have been impossible."

Buck Denies the Charges.

Mr. Buck, the Democratic candidate, made the following statement refuting the charges: "It is probably true that some Democrats throughout the district called for Republican ballots. It is also true that some Republicans called for Democratic ballots. It is true also that many of the Democrats voting in the Republican primaries cast their ballots for Mr. Tawney and others for Mr. Anderson.

"None of these Democratic votes, however, were cast for Republican candidates at the solicitation of any Democrat, but at the insistent importuning of the Republican candidates for local offices who desired their help in securing the nominations.

"Early in August I issued a statement which was widely published throughout the district in which I expressed the hope that the Democrats would resist the solicitation of this Republican friends and abstain from taking part in the Republican primaries.

"The claim by Mr. Tawney that his defeat for the nomination was brought about by these Democratic votes is not borne out by the returns and it is self-apparent that the republican voters of this district are the ones who are responsible for his defeat."

GOPHERS' FUTURE ADMIRALS.

Three Candidates From Minnesota Enter Naval Academy.

Washington, D. C. — A class of 221 is shown in the list of midshipmen who will begin their studies at the United States naval academy Oct. 1. A great many appointees who passed the mental examination failed to come up with the physical requirements.

Among the future admirals from Minnesota included in this year's class are: William Joseph Labodny, Eighth district; Paul Leo Zeshaugh, Fifth district; Delorimer Mortimer Steece, appointed by Senator M. E. Clapp.

TO EXAMINE STUDENTS.

Step Will Be Proposed at the State Sanitary Convention.

Minneapolis. — The Minnesota state board of health is preparing to advocate medical inspection for all students at the University of Minnesota.

The first public step will be taken at the meeting of the Minnesota State Sanitary conference, when Dr. J. G. Cross, a member of the faculty of the school of surgery of the university, will read a paper advocating such inspection. Dr. Cross will be supported by the state board of health and the members of the faculty of the school of surgery.

Dean Westbrook of the college said that while he was not ready to announce plans, it undoubtedly was a necessary reform.

Dean Westbrook Sees Need.

"I cannot say anything yet until we have determined on a course of action," said Dean Westbrook. "If medical inspection is necessary in public schools where a few hundreds are attending school, it is certainly necessary among 4,000 students."

If the plans are adopted and medical inspection becomes a law in the university the school will be among the very first in the country to adopt the system.

The meeting of the sanitary conference will be held Oct. 5, in the Unitarian church.

It is thought that the mild epidemic of measles and typhoid fever at the agricultural college last year had something to do with the movement.

Dr. Cross Formulates Plan.

Dr. Cross said he has not outlined any definite plan, but is working on a general line that would, he thought, be beneficial. The inspection will be somewhat different from that used in the public schools owing to the different conditions.

DULUTH MILL LOSS $100,000.

Lumber is Consumed by Flames But Mill is Spared.

Duluth. — An early Sunday morning fire destroyed $100,000 worth of lumber, lath and singles at the West Duluth sawmill of Alger, Smith & Co. The wind blew away from the company's big sawmill, so that it was not endangered, but it was with great difficulty that 30 head of horses were gotten out of the company's barn in time to save them before the structure was consumed. The origin of the fire is unknown at the present time, but there are people who believe that the New Duluth firebug, who has destroyed $100,000 worth of property in four weeks, with six fires, has extended his operations to Duluth proper.

It may be a matter of some significance that only a few hours before the big fire at Alger, Smith & Co.'s mill yard the fire department was summoned to the plant of the Scott-Graff Lumber company at the west end. This fire was easily extinguished before the flames spread far enough to do much damage. The lumber consumed at the Alger, Smith & Co. fire consisted of nearly 4,000,000 feet, the bulk of which was low grade stock. The loss amounted to about $50,000 and the loss on shingles and lath amounting to $50,000 and may exceed that amount, all covered by insurance. The figures are given out by the company and doubtless are conservative.

ALLEGED ROBBER ARRAIGNED.

Charles Adams, Caught in Wisconsin, Held to the Grand Jury.

Lambertan.—Charles Adams, charged with robbing the Security State Bank of Seaforth last April, was given his preliminary hearing before Justice Zindel. Regulars to Aid Mr. Andersen.

La Crosse, Wis. — Scott Leird, the publisher of the Republican Herald, Winona, Mr. Tawney's paper, in Le Crosse on his way for Lanesboro, to attend a "ratification meeting" for Sydney A. Anderson, progressive, who defeated Mr. Tawney for renomination, declared Mr. Tawney will not come out as an independent candidate. The editor also intimated the Tawney paper will come unqualified for the nominee, thus practically assuring his election over Judge Buck, his Democratic rival.

SET TRAP FOR LORIMER.

White Tells How He Tried to Catch Illinois Senator.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28.—Representative Charles A. White, recalled to the witness stand on cross examination before the Lorimer investigating committee, testified today that he wrote to Senator Lorimer in December, 1909, telling him of his manuscript, to get the senator "to commit himself concerning the doings in the legislature" so that he, White, might use it in his publication of the story.

White insisted that he did not propose selling the story but wanted to publish it.

He then declared that the contract with the Chicago Tribune did not state the truth entirely. "The contract states that I offered to sell the manuscript,'" said White. "That is not true. I protested at the time that I did not offer to sell the story, but only expected my expenses."

In response to further questions, White declared that he thought his expenses might be $3,500. The witness admitted that he had received $250 for his expenses in addition to the $3,250 called for by the newspaper contract. After some sparring, White admitted he had never received any offer to pay for the story except from the newspaper which published it.

WISCONSIN REPUBLICANS.

Write Party Platform for State and Praise LaFollette.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28.—A portion of the republican platform as adopted by the resolutions committee was made public before being read to the delegates today. It praises Senator La Follette and the Wisconsin progressives and declares that the Payne-Aldrich law does not fulfill the party pledges.

The present tariff board is declared not adequate. The railroad law should be amended to allow physical valuation of railroads. A graduated income tax is favored and national control of natural resources.

When the committee adjourned at 3 o'clock this morning they reported that they had not completed making the platform and were instructed by Chairman McGovern to meet again at 9, the hour set for the convention to resume. The delay was said to be due to the large number of subjects to be considered and not to any discord.

N. Y. Democrats in Quandry.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The sudden and unexpected scratching of Mayor Gaynor's name from the list of gubernatorial candidates in which by common opinion he held first place leaves the democratic leaders here for tomorrow's convention confronting a problem.

"We can win with any clean man," said one of the New York men this morning, but with Gaynor we should have cleaned up the state."

The names of Congressmen Sulzer and James S. Havens and of Edward M. Shepard, an attorney, are being discussed as probable nominees for the office. The most important planks in the platform will have to do with direct nominations, tariff reform and a denunciation of Rooseveltism or "new nationalism."

Held for Killing Wife.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28.—Karl A. Badeing, a young confectioner of this city was arraigned today on a charge of murdering his second wife, Mabel Reid Badeing, and the case was continued to await the coroner's report, also to enable the police to continue their investigation of the death of the prisoner's first wife, Mary McConnell Badeing.

SCHUYLER GIVES 3 VOTES

ALL THAT WAS NEEDED FOR ROOSEVELT TO WIN.

Old Guard in New York Gave up Hopes of Winning at Very Early Stage of Convention.

Saratoga, Sept. 27.—The legend that statesmen are punctually late applied with equal force today to the leaders of the old guard and the progressives who gathered tardily at the opening of the state convention. Not so the delegates or spectators, who swarmed into every nook and cranny of the convention hall, filled all seats and overflowed into the aisles. The word had gone forth that the old guard were beaten in their fight to elect Vice President Sherman temporary chairman and every one waited for the real fireworks.

Chairman Woodruff called the convention to order at 12:05, after the aisles had been cleared, which the one policeman available for the task found difficulty in doing. The convention took up the regular order of business.

When the roll call had been completed Chairman Woodruff announced, "The next order of business is the election of a temporary chairman."

There was an instant hush, then a ripple of uncertain applause after which Chairman Woodruff addressed the convention. The first applause came when President Taft's name was mentioned, Colonel Roosevelt leading the handclapping. There was a vigorous outburst of cheers when Woodruff mentioned Vice President Sherman's name.

Intense hisses greeted Woodruff's declaration that the committee had no idea that any one else had any ulterior motive for desiring to be temporary chairman. Woodruff's speech was halted by applause for Griscom.

There was a redoubled volume of cheers when Roosevelt's name was mentioned by the chairman. There were cheers for the vice president and when Joseph Hicks, in a short speech, nominated Roosevelt, the convention broke into wild cheers and continuous applause. The delegates waved hats and clapped hands while the band played a fanfare.

The roll call on chairmanship was ordered at 2:22.

At 3:15 Barnes conceded Roosevelt's election. At that time Roosevelt had 144 votes and Sherman 80.

Roosevelt lacked but two votes of a majority when Schenectady cast its eleven votes for Roosevelt. Three votes of Schuyler gave the colonel the majority.

Pinchot Makes Hit.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 27.— Clifford Pinchot's declaration that the conservation idea had taken such a hold on the American people that it was bound to prevail and that it would be wise for the mining and oil man of the country to take up and aid rather than oppose it, is the principal topic of discussion among the delegates to the American Mining conress.

The former chief forester asserted that as a matter of policy the American congress should aid the conservationists in shaping laws which would be satisfactory and just to all interests.

Walsh's Trouble is Mental.

Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 27.—"John R. Walsh is in better condition physically than when he was received at the prison and he is bearing up well for a man of his age," said the physician of the federal prison here today.

The former banker reported at the desk for duty this morning having entirely recovered from a temporary illness.

The prison officials said today his trouble was all mental, caused by the condition of his business affairs as reported by his wife and son on Saturday.

This information has been communicated to the Italian embassy at Manchester by the governor.

Railroads Are Blamed.

Washington, Sept. 26.—"Probably the greatest single deterrent to water terminal advance in the United States is the present adverse attitude of rail lines toward independent water traffic, in their exclusive control of the frontage, in their refusal or neglect to coordinate with general water traffic and in their refusal to prorate generally with water lines through the movement of traffic."

This is one of the conclusions of Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, in part 3, just made public, of his report to the president on water transportation in the U. S.

Nationalism is Issue.

Pueblo, Col., Sept. 26.—The controversy between state and federal government for the control of natural resources will be a feature of the national irrigation congress which is opened here today.

The day was given over entirely to formal opening exercises, including an industrial parade and the throwing open of the irrigation exposition. Shafroth delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by President Fowler of the congress.

BOTH CONFIDENT

OPPOSING FACTIONS ARE GATHERING FOR FRAY AT SARATOGA.

ROOSEVELT IS THE ISSUE

Vice President Sherman Is Confident of Position as Temporary Chairman and Progressives are Equally So.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Delegates to the republican state convention representing the progressive wing of the party who are fighting the old guard for control, marked time today pending the arrival of Theodore Roosevelt who is expected at 2:30 this afternoon.

A conference of the progressive leaders was continued until past midnight planning dates of the convention and the fight for delegates. In the old guard camp there was the same air of expectancy.

The moral effect of Roosevelt's presence on the night before the conflict is expected by the progressives to crumble up all effective opposition to the movement to place the former president in control of the convention. Meanwhile both the old guard and the progressives claimed a majority of 1,015 delegates.

Interest centers in the action of the state committee at tonight's meeting, with special reference to the threat said to have been made on behalf of the old guard to demand a revote on the question of whether Roosevelt or Sherman shall be temporary chairman for the alleged purpose of vindicating the committee from the charge that has been made that the result of the New York meeting was brought about by trickery.

The tentative platform of the progressives has been described by one of its grafters as "short, crisp and distinctively Rooseveltian." It is understood the main plank is for direct nominations on the lines already announced by Lloyd C. Griscom.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 26.—With the coming today of Vice president Sherman on the scene of the political battle the old guard forces redoubled their energies to secure control of the republican state convention and prevent Colonel Roosevelt and the progressives from naming the candidates and writing the party platform.

Shortly after Sherman's arrival he was in conference with Wm. Barnes, Jr., who frankly stated that neither side had a majority of delegates.

"There is nothing to say," said Sherman, "and there won't be anything to say later, as I look at it."

"Who is going to be temporary chairman of the convention?" "I am," he replied.

"That's what I came here for."

First Witness in Lorimer Probe.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—State Representative Charles C. White of Ofallon, Ill., was the first witness to take the stand today in the investigation into the election of United States Senator Wm. Lorimer by the senatorial sub-committee on elections and privileges.

Six of the seven members of the committee wer present when his examination by Attorney Austrian, representing The Chicago Tribune, which in printing White's story several months ago, brought on the investigation, began.

White identified the letters he said had been sent him by Lee O'Neil Brown, asking White's help to establish Brown's position as the minority leader in the lower house of the legislature. The witness then began to tell of his relations with Brown.

Lorimer was on hand early with his attorney, Elbridge Hanecy.

Crippen Guilty of Willful Murder.

London, Sept. 26—The coroner's jury today returned a verdict of willful murder against Dr. Hawley H. Crippen the American dentist, in connection with finding in the Crippen Hill Drop Crescent residence last July of a mutilated body supposed to be that of Crippen's wife, who was known on the stage as Belle Elmore.

No evidence beyond that given at the Bow street police court in the case of Crippen and Ethel Clara Leneve, was produced at the resumed inquiry today of the coroner. The police announced that they had nothing further to submit.

Haskell Trial Begun.

McAllister, Okla., Sept. 26.—The trial of Charles N. Haskell, governor of Oklahoma in what are known as the Muskogee town lot cases, was called here today before Federal Judge John A. Marshall of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The national banks of the United States have reported resources of $9,826,452 and reserves of $1,347,586, in answer to the call for their condition, which was issued Sept. 1.

"Their resources are more than 21 per cent greater than is required by law," said Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of currency, when he made the returns public today.

Bismarck, N. D., Sept. 28.—Secretary of State Alfred Blaisdell announced today that he would place the names of the candidates on the special judiciary ballot in rotation instead of putting them in alphabetical order as had been intended. HOME OF SECRETARY KNOX

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE —LOOKING EAST FROM TREASURY DEPARTMENT

There are botanists, astronomers, ornithologists, and, in fact, scientists of all kinds and descriptions, to be found nightly in the great, sweeping parlors of the club's quarters. There is just as much hospitality and jollity in the club as are to be found in the rooms of any social organization in the world—and learning besides there, also. In order to be a member of the Cosmos club you must have something besides money and social standing. It is probable that there are many members of other organizations in Washington who would be willing to throw their membership into the deep sea, if the act would buy for them admittance into the club of the scientists.

The headquarters of the Cosmos club are in the old "Dolly Madison" residence. It was there that the widow of President Madison lived and held social sway for years after the death of her husband. During the Civil war, for a time, Admiral Wilkes lived in the Madison house. It was Wilkes who took Mason and Slidell from the British steamer "Trent" and thereby nearly brought on war between the United States and Great Britain at a time when such a war might have insured ultimate victory to the Confederate arms.

The biological survey of the United States government has lost the services of Dr. C. Hart Merriam, who for years was the survey's chief, and who in the early days worked so hard to make the service what he succeeded in making it, one of the most useful departments of government. Dr. Merriam has accepted the direction of the Harriman Foundation for Zoological Research. Mrs. Harriman, the widow of E. H. Harriman, the great financier and railroad man, has carried out the wishes of her husband, and has set aside a large sum of money to be used for purposes of zoological study. Acting unquestionably in line with her husband's wishes, Mrs. Harriman requested Dr. Merriam to take charge of the work.

It is probable that the former chief of the biological survey is the foremost authority in the United States in matters pertaining to certain lines of natural history work. It was Dr. Merriam, more than any other man, to whom Theodore Roosevelt went for advice about the scope of his expected work in Africa. The doctor and the colonel have been friends since boyhood; when in New York state both were pursuing bird studies and exchanging letters on general subjects of natural history.

These words about Dr. Merriam and the Harriman Zoological Foundation lead one to tell a story about the late financier, which perhaps will throw some light on a side of his life concerning which most people probably know little. One year ago last winter I went south from Washington, bound for Augusta, Ga., with a friend. E. H. Harriman's private car was attached to the train at one of the stations on the way. It happened that my friend was a close personal acquaintance of Mr. Harriman, and he was invited to dine with the financier on his private car, and was told to bring his friend with him, provided the friend would like to come.

There were several men of large affairs at that little dinner party, one of the guests being the president of one of the greatest railroad systems in the world. The conversation, naturally, was about big affairs of the financial world, concerning which I knew very little, and I am free to confess, cared much less. After hearing a good deal about certain things concerning which the discussion was more or less unintelligible to me, I ventured to break into the conversation and to tell Mr. Harriman that I had such of the journals of the "Harriman Alaska Expedition" as already had been published, and moreover, that I had read them.

For the next two hours I had ample evidence that E. H. Harriman cared for something besides railroads. Ten or twelve years before he had taken a company of naturalists to Alaska with him as his guests. He had had a delightful time with the scientists and they had profited much in a knowledge way by the trip to comparatively new fields. I found that Mr. Harriman was keenly interested in birds, trees, shells, flowers, stones and mammals, and that he knew and appreciated nature in all its forms. That was the only time I ever saw E. H. Harriman, but from what he said during the two hours and a half spent in his car that winter night I was not at all surprised when I found out that he had provided a fund for zoological research.

Across Lafayette square, due west from the Cosmos club, is the vacant Decatur mansion. This house was built by Commodore Stephen Decatur in the year 1819, and it was from its portals that he went forth one year later to meet his death at the hand of James Barron, also a naval officer, who had challenged Decatur to a duel. It is American history and the circumstances are known to all, but it might be said that it was Barron who was in command of the United States ship Chesapeake at the time it was overhauled by the British ship Leopard and searched for alleged deserters from the British navy.

Books have been written about Lafayette square, but the stories that are told about the men whose statues are in the square, and about the men who lived in the houses surrounding it, are endless, and not all of them, perhaps, have found their way into print. The statue of Lafayette was erected at one corner of the square not long after the statue of Andrew Jackson had been put in place in the center of the square, provided a square can be said to have a center. Lafayette visited America in 1825, and even today one hears occasionally of some living person who remembers his visit.

Not long ago there died in Chicago, at her home on Elm street, the aged Mrs. Davidson. She was born in Charleston, S. C. Her maiden name was Ancrum; she was a granddaughter of Col. William Washington, a first cousin of George Washington. It was William Washington who at the battle of the Cowpens fought a hand-to-hand fight with Colonel Tarleton of the British forces. Colonel Washington succeeded in cutting off the thumb of Tarleton's sword hand, and then there was interference which separated the combatants.

Lafayette was a strong personal friend of William Washington, and when he visited Charleston in the year 1825 he was a guest at the Ancrum residence, Mrs. Ancrum, the mother of Mrs. Davidson, being a daughter of Colonel Washington. Mrs. Davidson, then a child six or eight years old, remembered the visit perfectly and kept until she died a present which Lafayette had given to her, the grandchild of his old friend and comrade in arms.

There is no statue of Washington in Lafayette square, though one day there may be, for it is said to be possible that Andrew Jackson may be put elsewhere and George Washington may take his place. The nearest physical approach, so to speak, that one gets to the first president, in Lafayette square, is in the White House, which fronts it. It may not be generally known that the White House was completed before Washington died. It was only a few days before his death, as Washington tradition has it, that George and Martha Washington walked through the recently completed White House, to give their approval or disapproval, as it may be, of the arrangement of the rooms. It is possible that that visit to the capital was the last one which the Father of his Country made, for it was only a short time afterward that he died at his country seat, Mount Vernon.

Reference to Mount Vernon brings to mind the fact that there is living in Washington today an aged man named John Lane, who is the only living person who ever saw George Washington. Now, inasmuch as the Father of his country died 111 years ago, this may seem to be something pretty close to a false statement on its face, but it is the truth nevertheless.

When John Lane was a small boy the driver of a stage that ran between Washington and Mount Vernon asked the lad if he wanted a ride, and the answer was a hasty climbing up to the seat of honor by the driver. The boy made the trip all the way to Mount Vernon and arrived there just as they were removing the body of Washington from the old tomb to the new one. In order to make certain that the remains had not been tampered with by ghouls who not long before had broken into the old tomb, the coffin was opened and John Lane, aged ten, was lifted up to look on the face of the Father of his Country. Mr. Lane today is the only person who survives of the little company which was present at the transfer of the body.

Exact Knowledge Counts

Congressmen Will Listen Closest if the Speaker Is Familiar With His Subject.

In an interview Congressman Weeks related his experience on first entering congress. He said he soon realized that a member who was thoroughly familiar with even one subject could maintain the attention of his audience better than a congressman who could talk fairly well on almost any subject. A measure came up involving the custom of "hazing" at Annapolis, and as he was a graduate, he was urged to say something in behalf of the bill. "You may not have as good a chance for five years to speak on a subject which you so thoroughly understand," said his colleague. He asked the speaker for an opportunity to state his views in five minutes. "When I rose to make my little speech," said Mr. Weeks, "the members were in the usual state of disorder, talking, writing, lounging or coming in or going out. 'Mr. Speaker,' I said as loudly as I could, with the idea of making my voice heard above the din, 'I am a graduate of the Naval academy at Annapolis.' Before I got any further, to my surprise, the noise ceased. Men stopped and looked at me with attention, as though saying to themselves: Here is a man who knows whereof he speaks. We will listen to what information he may be able to give.' Since then," continued Mr. Weeks, "I have found that exact knowledge on any subject under discussion will always gain the attention of the house of representatives."

"UGLY" CASHIER IS WANTED

Real "Frights" Are Told They Are Too Good Looking—Contest Narrows to Three.

St. Louis.—Three of the prettiest of 25 applicants in answer to an advertisement for an "ugly" cashier were selected by Vincent J. Gorlay, of Grimm & Gorlay, florists. One of the three finally will be chosen for this job. Mr. Gorlay said that some of the applicants were "frights." Others were beautiful, and nearly all declared they had overlooked the word "ugly" in the advertisement.

"We didn't want a 250-pound cashier," said Mr. Gorlay, "and we really didn't care for any with all their teeth gone. We had several applicants who filled both descriptions. My idea in advertising for an ugly cashier was to get one who did not have such great personal charm that she would be proposed to by the first unmarried customer who happened to spy her.

"How did I get by with the impossible ones? That was easy. One must have weighed 250 pounds. I asked her if she was sure she could qualify in the 'ugly' class. She declared she had not noticed the word 'ugly' in the advertisement, and I assured her she was entirely too good looking. That was easy. She went out with a smile on her face. Finding it worked in one case I used that right along."

"I know I don't fulfill the requirements of ugliness specified in the advertisement," said the first applicant, with a flirtatious glance at herself in the mirror, "but I assure you I wouldn't marry the best man living."

A fond mother appeared with her daughter in tow. The latter was tall and lank.

"I'm afraid my daughter will not suit you," said the mother, "because you wanted an ugly girl, but she will never disappoint you by leaving you to marry. She is a confirmed man hater."

IS RICHEST WOMAN

Mrs. Taylor, Daughter of Former Governor, Inherits Millions.

Death of Mrs. Sarah M. Flower, Widow of Roswell P. Flower, Makes Daughter Wealthiest Woman in Northern N. Y.

Watertown, N. Y.—With the death in this city of Sarah M. Flower, widow of the late Governor Roswell P. Flower, the only living daughter, Mrs. Emma Flower Taylor, becomes one of the richest, if not the richest, woman in northern New York. While as yet Mrs. Flower's will has not been filed for probate, estimates of the value of the estate place the sum at a figure far exceeding $5,000,000 and possibly close to double this sum. That her daughter Emma will inherit the greater part of this amount is deemed likely.

Mrs. Taylor, who was the wife of John Byron Taylor, of this city, whom she divorced but a few months ago, is already the richest woman in this section and her liberal expenditures of her riches for benevolent purposes have made her, as well, the most popular. Since the death of her father, Governor Flower, in 1899, at which time she inherited a considerable sum, she has devoted her time to philanthropical acts and her charitable deeds, both public and private, have been numberless.

The estate of Governor Flower at the time of his death was valued at $6,575,000. In his will he made bequests amounting to $305,000 and left the residue to be equally divided between his widow and his daughter. By the terms of this will Mrs. Taylor received over $3,500,000, while Mrs. Flower received an equal sum in addition to the fortune which she then possessed.

Mrs. Flower was a daughter of Norris M. and Roxana Woodruff. Mr. Woodruff was one of the pioneer settlers of this section, where he invested a large amount during the early days of the settlement of the country. He also went into land deals elsewhere with John Jacob Astor. Mrs. Flower upon the death of her father inherited no small sum.

Governor and Mrs. Flower had three children, Helen Flower and Henry Keep Flower, both of whom are dead, and Emma Gertrude Flower Taylor, who now becomes heiress to the combined fortunes of her father and mother. What the entire sum will amount to is problematical.

Mrs. Taylor was born in this city March 23, 1870, and the greater part of her girlhood was spent here, although she lived at various times in Albany, New York and Washington with her parents.

Matorman Picks Up Money

Envelope and Roll, Covered With Mud, Big Help in Financial Straits of Worker.

Chicago.—"It is not collectors of old rags alone who find valuables in odd places."

This confession was elicited from a Chicago street car motorman the other day in a discussion of the unusual good fortune of a New York rag dealer who discovered money and diamonds in the old clothes which he had bought for a few cents a pound.

"It's a funny thing," said the motorman, as the car whizzed by Diversey boulevard. "Running past this corner reminds me of what happened here about a year ago. I was especially hard up that month and was wondering how I'd be able to raise enough money to make payment on a mortgage coming due.

"I needed about $25 more than I knew I could spare from my pay check and I was at a loss to discover how I'd arrange it.

"Well, one morning I was running by this corner and I saw what looked like an old envelope, all covered with mud, in the street. It looked as if it might contain almost anything except money, but something led me to stop the car, get out and pick it up. After brushing off the mud I put it into my pocket and forgot all about it until that evening. When I reached home I opened it. In the envelope were three five-dollar bills. I knew then how I'd meet the payment.

"Three days later," he added, "while crossing this same corner one rainy evening the searchlight of my car fell on something that looked like a little roll of bills and I stopped again to pick it up. I examined my second find and discovered that it was a two-dollar bill. That evening at home I unrolled it and prepared to clean the mud off as before. To my surprise I discovered a five-dollar bill and another two-dollar bill wrapped up within the outside bill! I guess that's luck for you, eh? And I wasn't looking for 'paper' like the rag dealer in New York, either."

Strange Varmint Is Loose

Wild Animal of Ferocious Mien Roaming About Section of New Jersey State.

New York.—Caldwell, N. J., a community in which mystery has always been held to be a thing abhorrent, is puzzled about almost to the point of hysteria by the appearance intermittently in its environs of a predatory animal of which nobody knows the name. The good folk of the pleasant countryside near Caldwell, Pine Brook, Clinton and Fairfield have been hunting the strange beast, but, while the animal has gone right on killing hens, calves and dogs, none of the huntsmen has got close enough to end its life.

Oh, yes! Charley Rollins got close enough, but he had no gun. There was a tree handy and Mr. Rollins in placing himself in the topmost branches did some gymnastic work equal to any performance on the horizontal bars ever seen in the circus.

The other men, who had guns, never saw the animal. Mr. Rollins, whose eyesight is about as good as his agility, says the animal is about four feet long over all, that it is two and one-half feet high, has a generous tail, and is yellow. Were it not for the dimensions given it might be a cat, but Mr. Rollins is sure it is as big as he says it is.

Some persons think it is a panther, although what a panther would be doing at large in peaceful New Jersey, with the menagerie business in full blast all over the country, is another of those things that no citizen of Caldwell can find out.

The alien has been seen on many occasions without the assistance of Jersey applejack, the effect of which on the gift of vision is proverbial, and until it is slain there will be more excitement in the vicinage of Caldwell than there has been since last circus day.

GET LARGE CROP OF APPLES

Washington Has More Fruit Than Last Year and Values Are Higher Than Ever.

Seattle, Wash.—Reports of growers and handlers indicate that the production of apples in Washington this year will be between 3,500,000 and 4,700,000 boxes, but while the yield promises to be the largest yet grown, orchardists and buyers say there will be no cheap apples. The cause assigned is the late frosts in the other apple growing states.

The yield in Washington is estimated at around 4,000,000 boxes, against 2,414,000 boxes in 1909, when the average wholesale price was $1.40 a box. Oregon is second in the northwest this year with about 2,000,000 boxes, and Idaho and Montana follow.

Buyers have been active over the state the last two months, and it is probable that half of the crop has been sold, but many apples will be held in anticipation of increased prices at holiday time. No prices are made public, but it is believed the wholesale price this year will be above two dollars a box.

Several growers will send large consignments of apples to England and Australia this season, while others will market their fruit in the orient, Hawaii and South America. One grower has already arranged to accompany a shipment of 3,600 boxes to England.

PET ANGORA CATS GET AWAY

Three Women Marooned at Long Island Railroad Station Until Pet Feline Is Captured.

Bellport, L. I.—A large pet Angora cat created quite a furore at the Bellport depot. As the 9:52 a. m. New York express pulled into the station a party of smartly-dressed women hurried out of a motor car and made a rush for the train. In the hurry of departure a large basket, carried by one of the women, was dropped, and out of the basket jumped a beautiful specimen of the Angora cat.

Frightened beyond reason the cat made a dive for shelter, and crawled under the station platform, to the consternation of his mistress and her companions. Cries of "Teddy! Teddy!" proved of no avail, and finally one of the women, dressed in immaculate white duck, went down on her hands and knees in an endeavor to coax the pet out. Teddy wouldn't budge.

In the meantime the train proceeded on its way, leaving the women behind. When the train had disappeared well toward Patchogue Teddy was still occupying his easy berth under the station platform. The next train for New York left Bellport at 4:25 p. m., and it's pretty certain that Teddy and his fair companions took plenty of time to connect with this train.

Singing Makes Fish Bite.

Winsted, Conn.—Do fish like music? That is a question fishermen are trying to solve. Every pleasant Sunday 150 cottagers assemble in boats of every description on Highland lake and listen to a sermon by an able preacher who has his pulpit on the land. It is a very noticeable fact, fishermen declare, that the fish bite better during the period of the sunset services than at any other part of the day.

Kiss Cure for Woes.

Chicago.—The Rev. E. L. Williams, pastor of Grace Methodist church, has found that a good-natured kiss is the panacea for all domestic ills, and, if properly applied, would cut down the business of the divorce courts immensely, he says.

"In the homes of the laboring men and in those of the rich there is a noticeable lack of sentiment that expresses itself in terms of endearment," he said at the Des Plaines camp meeting. "The hand of toil gets hard and unappreciative. The rich man neglects his wife, goes to Europe and only too often is accompanied by some fascinating actress. Attention to the courtesies of home life would save disaster."

French Submarine to Cruise Far.

Paris.—The Archimede, the largest submarine boat in the world, will start soon on a 500 mile cruise from Cherbourg to Toulon, Bizerta and Oran. Lieutenant Trochot wished to take the Archimede to New York, but the minister of marine would not consent.

Big Gobbler Catches Frogs

Tears Up Hired Man's Red Flannel Shirt, Thereby Furnishing Owner With Dinner.

Cedar Brook, N. J.—Squire Hake Baldwin and a party of friends were furnished with a frog-leg dinner by Obadiah, a turkey gobbler the squire is fattening at his home for Thanksgiving.

Obadiah, like all turkey gobblers, is incensed at red. The family for this reason kept red out of sight. The hired man, Hans Oleson, however, washed out his red flannel shirt and laid it out on the grass to dry.

In the evening the squire and a party of friends were surprised to see nearly 100 large and small bullfrogs, hopping about, unable to croak, with a small fragment of flannel in their mouths. They were caught and killed and eaten.

Obadiah was responsible for the catch. He had torn the red flannel shirt of the hired man to ribbons. The wind had carried the pieces to the swamp and the frogs had consumed them.

America Has 400,000 Autos.

New York.—Inquiry shows that there are 400,000 automobiles in the United States of an approximate value of $600,000,000. It is estimated that one-half of this vast sum is invested for automobile vehicles for commercial purposes and of actual utility to replace the work of horses, but the other $300,000,000 is invested in autos for pleasure.

Money Without Germs.

Washington.—To the old National Bank of Spokane belongs the distinction of circulating the first antiseptic germ-proof national bank notes.

Fifty thousand dollars in bills just put out by the bank were signed with an ink which consisted largely of carbolic acid. The result is the bills are saturated with an agency which means death to the most vigorous germ.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

That man Dietz has secured about as complete a monopoly of the attention of the metropolitan press as did Mister Jack Johnson.

If Senator LaFollette should be nominated for the presidency, Congressman Tawney would then understand how it happened.

It has been remarked that the governor has talked so much the past few months that many people wonder what there is left for him to put into a keynote speech.

James A. Tawney says the Democrats nominated Sidney Anderson while Chairman Smith says that Anderson is the "party nominee" and will have the support of the Republican state central committee. Who is right? Why is an insurgent?

The only question that should determine the farmers' vote on the county division proposition is, "Is it worth the cost?" If you have a grievance against the county board; if there is a sore spot, the Thief River agitators will rub it a little and aggravate the trouble. They are working on your sympathies and trying to work on your prejudices. If you have some grievance do you "get even" by voting to slice the county into pieces? You are going to live here for years; the land is here for all time to be taxed. Mistakes of officials are little things by comparison; sore spots heal; county officials are elected for short terms. To vote for division simply because you feel hurt about something or because the agitators have worked on your sympathies, would be to slander your own intelligence; it would be like having your nose amputated to make your face feel mean. The county division proposition should have your serious consideration. You should figure it out carefully and if you then feel that division is worth the cost, vote that way.

A law should be passed at the next session of the legislature, says the Dassel Anchor, that will make it necessary for any political party to cast at least 20 per cent of its vote at the primaries in order to secure a place on the ticket at the general election. This will do away, to a certain extent, of the Democrats voting for Republicans or vice versa.

PAYING FOR THE COURT HOUSE.

The Thief River Falls papers make much of the opinion of the attorney general that if Red Lake county is divided the proposed Pennington county won't have to pay for Red Lake county's court house. They didn't have to send to St. Paul to get that information; any Red Lake Falls school boy could have told them.

But this fact remains, that if the county is divided, the people within the territory of the present Red Lake county will have two court houses to pay for. Theoretically the people of "Pennington county" won't have to pay for the court house now in course of construction in Red Lake Falls and nearly completed, but to vote for division is equivalent to voting to pay the whole cost of the building.

Assuming that, if Pennington county comes into existence, a court house is bu i at Thief River Falls at a cost exactly equal to the cost of the building in Red Lake Falls it will be just as heavy a drain upon th pocket books of the farmers of the proposed new county as if they alone paid the whole cost of the building in Red Lake Falls instead of only their share as they will be required to do if the county is not divided. And the farmers in the territory of the proposed new county should assume that they will have to pay for a court house at Thief River Falls for that is exactly what they will have to do. The Thief River Falls people admit that to be a fact. They say they will give the city hall for use for a few years, but have openly boasted that they will have a finer court house than the one in Red Lake Falls.

In accepting the nomination for governor Mr. Gray said to the Democratic State Central Committee:

"We all wanted John Lind, but that it seems was not to be. But the heart of John Lind, like that of Bruce has already been thrown forward into the very ranks of the enemy and we will follow it.

"All we ask in this campaign is, 'Restore the rights of the people.' Under that banner are already enlisted Iowa, Nebraska, Michigan, Kansas, Wisconsin, California and Maine. Does Minnesota lag behind? No. She was foremost in the movement. She first raised this banner under the various governorships of John A. Johnson."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Hallock News: That the Republicans of this county are determined to be progressive is evident by the primary returns from all over the county. They have had a taste of aggressive, progressive and live Republicanism of the Roosevelt brand, and now they will have no other. From the staid old Maine on the Atlantic to complacent California on the Pacific the people have spoken in spots here and there, where they have had the opportunity, and the verdict is all the same—progression. Look out for the cars.

Winona Indpendent: A Democratic senator from Maine! It does sound rather funny, but the people will soon be used to the idea, because more Republican states are going to have Democratic senators.

Rochester Bulletin: Representative McKinlay of California, a Cannonite, whom the voters of his district have decided they can do better without, is engaged by the Republican congressional committee to stump Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. What states will Representative Tawney stump this fall?

Long Prairie Argus: Now it will be in order for some disreputable newspaper to say that the voters of the Sixth Congressional district couldn't stand "Pat."

Perham Enterprise: John Lind refused to accept the Democratic nomination for governor. In view of his previous statements he could scarcely do otherwise. We believe Mr. Lind's action will eventually prove a good thing for the party. While he is concededly the foremost statesman in Minnesota today he is not the only man in the state who can lead the Democratic party to vitory. Minnesota's Democracy is greater than any man or set of men; it stands for principle founded upon truth and justice, with equal rights for all, special privileges to none. It is now, as it ever has been, the party of the plain people, the foe of special interests.

St. Cloud Times: "Billy" Hamm, the St. Paul brewer, has started for Europe. Ed. Smith and Senator Dunn will look after his political interests.

Winona Independent: From every side Judge Buck is receiving assurances of support in his congressional campaign. Unless the situation changes between now and election, the judge will have about the same majority in November that Mr. Tawney received in his balmiest days.

St. Peter Free Press: Congressman Tawney has about decided not to become a candidate for the speakership.

These talented physicians, imbued with the experience of success in the treatment and cure of chronic diseases, offer their services this, the first trip, free of charge. All nervous and chronic diseases of men, women and children offer to all those who call this trip consultation, examination and advice free, making no charge whatever, except the actual cost of medicine. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the results to their friends, and thus prove to the sick and afflicted in every city and locality that at last treatments have been discovered that are absolutely sure and certain in their effects.

These doctors are considered Americas' leading stomach and nerve specialists, and are excellent in the treatment of all chronic diseases and so great and wonderful have been their cures that in many cases it is hard, indeed, to find the dividing line between human skill and miracle.

Diseases of the stomach, intestines, liver, blood, skin, nerves, heart, spleen, kidneys, or bladder, sciatica, diabetes, bedwetting, leg ulcer, epilepsy, weak lungs, and those afflicted with long standing, deep seated diseases that have baffled the skill of the family physician should not fail to call.

No more operations for appendicitis, gall stones, goiter, tumor, or cancer. They were the first in America to earn the name "Bloodless Surgeons" by doing away with the knife, with blood and all pain in the successful treatment and cure of these dangerous diseases.

Deafness often cured in sixty days.

No matter what your ailment may be, no matter what others have told you, no matter what experience you may have had with others, physicians, sanitoriums, or patent medicines, if you want to get well again, it will be to your advantage to see them. Go have it forever settled in your mind.

If your case is curable, they will treat you, if incurable they will give you such advice that may prolong your life. Do not put off this duty, you owe yourself and your friends or relatives who may be suffering because of your sickness, as a visit will cost you nothing and may save your life.

Remember this free offer is for this trip only.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address biggest factor, and they fight to put the people out of power. To a great many this condition has become intolerable. They wish to know whether the interests or the people are running the government. It is necessary for the peace and dignity of Minnesota that this question be tried out. My opponent has said that if a County Option law were presented to him by the Legislature he would sign it. He could do no less. If elected, I will do more. I shall take the position that my election was a mandate from the people to put this question up to the Legislature, and I shall exercise the constitutional function of the Governor to recommend proper legislation to carry out their will.

Re-Apportionment an Honest Demand.

"We are unequivocally in favor of a re-apportionment of representation in the State Legislature with a view of making the composition of that body a true reflection of the distribution of population."

If a series of Republican legislatures had not been remiss in their duty, this paragraph of the Democratic platform need not have been written. But justice has not been done.

Project the southern boundary of Otter Tail county east to Wisconsin and west to Dakota and north of it you will have twenty-five counties of perhaps the most resourceful region on the continent of North America. It has the greatest wheat fields and the greatest iron mines in the world, vast forests and water powers and the source of three continental watersheds. These twenty-five counties have an area equal to that of New York or Ohio.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

No spot on the globe offers greater opportunities to the settler. All this region needs is fair treatment at the hands of the state. It needs good roads and public schools. It needs forest protection and drainage, but above all it needs and demands justice under a Constitution which guarantees to all an equal voice in the government. It demands that the legislature make an honest re-apportionment. No legislative re-apportionment has been granted since 1897, a period in which the population of this northern domain has increased by perhaps 200,000.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Senator Smith's Senate Failed to Do its Duty.

For this neglect the State Senate appears to be largely responsible, the defeat of re-apportionment being charged to senators who refused to interfere with their tenure in office. The state authorizes the legislature to make a re-apportionment, if population changes require it, after each census, state or federal. Governor Eberhart says at this time in the face of another election that he favors re-apportionment. The legislature, of which he was a part, pressed a Constitutional amendment allowing re-apportionment to be made at any time, thus probably deferring the question until the amendment could be adopted.

Permit me to say to northern Minnesota here and now that the present Constitution authorizes a re-apportionment at this coming session and that in all justice to the state it should be accorded.

Stands for Employers' Liability.

There is nothing more precious than human life. There is no form of conservation more important to the state. It is the duty of the state to protect from needless sacrifice the lives of men and women who are obliged to labor in our industries. Employers and employes understand that every restriction in our present inspection laws should be removed so that the state officials will have the authority under the law to order safeguards in every place where danger to human life lurks. But when we have solved, so far as protection to human life is concerned, the question of accidents, there still remain a large number that will take place because of the hazard of the industry and which cannot be foreseen or provided against. This brings up the question of the basis of compensation for such injuries. The law that we have belongs to an era in our industrial life that has passed. It is based on the theory of fault or negligence, which might have belonged very well in the primitive days of hand tools, but which has no application under a system of industry which involves the buzz of intricate machinery, whirling saws and keen edged knives.

Industry Must Bear the Risk.

The men who are obliged to work under this hazard and who suffer the pains from injuries sustained there, should not be obliged to carry all the risk. It is the duty of the state to step in and by proper legal enactment to devise a system for the injured working man, which shall in no manner savor of alms or charity. This principle was recognized by the late Governor Johnson, by the last legislature, by the organizations of employers and employes and by the State Bar Association.

A Commission is now at work with a view of proposing a bill which will have for its purpose a scheme of compensation for every person injured in a Minnesota industry without the necessity of a costly law suit and with the question of negligence wholly eliminated. It has received my co-operation and support as a citizen and shall continue to have that endorsement and support in whatever position I may be called upon to fill.

As to the Otis Decision.

I cannot forego a reference to a recent court decision which has shaken Minnesota to its foundation. I refer to the findings and decree handed down last week at St. Paul by the Master in the United States Court of Appeals involving the reasonableness and validity of freight and passenger rates for Minnesota. This decision says in effect that the legislature of the state has absolutely no authority to say what shall be reasonable and fair rates for passengers and freight. It makes the State Railroad Commission a mere clerical body. It is sweeping in its scope and important not only to Minnesota but to all the states of the Union.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The State of Minnesota, acting under its sovereign constitutional authority to regulate carriers within its borders, enacted in 1906 and 1907, pursuant to the legislative messages of Governor Johnson, two laws governing railway rates:

First, a two-cent passenger rate, which has been in effect since May 1, 1907.

Second, a commodity rate law, which the state was enjoined from enforcing.

In the same period the railway commission made a reduction of merchandise freight rates which was urged by the governor and accepted by the railroads.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Great Saving Affected.

The merchandise and passenger rate acts have been in effect over three years, with a saving of $50,000 a day to the shipping and passenger public, but at the same time with such an effect in increasing traffic, that the loss of revenue to the carriers is believed to be nominal, if anything at all.

Each of these acts is confined to rates on business wholly within the state. No court, or even railroad company, ever before has questioned the power of the state to fix reasonable rates on business beginning and ending within the state.

Both federal and state constitutions, as interpreted to date, are framed on the theory that a sovereign state shall make laws for the commerce within its own borders.

The federal government has not that power; it touches only interstate commerce. Therefore, by the ruling of Judge Otis, neither state nor federal government has the authority to regulate the freight and passenger rates on business beginning and ending within the state boundaries; and the railroad company alone has that power.

In other words, the sovereign state which grants to a railroad its charter to exist and do business has no power to regulate the business arising pursuant to that charter; while, on the other hand, the company created by the state may defy the sovereign power to which it owes its life and its dividends and restore the old doctrine of "All the traffic will bear."

Favors Physical Valuation.

If this is law, it is law which a free people should make haste to amend.

The railroad problem is a complicated one. Lawyers theorize and argue the matter from varying viewpoints and the debate would be endless if we did not anchor ourselves to the single, simple proposition that a railroad performs a function of the state. When it exercises the powers of the state, it must submit to the same conditions which the state may place upon its own exercise of those functions. We have gotten past the point where a railroad could be viewed as a purely private enterprise. Men who invest in railroads voluntarily place their property in such a position that the public has acquired an interest in its use. What is that interest? It is that the railroad shall have no greater rights than the state would have if it had built these highways itself. Railroads must earn a profit. This is necessary in order that the public may benefit by their presence. A broken-down, bankrupt railroad is a pall upon the country it attempts to serve.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Railroads must earn a profit, but on what? If we turn to their stocks and bonds we cannot be safe for they have suffered from manipulation and watering. This throws the public back upon a physical valuation of the railroads and here difficulties are raised through the hostile theories of valuation advanced. But this principle should control, that the railroad is a semi-public institution; the people who must use it are semi-partners in the enterprise; that they have a right to the least possible charge for service consistent with the railroad's continuing in business and that there must be an honest showing of the actual investment in the railroad, not for speculation but for use. It is unreasonable to propose that the state can create a corporation and lose its control of its creature, and if elected Governor, I shall use every constitutional prerogative to protect and defend Minnesota's sovereign powers in this respect.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Should Extend the Primary Law.

With all its imperfection the primary election law in Minnesota has made for government by the people and freedom from the domination of special interests in the selection of candidates for public office. It has broadened the power of the masses and curtailed the power of the classes. The principal objection filed against it, that it enables voters to break over the party line, has two sides to it. There is such a thing as bide-bound partisanship that defeats patriotism and good government. I therefore favor the extension of the primary election to the nomination of state officers. The domination of powerful interests in state conventions has been so flagrant, that I believe patriotic citizens of all parties will welcome the transfer of the nominating power to the people. There is no question that the primary election has been the dominant factor in putting "stand-pat" congressmen devoted to foreign interests out of power in our commonwealth; and there is no reason why it may not do a similar service in regard to state officials who are faithless to the people.

But while I believe in a progressive extension of the primary, I also believe that it should not be possible for an insignificant minority to make nominations, nor should political parties be deprived of their privilege and duty of declaring their beliefs in delegate conventions.

Agricultural Education Is Endorsed.

Minnesota is a great agricultural state. Its resources are well-nigh boundless. It has been said of California that it has changed its staple three times and has been first in each department of endeavor; that it was originally first in gold, then first in wheat, and lastly, first in fruit. The state of Minnesota has not changed so radically but has demonstrated an adaptability to diversified crops which marks its climate as the most gracious in the world, its soil the most productive, and its people the most eager to learn in the school of intelligent work.

We have been first in wheat; we are first in quality if not in quantity of dairy products. A few years ago our farmers said, "Oh, we can't raise corn; leave that to Iowa and Illinois." Today we are raising more corn to the acre than either. Our crop has increased in six years from ten million to sixty million bushels. Our experimental stations have developed new varieties and extended our corn belt to the Canadian line. Their work in the development of new grains and grasses adds ten million dollars to the value of the total crops annually.

Such progress indicates besides having resources, that our people are intelligent in their theory of the state's development. Every county fair is a herald of new endeavor. Their exhibits, ranging from the work of rural schools to the development of blooded cattle, is a revelation to the denizen of the city who, still in his slothful ignorance, pictures the farmer as an unsophisticated child of nature doing what his father did, and in the same pioneer fashion. The farmer does not lag behind. He leads in the demand for education. He clamors for improvement. He does not deny the advantages of cultural studies but he asks as a foundation not lessons from dead languages but that education which fits men for living the whole life of a man. Our boys are learning farming in the agricultural college, and I expect to live to see the time when it will be the largest, as it is now the best, college of its kind in the land.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The science of farming needs to be brought closer and more immediately to the farmer boy. The way to keep the big boy on the farm is to show him when he is still a small boy the secrets of nature and enamor him of her conquest. The rural schools should be developed and the state should not grudge the money it will take to do it.

"Forward to the Farm."

"Back to the farm" is a bad slogan because it contains that word "back." No one likes to be turned back. It suggests coercion. Let us rather make our slogan "Forward to the Farm." When we learn to draw and not to drive we will make more progress. When we perfect means of communication we make the cry, "Forward to the Farm" of practical effect.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Good Roads a Necessity.

Good roads are the thread which weave us into one community.

If the tax levy of this state can be cut half a mill, why return 60 cents to the villager and a dollar to the farmer, and eighty thousand dollars to the steel company? Why not rather put that amount into good roads where the dollar will do two dollars' worth of work for Minnesota and the eighty thousand dollars will be contributed out of the wealth which the Creator planted under the soil of Minnesota to make the state richer in those conveniences which make for better living and happier conditions.

But reductions of the state tax levy are problematical. We can depend upon them only as an occasional accession to the good roads fund. I stand, in addition, for the proposed one mill tax and believe that an amendment embodying this feature should be submitted to the people.

Interdependence of Rural and City Life.

The discussion of rural education, good roads, and kindred topics naturally carries the mind to the relation between the city and the country. Minnesota has three magnificent cities, each as individual as three persons, each has its own peculiarities and characteristics, but I think they agree in this: that they have an intense pride in the creative part of Minnesota. The old dismal debate between trade and spade is closed. The cities of Minnesota know that their prosperity is dependent upon the growth of the country. They can advance no faster than the farmer. It has been said that we could burn all our cities and still have a great country, but we could not burn all our farms and have a single great city or a single city of any kind. Therefore, to say that country and city are at war is to fly in the face of a manifest destiny which limits the city's growth to the rate of advance of its tributary territory. The cities are not more interested in their own growth than they are in the growth of the country. Nor are the cities selfish. They are willing to carry their share of the burden of the state. They are eager to co-operate in all that makes for the best of both.

Conserve in Act as Well as Voice.

Conservation—A splendid word to conjure with. Conservation is a city as well as a country problem. The non-conservation of forests already begins to affect the city builder and the city home-maker.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The non-conservation of our public lands threatens to bring disaster upon our school fund, in which city, country and university have a vital stake. We should all be conservationists, but all of one kind—the kind which conserves for use under salutary laws and not which merely patters for the purpose of familiarizing its affrighted ears with a popular phrase.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Did you ever hear of the Mountain Iron Mine, at one time a school section belonging to the school children of the state? Its wealth would have put consolidated rural schools upon a plane that would assure the agricultural supremacy of Minnesota. Its loss is an old story; so is the treason of Arnold an old story, but it still points a moral. Where were the majority's conservationists when there was more to conserve?

Favors Conservation Department.

I believe in using all due diligence to reserve to the people their full equity in what is left, and to that end I shall, if elected, favor the creation of a Department of Conservation charged with the administration of the remaining public lands and ore beds. Such a commission might be denounced as a useless addition to the already numerous boards and commissions, but it is demonstrable that such a department composed of the right material would be of untold profit to the state. The right man at its head, and he should be chosen without regard to politics, could make himself a name second to none among the benefactors of the state.

Farmers of Minnesota Benefit.

One of the greatest triumphs of the people of Minnesota in coping with tariff-protected trusts is in the establishment of the State Prison twine and harvester plant. This institution is perhaps the most successful enterprise of its kind in which the people have made a business success in fighting a great industrial corporation. As the leading wheat-producing state in the Union, Minnesota was the special mark of the twine and harvester trust. The farmers of this state were depended upon by the harvester trust to pay a liberal share of the dividends upon its $120,000,000 capitalization.

The Minnesota State Prison plant last year turned out and sold to farmers a twine product of 15,850,000 pounds valued at nearly $1,200,000. Besides giving our farmers their twine at reduced prices, the plant turned to the credit of the taxpayers a net profit of $180,000.

Through the instrumentality of Governor Johnson, Representative Spooner, and the Board of Control, the 1907 legislature appropriated $200,000 for a harvester plant, and the state is now manufacturing harvesters and binder and mowers, over 80 binders and 200 mowers, the first output, being marketed this season.

By the active labor of Representative Spooner and the co-operation of Governor Johnson, the Board of Control and Warden Wolfer, the 1909 legislature voted a tax levy to be paid of ten annual instalments for a total of $2,250,000 for a new plant and prison that will be one of the finest in the world.

Large though this appropriation looks to the taxpayer, it is apparent from the excellent business statement shown by the Board of Control and Warden Wolfer, that the profits of the plant will eventually meet the tax levy. Both as a business proposition, and as a defense of the people against trust domination, therefore, the State harvester plant deserves and will receive, in case of my election as Governor, my most earnest support.

Problems of Taxation.

Inseparable from the question of conservation is that of taxation. The profit from the gifts of nature to the State tends to ease the direct burden laid upon agricultural land, but whether we are wise or foolish in our conservation, we shall have taxation always with us. Why should we not?

Taxation is a measure of benefits bestowed. It is a guarantee of the public peace, of orderly justice, of equal opportunity. The only problem is to make taxation as light as the needs of the state permit and as equable as the finite judgment of man can make it. Of all the forms of taxation which have been proposed there is none which appears to lay its hand more equitably upon the citizen than the income tax. It is the only tax which meets the corporation and the individual upon the same ground.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Sees Wisdom in the Majority.

There is but one issue in this campaign. It is stated in six words: "Restore the rights of the people." We have a government of balanced powers, but the foundation of it all is the people's right to self-government in an orderly manner.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

We declare that the whole people is wiser, stronger and better than any minority however benevolent in its purpose. The wisest and strongest of us is weak and foolish compared with the strength and wisdom of us all. This is the secret of the steadily growing force of democracy. It is also the secret of the wave of independent thinking and voting which has staggered the most astute party bosses and brought their most cherished plans to naught. There may come a time when the star of party regularity will again rise but for the present it is the spirit of independence which occupies the zenith.

In the town hall at Philadelphia hangs an old Bell. That bell was new once; a new spirit lay within it waiting a new gospel; the gospel of Freedom—it rang not only to the ears of the people in Philadelphia—it rang to the ears of the world. And the oppressed everywhere took to themselves courage; that spirit once freed can never be again imprisoned. But the old bell is cracked now; it is the crack of internal treachery and corruption. A bell once cracked can never ring true again. We want a new Independence bell. The metal for it is now molten in the hearts of the people—it is time to mould it and swing it high in the tower of Democracy. Already the child of the future stands at our knee and shouts, "Ring, Grandfather, Ring!"

"Ring out the old, ring in the new;
Ring out the false; ring in the true.
Ring out the grief that saps the mind;
Ring in redress for all mankind."

GRAY SEES DANGER IN OTIS DECISION

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE SAYS CONTROL OF RAILROADS BY STATE IS MENACED.

WILL FIGHT DECISION IF ELECTED

Believes Action of the Federal Master in Chancery Indicates Serious Tendency of the Times.

James Gray, democratic nominee for governor, made his first declaration on public questions in an interview commenting on the decision of Judge C. E. Otis, master in chancery, in the Minnesota railroad rate cases. Mr. Gray takes occasion in his interview to sound an alarm against impending advances in railroad rates, and pledges that if elected governor he will use every effort to prevent such a result. The Otis findings, he says, give the roads the power of control over the state, rather than the state over the roads. Mr. Gray's statement follows:

Mr. Gray's Remarks.

"Roosevelt in his recent western trip declared that the greatest danger confronting the American people is the united effort of the special interests to control the governments of both state and nation. He said the duty of the hour is to drive the special interests out of our public life.

"Roosevelt is right. These interests are trying to control the making and enforcement of the law, and through the courts, wherever they can, they are seeking to have the powers of government curtailed, and laws that are distasteful to them declared void.

Tendency of Times.

"The recent decision by the master in the federal court at St. Paul in the Minnesota rate cases is a startling illustration of the tendency of the times. The court seems to have held in these cases that the powers of the state are subordinate to the powers of the railroad companies incorporated under the laws of the state.

"It is unnecessary to say that according to the plan of our government the states have the exclusive control over all domestic matters, and the federal government has exclusive control over matters which affect the people of more than one state. On this basis the control of railroads has been divided, the states controlling the business of the railroads beginning and ending in the state, and the federal government controlling the business beginning in one state and ending in another.

Basis of Attack.

In the exercise of its power, this state, through its legislature, in 1907, passed a law reducing passenger fares to 2 cents a mile, the same rate which prevails in nearly all surrounding states. They also passed laws reducing freight rates to some extent; all these laws applying only to business beginning and ending in this state. The railroads attacked these laws in the federal courts and asked to have the state enjoined from enforcing them for two reasons: First, because it is claimed the rates are so low as not to allow the roads a reasonable profit on the business; and, second, because a change of the rates in Minnesota required the companies to make some changes in their rates in other states, and for that reason the state laws conflicted with the federal authority.

"As I have already stated, the laws themselves did not require any change of rates on business going into other states. The claim of the roads simply is that, in the interest of equality, they would feel compelled to make changes in their rates in other states to correspond with the change of the rates here, and that, therefore, Minnesota must be deprived of the right to make rates at all as to roads doing an interstate business.

State Shorn of Power.

"The master, having heard all the testimony, seems to have found with the roads on this question, and if the decision is upheld in the higher courts, its effect will be to deprive Minnesota and all other states of the power to regulate rates on business beginning and ending within their respective borders, because of its so-called indirect effect on rates outside the state.

"The decision goes farther in this regard than any decision heretofore rendered. The result of it would be probably to restore the 3-cent passenger fare in this state, but also to place all state freight rates back where they were years ago, at a much higher level than at present. It amounts to a declaration that, instead of the state having the power of control over railroads, the roads have the power of control over the state.

"The master also finds that the Minnesota rates are so low as to be confiscatory. The testimony of the railroads at the rate hearing, I am informed, was to the effect that in this state the railroads are making all their profits on their interstate business and making no profit on the business beginning and ending in the state. It is clear that they are making an enormous profit on the two classes of business, and that their gross income is high.

Rates to Be Raised.

"In the face of the situation, the newspapers inform us there is a concerted movement on the part of the roads throughout the country to raise their interstate rates. The hearing on the subject is now going on in Chicago before the Interstate commerce commission. If this movement to raise interstate rates is successful, as it is not unlikely that it will be, and the holding of the federal court that the states cannot regulate rates at all should be upheld, it is plain that the railroad problem overshadows all others in importance, and unless the people are aroused to the impending danger, they are likely to find that both interstate rates and domestic rates will be raised so high as to affect the prosperity of the country.

People Must Wake Up.

"This is, therefore, a time when the people must wake up and learn that politics affects their business, and pick out men for public places who will represent their interests and not the interests of the roads.

"The case of this state is being handled by capable men and nothing will be left undone to protect the interests of the people so far as they are concerned; but the people must realize the situation that confronts them, and it is necessary for them to assert themselves in no uncertain terms. They must let it be known that they are not going to yield the powers of government to corporations, and in this struggle I will be glad to enlist all the powers of the office of governor, should I be chosen to that high position."

GOPHERS' FUTURE ADMIRALS.

Three Candidates From Minnesota Enter Naval Academy.

Washington, D. C. — A class of 221 is shown in the list of midshipmen who will begin their studies at the United States naval academy Oct. 1. While this is an increase of 13 when compared with the number who entered the academy last year, there were more failures on the part of candidates who took the examinations than in any previous year.

A great many appointees who passed the mental examination failed to come up with the physical requirements.

Among the future admirals from Minnesota included in this year's class are: William Joseph Lahodny, Eighth district; Paul Leo Zeshaugh, Fifth district; Dalorimar Mortimer Steece, appointed by Senator M. E. Clapp.

RESTORE THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE

James Gray, Democratic Nominee for Governor Delivers Keynote Speech at Fergus Falls.

PLEDGES HIMSELF TO FOLLOW LEAD OF LIND AND JOHNSON

Commends Governor Johnson's Administration and Declares His Appointments to Office Best in History of State—Promises to Redeem Every Pledge of State Platform.

Insists Standpatters Must be Driven from State House as Well as from Congress.

DECLARES THAT THE TARIFF COMMISSION IS A BUNCO GAME

Says Brewers Not Only Brew Beer, but that They Brew Politics, Laws and Statesmen—Wants an Honest Re-Apportionment Based on Population.

A glance at the history of Minnesota politics shows that most of the state administrations have been merely episodes in the life of the State. Men rose to power through the grades, became governors and disappeared. Few of them made a mark on the history of the State. In the pioneer days of Minnesota this was to be expected. The State was new, the population sparse, the struggle for existence hard. The theory of politics was personal, social, and it sank no deeper than the personality of the men who rose to positions of power. There were notable exceptions to be sure. John S. Pillsbury was the idol of the State and did a great work for the University. Knute Nelson had, I believe, a real call from the people. His administration was able, conscientious and in some ways fearless. His promotion to the office of senator before he had completed his work thrust the administration back into the soggy condition from which it had arisen. Governor Van Sant was elected on no definite theory of reform. He had, by party activity and party service, at least earned the nomination and got it. But Governor Van Sant had an opportunity and rose to it. He denounced the merger of the parallel lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and by his stand smashed the Northern Securities Company. It was a flash of light upon the railroad problem but it was after all but a flame caught from the spark struck off by the previous administration of John Lind, who put a stop to an attempted similar merger of the St. Paul & Duluth and Eastern Minnesota. With these exceptions, I claim that broad, constructive work for the people began with the administration of John Lind, who was elected in 1898, and has been continued to this day, nearly all of the time under Democratic executives, and must continue if Minnesota is to have a place alongside of Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, where the rights of the people have been restored rather than to fall back in the class of New Hampshire, Vermont and other states which have never awakened to the problems at their doors.

Six years ago, in pursuance of this forward policy, the people of Minnesota chose John A. Johnson governor. Two years later they re-elected him as an endorsement of his administration. Two years later still, though Governor Johnson protested against the third term idea, they fairly drove him into office to continue the work which he had so well begun. No such contingency as the death of the Governor in office was contemplated by the people nor provided against in their votes. It seldom happens that the people do so provide. In our national politics there have been repeated efforts to obtain a symmetrical ticket, to name for vice-president a man who could take the reins in case of the president's removal and carry forward his work. They usually have failed and some man has been nominated for vice-president who could carry his state. There have been exceptions of course. The Democratic standard bearers in 1888 were Cleveland and Thurman, a ticket big at both ends. The Republicans had in 1884, Blaine and Logan, a balanced ticket; in 1900, McKinley and Roosevelt, a remarkable conjunction of cool sagacity and fiery impetuosity, a ticket, the election of which and the demise of McKinley was fraught with the most momentous results. Without disparagement of Mr. McKinley, it must be said that the succession of Roosevelt was providential. It marked the definite breaking away from the old time politics of government of the trusts, by the trusts, and for the trusts, back to government of the people. Roosevelt restored the rights of the people. The revolution which he began has gone so far that I am persuaded that "neither height nor depth nor any other creature" shall ever again separate the people of America from those rights.

The line of bosses which threatened to stretch out like Banquo's descendants "to the crack of doom," has been broken. The men who substituted the previous questions for the open debate, the back office for the free assembly, the corridor whisper for the open appeal, who in short pulled down the blinds on the people's business, have received their notice to quit. They have been routed out of their stalls, scourged from the temple, their money boxes overturned, their jeer of triumph turned to gasping dismay. Before them the people of America lift up their heads and "sing a new song unto the Lord."

> In the repeated elections of John A. Johnson we saw enacted on the smaller stage of Minnesota exactly the same drama that Roosevelt enacted in the nation. Under his great administration, the people once more ruled. Do you think they will tamely give up their new-found rights? Do you think that they will restore to power in the state capitol stand-patters while they are hurling stand-patters out of Congress? The thing does not sound reasonable.

I stand here to claim that the deplorable incident of Governor Johnson's death, a severe blow to the State and a probable loss to the nation, made no difference in the political position. The people did not contemplate his death in office. They elected him with the one thought that he deserved their confidence and that no one else should supplant him. That he did deserve their confidence you have abundant proof in legislation for the people, in popular government, in exceptional appointments, in untiring watchfulness over your interests. Therefore, I say that though by the death of the Governor the Democracy is de facto out of power, it is de jure in power. It is for you to say whether you will continue the forward movement or to take the chance of a backward step.

Will Follow Lind and Johnson

> For myself, permit me to say that I sat in the first convention which nominated John A. Johnson. I spoke for him through the State in 1904 and I then stated in the same language that I state it today that John A. Johnson would restore the rights of the people. If I should be elected, it will be my highest ambition to walk in the path blazed by John Lind and made plain by John A. Johnson. I shall not do this as an imitator but as one who is not too dull to do the right because some other man has done it before him. There is no pre-emption of truth and duty.

Proud of Democracy's Administrators.

Now, what did six years of executive Democracy do for you? It gave you, first, an inspiration to be your own masters. It gave you, second, concrete examples of exceptional administration. It gave you, third, advanced but just and popular legislation. It gave you, fourth, a series of executive appointments in efficiency second to none in the Union.

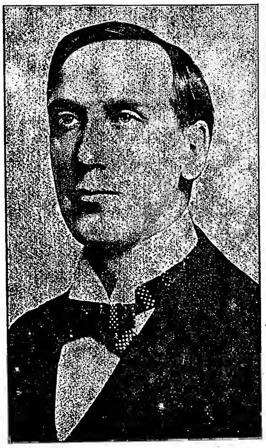
Governor Johnson appointed William E. McEwen, Labor Commissioner, and he has created the best department of its kind in the country. He named E. K. Slater and Andrew French to the Dairy and Food Department and their work has penetrated to the humblest farm hand and piled up profit for Minnesota in improved farm methods. He appointed Thos. D. O'Brien, now a Justice of the Supreme Court, Insurance Commissioner, and he raised that department so high that his work was commended in a special message to Congress by the President of the United States. Did any Republican Insurance Commissioner ever get such an endorsement?

Johnson's Appointments Commended.

In the big board appointments Gov. Johnson was especially sagacious and for-seeing. His appointment of Prof. Frank L. McVay to the Tax commission was non-partisan. It was followed by splendid service in organizing the board, a service interrupted only by his call to the higher position of president of the University of our neighbor, North Dakota. Samuel Lord, a Republican senator, reflected honor on the appointing power and Judge O. M. Hall and J. G. Armson brought profound knowledge and ripe experience to the commission. Service was the first thought of all. Capt. Anton Schaeffer and P. M. Kerst, in the public examiner's department; John B. Gelerncault at the head of the banking department; John W. Olson and C. G. Schulz, successive heads of our state educational department; Fred B. Wood, the adjutant general; John A. Hartigan, a worthy successor to Mr. O'Brien in the insurance department; all these men reflected credit upon the appointing power and shared in the inspiration of the governor's office.

In even a greater degree the appointments to the Board of Control, the late L. A. Rosing, P. M. Ringdal, Chas. E. Vasaly and Charles Halverson, have been justified by the high rank that their members have taken. But I call your attention particularly to the fact that the distinguishing characteristic of these men and others that he named was that they were men of the people and for the people. They restored the people's rights in everything that they did.

JAMES GRAY



DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

> There is but one issue in this campaign. It is stated in six words: "Restore the rights of the people." We have a government of balanced powers, but the foundation of it all is the people's right to self-government in an orderly manner.

Who Reduced the Rates.

Under Gov. Lind, the first step was taken in Minnesota towards a reduction of freight rates. Gov. Johnson continued that work. Under the head of major legislation, I call attention to his part in the reduction of 1906 accepted by the railroads and ever since in force, saving millions of dollars to shippers and hence to consumers. He laid his hand gently but firmly on the legislature in the matter of passenger rates and you got your two cent fare.

I have not the time nor is it necessary to go into detail. You know his work. You know too the spirit in which he did it. Without vindictiveness, in the spirit of inquiry, of investigation, of patient endeavor to know the right and to do it, without fear or favor, he went about his duties. All we ask in this campaign is that you allow us to continue that work in the same spirit and I promise you that if elected, I shall neither neglect, shirk, nor evade it.

To Redeem Platform Promises.

How do we propose to do it? By carrying out so far as we may be entrusted with power, the promises of the Democratic platform adopted at Minneapolis, July 28th, 1910. That platform concerns itself mainly with state matters but naturally it has a wider outlook.

It opens with a reference to national affairs, and the tariff bill. Properly, it denounces the enactment of the Payne-Aldrich law as a "base and cynical deception." I do not think I am partisan in adding my voice to that denunciation. If I am so charged, I will respond by calling the roll of Republican senators and representatives upon the passage of that bill: Knute Nelson, Republican Senator for 18 years,—no. Moses E. Clapp, Republican Senator for 12 years,—no. Chas. R. Davis,—no. F. C. Stevens,—no. Frank M. Nye,—no. Chas. A. Lindbergh,—no. Andrew Volstead,—no. Clarence B. Miller,—no. Halvor Steenerson,—no. Jas. A. Tawney,—yes. And where is Tawney now?

Chairman Payne, in a speech the other day, said he was proud of the tariff bill, because it raised revenue. Great God! has it come to this in America that revenue can be raised only by breaking the backs of the poor? If he is proud of the tariff bill he is proud of the fact that while cotton mills make 60 per cent, the men in the cotton industry average $426 a year; that mule spinners in the highly protected Massachusetts woolen factories average $13.16 a week, dyers $8.58, and weavers $11.60.

He is proud of the fact that the wool schedule declared by President Taft to be indefensible was made by the wool men and not by the Congress of the United States, as was amply proven by Senator Dolliver of Iowa. He is proud of the fact that the Guggenheims, through the tariff on zinc, are enabled to tax every dish-pan in the kitchen, without adding one cent to the national revenue. He is proud of the fact that through the rubber schedule the pals of Aldrich raised the price of every piece of rubber goods made, from the child's doll to the surgical appliance needed when you are sick, and again without raising revenue, for we are exporters of manufactures of rubber, and our imports amount to nothing. He is proud of the stocking tax; proud of the clothing tax; proud of the enormous tax on women's gloves, heaviest I believe on the class of gloves which the wives of workingmen wear. He is proud of the lumber tax which hastens the destruction of our forests, nullifies conservation and makes it harder for you to own a home. He is proud of the tax on wood pulp which tends to restrict a free press, as no doubt Mr. Payne believes it should be restricted for his own personal comfort.

The High Cost of Living.

He is, by inference, proud of the high cost of living and no doubt joins fervently with a certain rich man who declares it is not the high cost of living but the cost of high living which ails us. Possibly there is something in this claim. Possibly a man who can put out thirty million dollars of stocks, who can count a million as his income, knows something about the cost of high living. Such a man, with an income of say, $500,000 a year, can by cutting off some extravagances reduce his expenses to $250,000 and save $250,000 for a rainy day, but I fail to see where a spinner at $13.16 a week can follow this patriotic example. He cannot live on $6.58 a week. He knows nothing of high living unless it is living on very "high" beef, delivered to him at a very high price by a most high and mighty beef trust.

The Tariff Commission Bunco.

The man who has the kind of pride which Chairman Payne flaunts publicly should connect himself with a coat of sackcloth and ashes. He is alone in his strange joy. The President does not laugh with him. He has rushed into the breach with a cure for the failures of the bill. He would have a Commission to revise the tariff. He would not sink the knife of justice into its vitals, but he would cut off its legs, its arms and finally its head. The President shows more good common sense in this than the regular stand-patters, but why should we have a Commission to report to a President who has once shown himself weak on this very question? Why should we not have a Commission, which would report to the Congress of the United States, and why should we not have a Congress who would receive and act upon that report? Maine is the only state which has been heard from since the Tariff Commission was appointed and Maine says, "By all means, bring in a revision. We will send a senator and two representatives who will stand for the rights of the people." Other states will say the same in November.

Endorses True Insurgents.

Our platform also commends the insurgent congressmen who voted against the Tariff Bill and says to Lindbergh and Davis, "We trust you and support you while this important business is up. Go back and finish your work for the people." This is an unselfish stand to take and ought to be reciprocated. The insurgents are worthy of all praise for repudiating Cannonism in the House, but in the language of the Revolutionary poet,

"On Vernon's Chief, why lavish all your boys,
Come, honest Muse, and sing great
Marion's praise."

While we honor the insurgents, we remember that they numbered but twenty-nine. Why forget the one hundred eighty-seven Democrats without whose votes the insurgents could do nothing? The insurgents were the generals in this battle, but there had to be privates also. The Democrats in the House carried the musket and in that all-night fight, they bivouacked on their arms and slept not, neither did they slumber until stand-patism hoisted the white flag.

Direct Vote for United States Senators.

The connecting link between the state and the nation is the senator from the sovereign state. He has a six-year term. He survives sudden political upheavals. He is a balance in the government. The makers of the Constitution thought when they gave the House members a short term and made them directly elective, they had sufficiently offset the indirect choice of senators, but far-seeing men as they were, they could not project their vision into the future and see that one day there would grow up in America organized aggregations of capital representing protected interests, transportation interests, brewing interests, which would take the shortest cut to control the Government. These aggregations did arise; they did take the shortest cut; they went with unerring wisdom to the control of the Senate as the key to the citadel. The people might fulminate every two years against a recreant House; they might every four years dethrone a vacillating President, but so long as the interests could erect a Senate wall and man it with watchmen, whom Senator Beveridge has aptly denominated "Deal Masters," they were safe. To tear down that wall; to hurl these "Deal Masters" into the moat, we must restore the rights of the people in the Senate.

It can be done only by the direct election of the Senators. I know that there are objections to this plan. I know that the people are occasionally fooled and there are times when a popular candidate for senator is a poor senator, but all carpings aside, the indefeasible right of the people to this protection from government of the interests and by the interests must not and shall not be denied.

Direct Legislation Endorsed.

Closely connected with this question is a similar one—that of direct legislation, known as the initiative and the referendum and the recall. A few years ago this was called a chimera. Those were the days when a senator of the United States cynically declared "the purification of our politics is an irridescent dream." But our dreams do sometimes come true. Men dreamed once that taxation without representation was tyranny and woke to drive it as a fact into every heart of Great Britain. Men dreamed again that the auction block might be destroyed, and woke to find themselves in front of Appomattox. Men dreamed again that their government might be made responsive to justice and truth, and woke to find themselves clasping hands with Roosevelt. Dreams do sometimes come true.

The initiative and referendum is already applied in our best city charters. Councils are not permitted to grant franchises without a vote of the people. Mayors and Councilmen in many cities are subject to the recall. In every case where it has been invoked, it has worked for good government. It has been a salutary estop upon bribery and corruption, which though often known, in court result in verdicts of not proven. It has been tried in states and has worked exceptionally well. It is correlated with the popular primary and belongs to that class of legislation which should be advanced cautiously but firmly. It belongs to the revolution which cannot go backward.

John Lind Sounded the Keynote.

> Eleven years ago, in his message to the Legislature, Governor Lind said, "Direct legislation involves the introduction of no new principles in our government. There are no stronger reasons for trusting the people to pass upon men than upon measures."

The people now have the power to initiate reforms and legislation in the matter of locating county seats and in some municipal undertakings. This power, with proper restrictions as to time and frequency as to its exercise, should be extended to other important questions. By the provisions of our Constitution the people now have the veto power at the polls on any legislation by which it is proposed to change our present laws governing railroad taxation. We, therefore, are already committed to the principle involved in the second branch of the question. The Constitution, in my judgment, should be so amended as to enable a minority in the Legislature, by appropriate action, to refer enactments, at least such as extend to corporate privileges without authorizing the granting of franchises, to a vote of the people before becoming operative.

Declares for County Option.

The Democratic platform says: "That all questions affecting the moral, political and economical welfare of the people should be directly subject to the conscience and will of the people." Under this paragraph, I believe I have the right to state my views on the so-called County Option method of controlling the liquor traffic. In my opinion County Option does not mean prohibition, though all methods of restricting the liquor traffic have a prohibitive quality. When we say what license shall be charged, we put a prohibition upon the man who cannot pay the amount. When we say in what hours and on what days liquor may be sold we put a partial prohibition on the business. When we say, as we have said in Minneapolis, that five-sixths of the city shall not have saloons, we put a partial prohibition on the traffic. We call it by its right name—regulation.

> County Option is but another form of regulation. It says, in effect, that the people of a county shall have the right to vote whether they will have saloons or not have saloons. Who in this day, whatever his politics, will deny the people that right? But, as I view it, this is not a liquor question at all. It is a question of the rights of the people.

Brews Politics as Well as Beer.

> I think that if the brewing business had not changed its attitude after high license was adopted, this question might not have arisen, at least not until a future date, but that change has come. The people of Minnesota today find that the big brewing interest brews beer only half the time. The rest of the time it brews politics, brews laws, and brews statesmen to carry its errands. It has reached a pass when scarcely any question can be decided on its merits.

Legislation has devolved into a contest between the public and certain interests, of which the brewer is the

A Superstitious Musician.

Schumann was always inclined to superstition. When he visited Beethoven's grave at Vienna he found a rusty steel pen lying on it. This he carefully and reverently preserved and afterward used in writing his B flat symphony, believing that it would bring him inspiration. But this superstition, harmless enough in his early years, became accentuated later in an alarming manner. He began to take an unhealthy interest in table turning and spirit rapping. He was, moreover, intensely influenced by dreams and omens. One night he dreamed that the spirits of Mendelssohn and Schubert appeared to him and gave him a theme which he afterward wrote down and developed.

A Mistaken Cue.

It was exhibition day at No. 3, and as the parents of Jack Grady, the dullest pupil, were listening hopefully the teacher tried her best to help the boy.

"How did Charles I. of England die?" she asked, assigning the easiest question on her list to Jack.

As he looked at her, with no indication of a coming answer, the teacher put her hand up to her neck. Jack saw the movement and understood its meaning, as he thought.

"Charles I. of England died of cholera," he announced briskly.—Youth's Companion.

The application of Anton Anderson for liquor license at Wylie was laid on the table until such time as the board is fully satisfied that the building wherein liquors are to be sold is fully 1500 feet from the school house.

Motion made by Commissioner Demann, duly seconded by Commissioner Pigeon and carried unanimously that John Drier be paid at the rate of $3.00 per day as night watchman for watching the county court house property from the 22nd day of August, 1910, Sundays included, until the further order of this board.

The engineer appointed by this board was granted until October 1st, 1910, in which to file his report on county ditches Nos. 51 and 52.

Resolution.

Whereas, Lars Lian and others did on the 29th day of March, 1902, file with the county auditor of Red Lake county, a petition for the establishment of a public ditch in the towns of North and Rocksbury in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota hereafter referred to as Rocksbury-North Ditch No. 1,

And whereas, the said Lars Lian and others did on the 8th day of April, 1902, duly file with the county auditor of said Red Lake county, a petitioner's bond as required by law;

And whereas, after due notice being given, the board of county commissioners of said Red Lake county did on the 19th day of May, 1902, by resolution at a special session of said board, appoint George A. Ralph as engineer to make a survey of said proposed ditch and file his report of such survey on or before the 10th day of June, 1902, which said resolution appointing said George A. Ralph as engineer, was duly filed in the office of the county auditor of said Red Lake county on the 19th day of May, 1902;

And whereas the said George A. Ralph did on the 19th day of May, 1902, file his oath as such engineer appointed by the resolution of said board on said 19th day of May, 1902;

And whereas, the said George A. Ralph did on the 19th day of May, 1902, execute and deliver to said Red Lake county his bond in the sum of two thousand and No—100 dollars conditioned that he would diligently, honestly and to the best of his ability and skill perform his duties as such engineer in connection with the survey and supervision of the construction of said ditch, which said bond was also signed by Chas. N. Bourdon and John A. Duffy as sureties and which said bond was duly filed in the office of the county auditor of said county on the 19th day of May, 9102;

And whereas, the said George A. Ralph, as such engineer, did on the 4th day of August, 1902, file his report on the survey made on said proposed ditch, in the office of the county auditor in said Red Lake county;

And whereas, the board of county commissioners of said Red Lake county did on the 4th day of August, 1902, appoint viewers on said proposed ditch and said viewers having taken their oaths, performed their duties, did thereafter file their report with the county auditor of said Red Lake county;

And whereas, after due notice and other due and proper proceedings had as provided by law, the said board of county commissioners of said Red Lake county did duly make its order establishing said ditch on the 11th day of September, 1902;

And whereas, the county auditor of said Red Lake county did, on the 23rd day of October, 1902, and after due notice having been given, duly sell the jobs of digging and constructing the entire work of said ditch to Wm. Eickhoff; that on the 27th day of October, 1902, the said Wm. Eickhoff entered into a contract to make all the excavation on said ditch; that said Wm. Eickhoff gave a bond in the sum of $11,500.00 conditioned that said Wm. Eickhoff would complete said ditch according to the terms of said contract; that thereafter the said Wm. Eickhoff did begin work on said excavating of said ditch, but did never complete the same;

And whereas, the said George A. Ralph by himself or his authorized assistant did, between the 14th day of July, 1903, and the 5th day of January, 1905, make six different estimates which estimates aggregating in all called for the payment of $5,500.00 were filed in the office of the county auditor of Red Lake county and the county auditor relying on the estimates so furnished by the said George A. Ralph and his authorized assistant did pay to the said Wm. Eickhoff the sums as shown by said estimates, amounting in all to $5,500.00.

And whereas, the work and amount of work as shown to have been done, by said reports and estimates given by said George A. Ralph and his authorized assistant, has never been done and said ditch is now incomplete;

And whereas, this board of county commissioners does believe that overpayments have been made to said Wm. Eickhoff, by reason of the negligence of the said George A. Ralph or his duly authorized assistant;

And whereas, the said George A. Ralph and his sureties on his bond have refused and neglected to cause said ditch to be completed or to reimburse the county of Red Lake for moneys that have been paid to said Wm. Eickhoff over and above the amounts to which he was justly entitled and which overpayments were made relying upon that certificates and estimates made by said George A. Ralph or his assistant were correct and that the work as shown thereby had been actually done;

And whereas, there is now only the sum of $180.06 left in the treasury out of the amount that was to be paid for the construction of said ditch and that it is estimated that it will cost the sum of $700.00 to complete said work in excavating and completing said ditch;

And whereas, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county is desirous to see said ditch completed so that it will properly serve the purposes for which it was intended.

Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the county auditor be instructed to advertise for bids for the completion of said ditch and that when said ditch is completed and the amount of the cost to complete the same has been ascertained that steps be taken to recover said amount, over and above said $180.06 which is left in the treasury for the completion of said ditch, from any person or persons by whose neglect, refusal or failure of duty has caused said loss, if any, to fall on said county of Red Lake.

Commissioner Aubol offered the foregoing resolution and moved its adoption.

Which resolution and motion was seconded by Commissioner Johnson.

Upon roll call of the commissioners the following commissioners voted yea: Lindquist, Demann, Aubol, Johnson and Pigeon.

Whereupon the chairman declared the said resolution duly adopted,

The Memory Machine.

Amnesia, or loss of memory, is chiefly interesting to the psychologists as throwing some light on the nature of memory itself. A perfect act of memory consists of three distinct acts—preservation or fixation of certain states of the nerve cells, reproduction of these and, perhaps most remarkable of all, recognition of them as reproductions in their relations. Morbid states of the memory may refer to any of these phases of an act which is as marvelous as anything in nature. There are about 3,000,000,000 nerve cells in the surface of the human brain. They never die in health, and they are never replaced or added to. This is memory's machine.

"Whuppity Scoorie."

The ancient custom at Lanark, Scotland, of "Whuppity Scoorie," the origin and meaning of which are lost, is celebrated annually and watched by a crowd of grownups. The town bell is rung nightly at 6 o'clock from March to September and then lies dumb for six months. On the first night of the ringing all the young folk congregate at the cross, and after parading three times round the parish church the Lanark lads meet the New Lanark boys in a free fight, in which the only legitimate weapons are their caps tied at the end of pieces of string.

up to as a leader. He had stamped upon it the seal of Democracy. They could no less than consider his view and give weight to his arguments. As Mr. Lawler said the other day in St. Paul, the Democracy holds no brief for the brewers. It is in a position to consider the question on its merits.

A Referendum Vote.

Moreover by a logical process of reasoning in which there is no flaw Mr. Grey has demonstrated that the same principle which is behind the initiative and referendum of which the Democratic party approves is also at the base of county option. It is nothing more nor less than the application of principle to the question of license. It is left for the people to say. If they want saloons they can have them. If they don't want them they can reject them. That is all there is to the matter.

The Influence of a Leader.

Since the man selected as a candidate for governor has come out squarely on this issue, county option is now receiving more serious consideration than at any previous time. Mr. Grey's argument after first being rejected by perhaps a majority of the Democrats, is now being weighed. In many cases it will be accepted on its merits, in others support will be given him under protest. In a few instances Democrats will be arrayed against him. How his strength will be lost in this way it will be impossible now to say. The probability is that the fraction of votes that will accept Eberhart as a protest against the stand taken by Mr. Gray will be very small indeed.

Where are Optionists at?

In the mean time those who profess to favor county option are being tried out. Their earnestness is being put to the test. They have now the choice between supporting the candidate who has come out flat-footed for county option and burned his bridges behind him and the candidate who, while he has promised to sign a county option bill, is known to have the support of the liquor interests on the theory that he will do everything to prevent such a bill being presented to him for signature. No one familiar with the political manipulation of the Republican party hesitates to believe that Governor Eberhart is still the errand boy.

Other Issues.

Nor is county option the only question on which lines are squarely drawn. Of even greater importance in the minds of many is the transportation question. The decision of Judge Otis has emphasized the necessity of having a governor who will stand squarely for the rights of the people and the rights of the state. The man at the head of the state administration for the next two years should be a man of backbone. He should not be tied up to any special interest. He should have incurred no obligations which will prevent him doing his full duty to the shippers and consumers of the state.

The Men Behind.

Now what are the facts? To whom if not to the associated interests does Governor Eberhart owe his nomination? His association with Great Northern officials has become notorious. The Democratic party on entering the campaign finds itself up against a solid wall of railroad corporation opposition. The management of the Republican campaign is in the hands of the tried and trusted agent of the special interests, confided to him at the insistant request of the Republican nominee for governor. These things were not done under a bushel. They were known and heard of all men. Assuming that Mr. Eberhart is elected governor, what sort of a position will he be in, considering the obligations he has incurred, to stand up firmly and squarely against railroad aggression. This is one of the questions the voters are asking themselves, and with good reason. The support given Eberhart by the liquor interests tie his hands in any movement of any kind for temperance reform. The support his friends solicit and he gladly accepts from the railroad interests leaves them with power over him which they will not hesitate to use should occasion require. This is already seen in his efforts to shift all responsibility for the case for the state on the shoulders of counsel employed by his predecessor. The fact is Governor Eberhart has never taken that active personal interest in the suits the government has been called upon to defend that the people have a right to expect from a man in his position.

As to the Bench.

The decision Judge Otis has just rendered emphasizing another thing: namely the imperative need there is at this time of electing men to the supreme bench without bias in favor of railroad corporations. Above anything the courts should be in position to administer justice without fear of favor. The Republican convention, dominated as it was by the special interests, made but one exception in the members of the supreme bench seeking reelection. Singularly enough the judge to whom they presented a determined opposition was the man who, before his appointment to the position he now holds, was the one member of the bench who had contended for the rights of the people which Judge Otis in his decision has denied them. No criticism of Mr. O'Brien's fitnes has ever been made. He was recognized by Republicans and Democrats alike as a man in every way qualified to discharge the highest judicial duties. The people may, of course, consent to his exclusion on the feeble pretense that he does not belong to the Republican party. Where the interests are concerned they never question a man's political affiliations. Their only question is whether he will serve them. If the people are as fully alive to their own interests they will insist on Judge O'Briens' retention,

Another Corporation Befriended.

During the past week we have seen the singular spectacle of an attorney rejecting a retainer offered by the state on the ground openly stated that the attorney general was unfriendly to the execution of the law and the enforcement of the decrees of the Supreme court. The case is one that has been long in one form or another in litigation. It was the one cases tried in this state in which a corporation practiceing a monopoly and suppressing competition by the method corporations ordinarily employ had been dissolved. It was that of the Creamery Package Manufacturing Company dealing in the creamery supplies farmers co-operative creameries have to buy. Attorney Leach of Owatonna had been employed by the state to conduct the case when E. T. Young was attorney general. He won the suit in the lower court. It was appealed in behalf of the corporation to the supreme court. There the state as represented by Mr. Leach was successful also. The Creamery Package Company was found to be a combination in restraint of trade and was ordered to quit business.

Mankato Influence.

But the Creamery Package Company was in business in Mankato which accidentally is the home of Governor Eberhart. The town had no doubt some benefit as the result of the erection of a factory there. Charges are now made by Owatonna parties interested that Attorney General Simpson is using dilatory tactics in not enforcing the order of the court.

A Peculiar Situation.

This, it appears, Mr. Simpson does not deny. "I am anxious to save the concern for Mankato," he is reported to have said, "but if the concern is to operate in restraint of trade in any manner, I certainly will not consent to any modification of the court's order." This is, to say the least, peculiar language for the head of the state's legal department to use after both the District and the Supreme court had decided that the corporation was acting in restraint of trade. The interests find it of great advantage in Minnesota in having friends at court.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants deserted. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found. A ladder out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned. During the excitement a man stole into the house. A search failed to reveal him. Miss Innes shot an intruder. A man limping was seen on the road.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

"Did they go toward the club?" Gertrude asked suddenly, leaning forward.

"No, miss. I think they came into the village. I didn't get a look at their faces, but I know every chick and child in the place, and everybody knows me. When they didn't shout at me—in my uniform, you know—I took it they were strangers."

So all we had for our afternoon's work was this: Some one had been shot by the bullet that went through the door; he had not left the village, and he had not called in a physician. Also, Dr. Walker knew who Lucien Wallace was, and his very denial made me confident that, in that one direction at least, we were on the right track.

"Gertrude," I said, "I have been a very selfish old woman. You are going to leave this miserable house tonight. Annie Morton is going to Scotland next week, and you shall go right with her."

To my surprise, she flushed painfully.

"I don't want to go, Aunt Ray," she said. "Don't make me leave now."

"You are losing your health and your good looks," I said decidedly. "You should have a change."

"I shan't stir a foot." She was equally decided. Then, more lightly: "Why, you and Liddy need me to arbitrate between you every day in the week."

Perhaps I was growing suspicious of every one, but it seemed to me that Gertrude's gayety was forced and artificial. I watched her covertly during the rest of the drive, and I did not like the two spots of crimson in her pale cheeks. But I said nothing more about sending her to Scotland; I knew she would not go.

CHAPTER XXV.

A Visit from Louise.

That day was destined to be an eventful one, for when I entered the house and found Eliza ensconced in the upper hall on a chair, with Mary Anne doing her best to stifle her with household ammonia, and Liddy rubbing her wrists—whatever good that is supposed to do—I knew that the ghost had been walking again, and this time in daylight.

Eliza was in a frenzy of fear. She clutched at my sleeve when I went close to her, and refused to let go until she had told her story. Coming just after the fire, the household was demoralized, and it was no surprise to me to find Alex and the under-gardener struggling downstairs with a heavy trunk between them.

"I didn't want to do it, Miss Innes," Alex said. "But she was so excited I was afraid she would do as she said—drag it down herself, and scratch the staircase."

I was trying to get my bonnet off and to keep the maids quiet at the same time. "Now, Eliza, when you have washed your face and stopped bawling," I said, "come into my sitting room and tell me what has happened."

Liddy put away my things without speaking. The very set of her shoulders expressed disapproval.

"Well," I said, when the silence became uncomfortable, "things seem to be warming up."

Silence from Liddy, and a long sigh.

"If Eliza goes, I don't know where to look for another cook." More silence.

"Rosie is probably a good cook." Sniff.

"Liddy," I said at last, "don't dare to deny that you are having the time of your life. You positively gloat in this excitement. You never looked better. It's my opinion all this running around, and getting jolted out of a rut, has stirred up that torpid liver of yours."

"It's not myself I'm thinking about," she said, goaded into speech. "Maybe my liver was torpid, and maybe it wasn't; but I know this: I've got some feelings left, and to see you standing at the foot of that staircase shootin' through the door—I'll never be the same woman again."

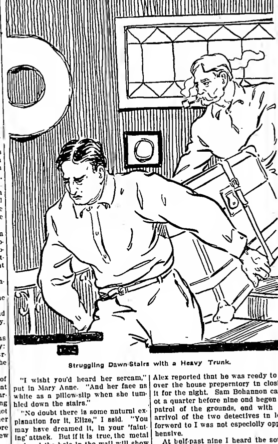
"Well, I'm glad of that—anything for a change," I said. And in came Eliza, flanked by Rosie and Mary Anne.

Her story, broken with sobs and corrections from the other two, was this: At two o'clock (2:15, Rosie insisted) she had gone upstairs to get a picture from her room to show Mary Anne. (A picture of a lady, Mary Anne interposed.) She went up the servants' staircase and along the corridor to her room, which lay between the trunk-room and the unfinished ballroom. She heard a sound as she went down the corridor like some one moving furniture, but she was not nervous. She thought it might be men examining the house after the fire the night before, but she looked in the trunkroom and saw nobody.

She went into her room quietly. The noise had ceased and everything was quiet. Then she sat down on the side of her bed, and, feeling faint—she was subject to spells—("I told you that when I came, didn't I, Rosie?" "Yes'm, indeed she did!")—she put her head down on her pillow and—

"Took a nap. All right!" I said. "Go on."

"When I came to, Miss Innes, sure as I'm sittin' here, I thought I'd die. Somethin' hit me in the face, and I set up, sudden. And then I seen the plaster drop, droppin' from a little hole in the wall. And the last thing I knew, an iron bar that long (fully two yards by her measure) 'shot through that hole and tumbled on the bed. If I'd been still sleeping" ("Fainting," corrected Rosie) "I'd 'a' been hit on the head and killed!"



Struggling Down Stairs with a Heavy Trunk.

"I wisht you'd heard her scream," put in Mary Anne. "And her face as white as a pillow-slip when she tumbled down the stairs."

"No doubt there is some natural explanation for it, Eliza," I said. "You may have dreamed it, in your 'fainting' attack. But if it is true, the metal rod and the hole in the wall will show it."

Eliza looked a little bit sheepish.

"The hole's there all right, Miss Innes," she said. "But the bar was gone when Mary Anne and Rosie went up to pack my trunk."

"That wasn't all," Liddy's voice came funereally from a corner. "Eliza said that from the hole in the wall a burning eye looked down at her!"

"The wall must be at least six inches thick," I said with asperity. "Unless the person who drilled the hole carried his eyes on the ends of a stick, Eliza couldn't possibly have seen them."

But the fact remained, and a visit to Eliza's room proved it. I might jeer all I wished; some one had drilled a hole in the unfinished wall of the ballroom, passing between the bricks of the partition, and shooting through the unresisting plaster of Eliza's room with such force as to send the rod flying on to her bed. I had gone upstairs alone, and I confess the thing puzzled me; in two or three places in the wall small apertures had been made, none of them of any depth. Not the least mysterious thing was the disappearance of the iron implement that had been used.

Mary Anne and Eliza left that afternoon, but Rosie decided to stay. It was about five o'clock when the hack came from the station to get them, and, to my amazement, it had an occupant. Matthew Geist, the driver, asked for me, and explained his errand with pride.

"I've brought you a cook, Miss Innes," he said. "When the message came to come up for two girls and their trunks I supposed there was something doing, and as this here woman had been looking for work in the village I thought I'd bring her along."

Already I had acquired the true suburbanite ability to take servants on faith; I no longer demanded written and unimpeachable references. I, Rachel Innes, have learned not to mind if the cook sits down comfortably in my sitting room when she is taking the orders for the day, and I am grateful if the silver is not cleaned with scouring soap. And so that day I merely told Liddy to send the new applicant in. When she came, however, I could hardly restrain a gasp of surprise. It was the woman with the pitted face.

She stood somewhat awkwardly just inside the door, and she had an air of self-confidence that was inspiring. Yes, she could cook; was not a fancy cook, but could make good soups and desserts if there was any one to take charge of the salads. And so, in the end, I took her. As Halsey said, when we told him, it didn't matter much about the cook's face if it was clean.

I have spoken of Halsey's restlessness. On that day it seemed to be more than ever a restless impulse that kept him out until after luncheon. I think he hoped constantly that he might meet Louise driving over the hills in her runabout; possibly he did meet her occasionally, but from his continued gloom I felt sure the situation between them was unchanged.

Part of the afternoon I believe he read—Gertrude and I were out, as I have said, and at dinner we both noticed that something had occurred to distract him. He was disagreeable, which is unlike him, nervous, looking at his watch every few minutes, and he ate almost nothing. He asked twice during the meal on what train Mr. Jamieson and the other detective were coming, and had long periods of abstraction during which he dug his fork into my damask cloth and did not hear when he was spoken to. He refused dessert, and left the table early, excusing himself on the ground that he wanted to see Alex.

Alex, however, was not to be found. It was after eight when Halsey ordered the car and started down the hill at a pace that, even for him, was unusually reckless. Shortly after Alex reported that he was ready to go over the house preparatory to closing it for the night. Sam Bohannon came at a quarter before nine and began his patrol of the grounds, and with the arrival of the two detectives to look forward to I was not especially apprehensive.

At half-past nine I heard the sound of a horse driven furiously up the drive. It came to a stop in front of the house and immediately after there were hurried steps on the veranda. Our nerves were not what they should have been, and Gertrude, always apprehensive lately, was at the door almost instantly. A moment later Louise had burst into the room and stood there bareheaded and breathing hard.

"Where is Halsey?" she demanded. Above her plain black gown her eyes looked big and somber, and the rapid drive had brought no color to her face. I got up and drew forward a chair.

"He has not come back," I said quietly. "Sit down, child; you are not strong enough for this kind of thing."

I don't think she even heard me.

"He has not come back?" she asked, looking from me to Gertrude. "Do you know where he went? Where can I find him?"

"For heaven's sake, Louise," Gertrude burst out, "tell us what is wrong. Halsey is not here. He has gone to the station for Mr. Jamieson. What has happened?"

"To the station, Gertrude? You are sure?"

"Yes," I said. "Listen. There is the whistle of the train now."

She relaxed a little at our matter-of-fact tone, and allowed herself to sink into a chair.

"Perhaps I was wrong," she said heavily. "He—will be here in a few moments if—everything is right."

We sat there, the three of us, without attempt at conversation. Both Gertrude and I recognized the futility of asking Louise any questions; her reticence was a part of a role she had assumed. Our ears were strained for the first throb of the motor as it turned into the drive and commenced the climb to the house. Ten minutes passed, 15, 20. I saw Louise's hands grow rigid as they clutched the arms of her chair. I watched Gertrude's bright color slowly ebbing away, and around my own heart I seemed to feel the grasp of a giant hand.

Twenty-five minutes, and then a sound. But it was not the chug of the motor; it was the unmistakable rumble of the Casanova hack. Gertrude drew aside the curtain and peered into the darkness.

"It's the hack, I am sure," she said, evidently relieved. "Something has gone wrong with the car, and no wonder—the way Halsey went down the hill."

It seemed a long time before the creaking vehicle came to a stop at the door. Louise rose and stood watching, her hand to her throat. And then Gertrude opened the door, admitting Mr. Jamieson and a stocky, middle-aged man. Halsey was not with them. When the door had closed and Louise realized that Halsey had not come, her expression changed. From tense watchfulness to relief, and now again to absolute despair, her face was an open page.

"Halsey?" I asked unceremoniously, ignoring the stranger. "Did he—not meet you?"

"No." Mr. Jamieson looked slightly surprised. "I rather expected the car, but we got up all right."

"You didn't see him at all?" Louise demanded breathlessly.

Mr. Jamieson knew her at once, although he had not seen her before. She had kept to her rooms until the morning she left.

"No, Miss Armstrong," he said. "I saw nothing of him. What is wrong?"

"Then we shall have to find him," she asserted. "Every instant is precious. Mr. Jamieson, I have reason for believing that he is in danger, but I don't know what it is. Only—he must be found."

The stocky man had said nothing. Now, however, he went quickly toward the door.

"I'll catch the hack down the road and hold it," he said. "Is the gentleman down in the town?"

"Mr. Jamieson," Louise said impulsively, "I can use the hack. Take my horse and trap outside and drive like mad. Try to find the Dragon Fly—it ought to be easy to trace. I can think of no other way. Only, don't lose a moment."

The new detective had gone, and a moment later Jamieson went rapidly down the drive, the cob's feet striking fire at every step. Louise stood looking after them. When she turned around she faced Gertrude, who stood indignant, almost tragic, in the hall.

"You know what threatens Halsey, Louise," she said accusingly. "I believe you know this whole horrible thing, this mystery that we are struggling with. If anything happens to Halsey, I shall never forgive you."

"I Believe You Know This Whole Horrible Thing, This Mystery."

Louise only raised her hands despairingly and dropped them again.

Scotland's Early Records

Indebted to the English for Only Authentic Accounts of Early Social History.

Scotland also has her Doomsday Book, dating, however, only from the thirteenth century. When the Bannatyne club published the records, about 70 years ago, under the modest name of "The Ragman Rolls," Scotland awoke to the disagreeable knowledge that she was indebted to the English for the only authentic accounts of her early social history. Nobles, landholders, burgesses and clergy all contribute to the interest of the Ragman Rolls. As the preface declares: "No part of the public records of Scotland prior to the thirteenth century has been preserved, and whatever may have been their fate, certain it is that to these English records of our temporary national degradation are we now indebted for the only genuine statistical notices of the kingdom toward the close of the thirteenth century."

A Substitute for Coal.

According to the Washington bureau of manufactures an invention has been made by a native of Galicia, whereby the demand for coal for domestic purposes will be greatly diminished. The inventor, an engineer, has made a combination of crude petroleum, cinders and sand into bricks or briquettes, which may be used as fuel by any household in place of coal. A hundred kilos (220.4 pounds) will, it is sold, cost only four shillings. A society has been formed for the purpose of manufacturing these bricks with a capital of £40,600 and a factory is to be placed in operation at Floriadorf.

Detail Plans For Making Cement Tile.

I recently needed some 18-inch tiling, but the large quantity required and the price asked by the tile yard people staggered me so, as necessity is the mother of invention, I did my own tile manufacturing by using cement. The method I tried was as follows: With two pieces of 1-inch board, 12 inches wide and 24 inches long, laid side by side I nailed two 1x2 inch strips or cleats on the back, writes Edward Grimm in Farmer's Review. This was my base. I then cut a circle out of 1-inch lumber (see drawing) 1 and ½-inch wide and 18 inches in diameter on the inside and 21 inches on the outside. This I nailed on the reverse side of my base. I then procured a sheet of galvanized iron 54½ inches long so that the ends would lap, and nailed 1x2-inch strips on one side beginning 2 inches from the end and nailing them 3 inches apart. These served as stiffeners. The sheet of galvanized iron was bent in a circle with the strips inside and placed on the base inside of the circle as shown in drawing. This furnished the core of my tile. I then made two spreaders to fit inside of the core as illustrated and placed them inside at the bottom to hold the core in place and keep it from collapsing. I then procured another sheet of galvanized iron 64 inches long, allowing for the lap, and stripped it the same as the core, bending it around the circle on the base, with the strips on the outside, holding it in place with band iron bands, top and bottom. This left the inside of the mould perfectly smooth. I then made spreaders similar to those used on the inside at the bottom but with a longer strip to extend over the top and nailed a block 1x1½ inch on each end to fit between the core and mould top, holding the top in the same position and the same distance apart as the circle on the bottom held the bottom apart.

I am now ready for the cement which I used in the proportion of 2 parts coarse sand to 1 part good Portland cement. After standing over night to set, I removed the top spreaders first, then the bottom spreaders. Then released the inside sheet of galvanized iron or as I call it, the core, and lastly removed the bands from the outside and took off the mould. This left me a good smooth tile, 18 inches in diameter on the inside and 1½ inches thick, which after seasoning several days was ready for use. Should it be desired to make a large number, just make more moulds as they are cheaply made and the work can be done after nightfall and during the evening in any cellar or place where the frost will not touch them while setting.

In making cement tile remember to remove the inside or core first, and the outside last. This prevents the spring of the core from stretching or spreading as would be the case if you should take off the outside mould first, and while the cement is still fresh. Use good Portland cement, and good clean coarse sand. Mix well, and wet by sprinkling while mixing; do not pour in the water, as it will wash out the cement. Tamp well while filling the mould.

PLYMOUTH ROCKS ARE HARDY

The Plymouth Rocks, especially the barred variety, generally rank among the most hardy breeds. There is but one danger line in their keeping, and that is the tendency to overfatten. The Plymouth Rocks are more susceptible to this than any other American variety.

Close inbreeding is one of the curses of the hennery. The market poultryman, in order to have quick growing and hardy stock, changes his male birds every year. The fancier cannot well do this, or he will lose the good results of his mating.

Yet the fancier, if he be a practical man, can so inbreed as not to be in danger. With all that, however, the less inbreeding done the better for the future generations.

Mongrels are a product of a variety of bloods, and it is more difficult to inbreed them to any serious extent. They will not show it so quickly as a thoroughbred, as the latter is bred more in line.

Again the average mongrel hen will not readily overfatten for the reason that more or less Mediterranean blood exists in its makeup. It is only when we have birds of Asiatic crosses that we find a tendency to overfatten.

There is no reason why a thoroughbred should not be as hardy as a dunghill. And they will if they are not too closely inbred.

Prevent Poultry Diseases.

Poultry diseases are more easily prevented than cured, most of them being the result of error in management. Overfeeding, overstimulation, lack of exercise, failure to provide green food, grit, charcoal and fresh water are responsible for many diseases.

Poultry Pitfalls.

There are many pitfalls in the poultry business just as there are in the mercantile world, and we must at all times be prepared to guard against them. Begin in a modest way, and by degrees grow.

The Poultry Business.

Even with a small capital there are plenty of chances to get into the poultry business, but many who wish to try business, hesitate to make it a paying side issue hesitate about putting any money in buildings and other necessary appliances. They and other necessary appliances. They buy a few common eggs, set them under a hen and expect from this simple start and the investment of half a dollar to make a fortune. Or perhaps they buy some farmer's late pullets or old hens at market price, and when winter comes wonder why they don't lay. Such people contend there is no money in hens.

If one enters the poultry business, he or she should do so with the determination to stick to it and make it pay. If you are unsuccessful the first year, keep right on sawing wood. Success will come if the desire is strong enough and the work diligently pursued.

Set Eggs of Good Breed.

Next spring get some eggs of a good breed for hatching and have all alike. The chicks will be of more even size, look better and cockarels will sell better, and above all, you will like them so much better you will find it a pleasure to go out to feed them.

Keep Up Business Methods.

Don't lose your enthusiasm and lessen your strictly business methods as the mercury runs up. Eternal vigilance when the thermometer registers above the 90 degree mark, is more necessary than at any other time in the poultry yard. The flock suffer with the unusual hot weather, and every effort possible should be observed that will make them more comfortable.

Cull Out Old Stock.

Now is the time to sort out and sell the old stock that has passed its usefulness. It is a safe rule to dispose of all hatched previous to 1904. Next spring set some hens early in April and get pullets old enough for early winter layers.

NO. HEALTHY SKIN LEFT

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mess of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. Robert Wattam, 1148 Forty-eighth St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1909."

In a Hurry.

It was Anna's first visit at the seaside. She was only a little girl, and very enthusiastic over the long-looked-for opportunity to go into the water.

They came too late the previous day for a dip in the surf, so Anna was up early, and as she put on her bathing suit while the rest were at breakfast some one questioned her as to her haste.

"Well, you see," replied the thoughtful child, "I want to hurry and go in before so many people get in and get the water cold."

Even the Children.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, condemning in his witty way the American divorce evil, told at a Philadelphia luncheon an appropriate story.

"Even our children," he said, "are becoming infected. A Kensington schoolteacher, examining a little girl in grammar, said:

"'What is the future of love?'

"'A divorce,' the child answered promptly."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

PRIMARY RETURNS

Republican and Democratic Nominations Throughout the State of Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn. — James A. Towney, house leader and friend of Speaker Cannon was defeated, by Sydney A. Anderson, of Lanesboro. All other members of the Minnesota Congressional delegation were re-nominated.

At midnight, the Winona Republican-Herald, Mr. Towney's organ, conceded his defeat by two thousand.

With a majority of something over the 1,000 mark, Frank M. Nye, defeated Albert H. Hall in the bitterly fought contest for the Republican nomination for congressman from the Fifth district. Although Nye carried only six of the 13 wards, his majorities in most instances were heavier than those secured by Mr. Hall in the seven wards he carried.

Thomas P. Dwyer secured the Democratic nomination for the same position by a majority of 978 over Einar Hoidale and John H. Long. Indications from the few county returns now in are that the Dwyer majority will be increased in the rural districts.

The Nye-Hall contest was one of the most bitterly fought during the primaries. Hall repeatedly attacked Nye on his record in congress, terming him a supporter of Cannon. Hall, at the head of the progressive Republicans, brought much to light concerning Nye's opposition to the Norris resolution curtailing Cannon's power. Mr. Nye based his campaign on the old principles of Republicanism, claiming that it alone stood for progressiveness.

Congressman Stevens Pleased.

"The result is very satisfactory from the estimate of our committee," said Congressman Stevens. "The result shows the desire of the people to sustain the real, progressive legislation and to work for it when it has been shown to them. It is an encouragement to a public man to know that they inquire and keep informed. I desire to express my sincere gratitude to my friends for their support."

Results in the State.

Returns on the legislative tickets throughout the state are meager so much so that no determination could be reached as to the relative strength of county option and anti-county option.

The option candidates won in some places while they lost in others. In Minneapolis the county optionists appear to have won out for the most part although the other side of the question has its representation.

H. L. Buck.

In Minneapolis probably the most sensational victories were won by Carl Wallace in the Forty-third district over E. P. Allen, and W. S. Dwinnell in the Fortieth, over C. A. Nimocks and Guy V. Howard.

Mr. Dwinnell has about as many votes as did Howard and Nimocks together. Nimocks waged a spectacular campaign, had secured innumerable pledges, but failed to land the plum.

Ninth District.

Republican — Halvor Steenerson, Crookston.

Throughout the state, the results were indeterminable. In St. Paul, Senator W. W. Dunn defeated his opponent Gregory while Durment was defeated by Denegre.

In the Fergus Falls District, Senator C. J. Wright was nominated for senator, while J. W. Mason appears to have won out over his opponents in the race for district judge.

One of the surprising results was the victory of J. D. Sullivan in St. Cloud over his Democratic opponent, J. E. C. Robinson, who was a candidate for re-nomination.

In the Faribault district, Senator F. L. Glotzbach has won out by a substantial majority over his Democratic opponent and will face Schilling at the election.

F. F. Ellsworth.

Senator John Moonan has been nominated on the Democratic ticket from Waseca.

In Minneapolis.

W. E. Satterlee is the Republican nominee for mayor of Minneapolis. His plurality is 7,625, and he polled about two votes to C. J. Minor's one. Only in the large plurality is this a surprise.

James C. Haynes, present Democratic mayor, defeated George B. Esterman by more than four votes to one. His plurality is 2,996. The race is on between Mr. Haynes and Mr. Satterlee for the mayoralty.

C. A. Bloomquist, Republican city treasurer, easily defeated J. O. Davis for the city treasurership. These three winners—Haynes, Satterlee and Bloomquist carried every ward in the city.

Woman Named for Schools.

Minneapolis women nominated Miss Moe Snow as candidate of the board of school directors, to fill the unexpired term, by a majority of three times that of any of her seven competitors. Miss Snow received a total of 9,675 votes, while her nearest competitor for the office got but 3,269 votes.

Miss Snow carried every ward in the city, and her majority was the best of any of the candidates on the entire ticket.

Rockne for State Senate.

A. J. Rockne, of Red Wing, speaker of the last house was nominated for state senator over W. E. Putnam by 500, after a sensational contest. Aldred Johnson was named for judge over F. M. Wilson by 350.

Masons at Detroit Meeting Elect.

Detroit, Mich. — The supreme council of thirty-third degree, northern jurisdiction of the United States, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons, in conclave here, elected Charles C. Goddard, of Chicago, also were elected active members to fill vacancies in their respective states.

VEGETABLES should be given in abundance, since the vegetable proteid carries with it a large amount of potassium salts, which neutralize acid products and forestall rheumatism.

—Dr. Sill.

Many housewives have numerous ways of serving left-over meats, but the vegetable is either thrown away or appears just as it was served the day before.

Corn may be prepared as an escalloped dish or put into a potato or other vegetable salad to the advantage of the latter. A cupful will make sufficient corn oysters for four people. Add a tablespoonful of milk, a beaten egg and flour with baking powder well sifted to make them hold together, then fry in hot fat.

A small quantity of tomatoes may be added to a soup, a meat sauce or an escalloped dish of corn.

Cold string beans make an excellent salad: Add a teaspoonful of chopped onion to a cupful of string beans with salt and pepper to taste. Cut a slice of bacon into dice and fry; pour the fat over the beans, then add a quarter of a cupful of hot vinegar, and serve.

Cheese added to creamed string beans changes the dish to one quite new.

A few peas may be added to the broth of a mutton stew and served with it, making a dish most palatable.

Scalloped onions are especially nice prepared with cold boiled onions; flavor with cheese.

A green pea omelet is a most delicious luncheon dish. Drain a cupful of cold cooked peas, mash and season. When the omelet is ready to serve spread the peas over one-half and fold. Serve on a hot platter.

Turnips and squash may be seasoned and baked.

Cabbage is good treated as the string beans were, with hot bacon fat and vinegar.

Celery is very nice cooked and served in a white sauce.

Tomato toast is a nice way to serve a little left-over tomato: Take a cupful of boiling hot tomatoes, season with butter, salt and pepper. Stir in three well-beaten eggs and a half cupful of hot cream. Serve on buttered toast.

Several vegetables together often makes a very acceptable dish; such as potatoes, a sprinkling of onions, a cupful of tomatoes and a few peas, with a little chopped roast beef. The dish is ready after a half-hour's baking, fit to set before the king.

NOW is the time; ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear,
They may not meet you in the coming year;
Now is the Time.

Apples.

Since Eve ate apples they have been a much prized fruit, and apple pie, apple pudding, apple dumplings, apples baked, fried, apple sauce, apple jelly and apple butter are good old standbys.

Apple Trifle.

Select tart apples, peel, cut them in half, removing the core; lay a slice of lemon in the center of each, pour a cupful of water over them, and steam until tender and clear. Take them out and set aside until perfectly cold. Lay a dozen split lady fingers or small sponge cakes in a glass dish, and moisten them with a little orange juice. Lay the apples on this, sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar, and heap over all a cupful of whipped, sweetened cream. Serve very cold.

Apple and Rice Pudding.

Peel small tart apples, core and put into a baking dish. Have ready a cupful of boiled rice, mix with two cupfuls of hot milk, into which has been beaten the yolks of three eggs and a half cupful of sugar.

Stir into the rice a half cupful of blanched almonds cut into strips, a half cup of seeded raisins and a couple of dozen strips of citron. Pour this mixture over the apples, after having put a teaspoonful of sugar into each apple. Bake well, covered until tender, uncover and heap on them a meringue made of the whites of three eggs beaten stiff and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar added, brown in the oven and serve either hot or cold.

Parisian Apples.

A dainty and attractive way of serving apples is to pare them and cut with a small potato cutter into balls. Put them at once over the fire and cook in water, sugar and a little lemon juice. When the balls are tender, before they lose their shape heap them on rounds of buttered toast which have been spread with apple jelly. Sprinkle with chopped almonds and heap over them the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and sweetened with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and flavored with a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

SO LONG as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by others I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.

—Robert L. Stevenson.

Some Hot Weather Dishes.

In these sultry days of summer the appetite needs new interest to awaken appreciation and new dishes are most welcome.

Let nuts take the place of meats, as they will be found both satisfying and economical. Chilled fruits are the most wholesome of all desserts; but for those who care for more elaborate dishes, here are a few which will reward your efforts:

Peaches En Surprise.

Soften two tablespoonfuls of gelatine in half a cupful of cold water and dissolve in a cupful of hot cream. Add two-thirds of a cupful of powdered sugar and strain into a dish set in a pan of crushed ice; stir until it begins to congeal. Add a teaspoonful of orange extract, a few drops of saffron to give it a dainty yellow; pour into a pint of whipped cream and lightly fold the mixtures together. Line a large mould with strips of angel cake. Put a little of the cream mixture in the bottom of the mould and on each strip of cake to hold it in place. Have at hand some diced ripe peaches generously sprinkled with sugar and lemon juice, fill the mould nearly full, then pour in the cream. Bury in ice and salt for three hours.

The following will be a dessert that is at least uncommon:

Creole orange cream with almonds in a double boiler, put two cupfuls of water, the juice of four oranges, the rind of two, and two cupfuls of sugar and the beaten yolks of ten eggs. Stir until the mixture thickens. Put into a freezer and stir until half frozen, then add the beaten whites of five eggs and one cupful of blanched shredded and browned almonds. Finish freezing, then stand packed for two hours.

Creme de Menthe Sandwiches.

These are a fine accompaniment for cold lamb. Steep two tablespoonfuls of mint leaves in a little cold water, strain and add to a pint of whipped cream, season with salt and pepper and add half an ounce of gelatine softened in a tablespoonful of cold water. Cool in a square mold and when firm cut in thin slices and place between buttered slices of rye bread.

WHEN thou dost tell another's jest, therein
Omit the oaths, which true wit cannot need;
Pick out of tales the mirth, but not the sin,
He pares his apple that will cleanly feed.

—George Herbert.

Southern Ways of Serving Vegetables.

The famous southern cooks, though not at all scientific in their cookery, knew how to prepare appetizing and attractive dishes. The following are some which have pleased the palate of a northerner:

Summer Squash Pudding.

Boil young tender squash, drain and mash free from lumps. To a quart of the squash, add a cupful of rich milk, a tablespoonful of butter, three beaten eggs and salt and pepper to taste. Butter a deep dish, turn in the mixture and bake a rich brown.

Another way of preparing this delectable vegetable that the southern cooks have is:

Fried Summer Squash.

Steam full grown squash until tender. Cool and slice carefully. Season with salt and pepper, pour over the slices a little beaten egg, sprinkle with crumbs and fry a light brown. Take up and prepare the other side in the same way, return to the pan and brown. Serve very hot.

Virginia Corn Pudding.

Cut the corn from six large ears of corn. Add to this three well beaten eggs, half a cupful of melted butter, a tablespoonful of rice flour, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one of salt and a pint of new milk. Mix well, then cut and fold in the well-beaten whites of the eggs. Put into a baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

A Creole Dish.

Peel a half dozen ripe tomatoes, by pouring boiling water over them. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan over the fire; when very hot add the tomatoes and fry until brown on one side, sprinkle with salt and pepper and turn, cover with chopped and seasoned cold fowl or veal.

Deviled Tomatoes.

Peel large, firm tomatoes and cut them in halves, rub a broiler with butter, lay on the tomatoes, dredge with salt and butter; when cooked pour over the following sauce: Mix a tablespoonful each of made mustard and butter, a teaspoonful of pepper sauce, the juice of a small lemon, a teaspoonful of currant jelly and a little salt.

Tuberculosis in the West Indies.

Associations for the Prevention of Tuberculosis have been formed in Cuba, Porto Rico and Trinidad. In Cuba there are over 40,000 deaths from tuberculosis every year, and the death rate from this disease is nearly three times as high in the United States. In Porto Rico there are over 6,000 deaths every year out of 1,000,000 inhabitants. In Trinidad, the death rate from tuberculosis in Port-of-Spain, the only place where figures are available, was 4.75 in 1909, nearly three times the rate in New York city. Conditions in the other islands of the West Indies, where no active campaign against tuberculosis has been undertaken is even worse: The chief reason for this high mortality is found in the unsanitary, dark, and poorly ventilated houses of the natives of the islands.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY

For Candidates to Have Big Vote When Standings Are Announced.

Many Are Working For the Valuable Prizes in the Gazette Contest.

Some of the candidates who are not working very hard would be surprised if they knew of the large number of coupons and ballots that some of their friends are sending to this office. When the votes are published they will be astonished at their high standing and will regret not starting in earnest at the beginning.

Many ballots and coupons are going to waste every week that you can have for the asking, and by commencing now you will have the promise of them before your rivals.

Even though you have a piano is no reason why you should not compete for this one as we are confident that any lady in this vicinity could use just such an instrument as we are offering and be proud of it.

It is not too late to be nominated as you have a chance equal to the rest, besides we have some exceptionaly good propositions to offer the candidates later, and you will have the opportunity to get in on them.

We wish to know in the start who the ambitious candidatets are and for this reason we are going to triple the votes on every merchant's coupon and ballot—subscription coupons not included in this offer—voted on or before Oct. 22, and to the four candidates having the largest number of votes from these coupons and ballots, and we will give in addition the following prizes:

1st prize, official ballot worth 20,000 votes.

2nd prize, official ballot worth 15,000 votes.

3rd prize, official ballot worth 10,000 votes.

4th prize, official ballot worth 5,000 votes.

Here is your chance to triple your vote, and receive 20,000 extra votes. Coupons and ballots already voted will count in this offer. Shall you take advantage of it? This offer will positively not appear again.

Do not fail to read the standing of the candidates two weeks hence. It will show the results of good earnest work for some of the candidates who took advantage of the special offer to increase their chances of not only winning the special prize, but also the grand prize, as every vote counts one more toward the winning of the piano.

Votes on Subscription.

Remember we have a lot of subscription money standing out and will give votes for all money you can collect. You can secure a receipt book at this office and that will give you the privilege of taking and receipting for all money you collect and now is the time to line up your friends and relatives. Watch for the big inducement that we have to offer next week on subscription money; it will surprise you.

Every candidate is entitled to a candidate's ballot worth 250 votes. We have in our possession a ballot for each candidate who can vote the ballot for herself or another candidate providing she calls or writes us within the next two weeks and instructs us what to do with the ballot.

As soon as you vote the ballot for another candidate your name is omitted from the list of popular candidates. The candidates who find it impossible to devote their time to try and win a prize should not neglect to vote their ballot for some other candidates. Only candidates whose names appear in this week's paper can vote candidates ballot, and no candidate can vote or sign more than one ballot.

GOVERNOR NOT COMING

Dates for Political Addresses This Week Have Been Cancelled.

Governor A. O. Eberhart was advertised to deliver a political address at Thief River Falls this evening, at St. Hilaire tomorrow forenoon, Red Lake Falls in the afternoon and Crookston in the evening, but all of the dates for this week have been cancelled. The governor has gone to the scene of the great forest fires in the border country.

SOME BAD FIRES IN RED LAKE COUNTY

Brooks Had Narrow Escape—Much Timber Burned on Clearwater River.

Fires All Over the County—Hundreds of Tons of Hay Burned.

The heavy smoke which hung over this city Tuesday was due in part to the great forest fires to the northeast but probably also to the many fires in the county the past few days. Much property has been destroyed in Red Lake county during the past ten days without causing much comment because the attention of the people was drawn to the great disaster in the north country.

Last week the village of Brooks had a narrow escape from destruction. Fire in the small timber south of that town worked its way up to the edge of the village before the fire was under control. This week most of the timber on the Clearwater river between this city and Terrebonne was burned and since then there have been bad fires in timber along the river near Plummer.

Besides these timber fires there have been many fires over the country on the prairie and hundreds of tons of hay have been destoyed. There have been fires in every section of the county and an estimate of the loss cannot be given at this time.

TAKING THE SCHOOLS OUT OF POLITICS

Paul Pry Comments on the Governor's Keynote Declaration.

Kennedy Inheritance Tax Matter.—Ole Sageng Is Through Plowing.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Oct. 11—The syndicate which was engaged until five o'clock Monday morning editing and rewriting Governor Eberhart's key-note speech cut out all jokes and put in some ginger. As finally submitted it was rather a creditable performance and did its censors credit. Incidentally criticism was courted which will no doubt be made use of as the campaign progresses. In this it is not my present intention to take part in this any general way. There is one matter, however, in respect to which I am familiar with a few facts which are not generally known to which I will briefly refer.

"The time has come," said Governor Eberhart in an inspired moment, "when our schools should be taken out of politics and when all our educational officers should be taken out of politics and when all our educational officers should be selected strictly upon their merits and without reference to party affiliations." The governor was making reference when he said this specially to agricultural education. The governor's course in this same regard indicates that it is one thing to preach and another to practice. For it was only in connection with agricultural education, and especially the extention of the benefits of agricultural education to practical farmers in their daily work, that Governor Eberhart has had opportunity to make appointments. They need at the agricultural college in connection with the extension course in agriculture a sort of publicity agent whose duty it would be to collate and arrange the results of work done and experiments made at the agricultural college for publication and circulation among the farmers of the state. The governor had a political supporter who wanted the job. This was Ed. Huntington of Windom. He got it through the governor's influence. As might have been anticipated, while Mr. Huntington may be a very able and he is certainly a very prolific political writer, he proved to have small knowledge of the technical and scientific work he was required to do. From the first there was a friction. The authorities at the school found he wouldn't do. Even his political pull couldn't save him; he had to go.

Politicians on the Job.

One would have thought this experience would have shown the governor the folly to attempt to foist political appointees upon the agricultural college, and that when he next made a recommendation he would have regard only for the man's fitness and his familiarity with agricultural college work or at least along agricultural lines. But political influences were at work to make ducks and drakes of the governor's good intentions. The man appointed to succeed Huntington got his agricultural training as a political writer for the Pioneer Press. He is, I understand a very estimable and talented gentleman. Possibly he may fill the bill. The only other point I make was that this, like the prior appointment, was purely a political one. Until he had found a berth for his friend the governor had not arrived at the conclusion that "the time has come when our schools should be taken out of politics." Possibly when another one wants a job he may see reason for further delay.

Knocking Johnson.

Of course the public was expected to read between the lines of this statement of Mr. Eberhart's that there was a crying need for reform in the educational office. The wicked Democrats had been playing puck with the educational institutions. But nothing could be more unjust to Governor Johnson than to suggest in this underhanded way that he had prostituted the educational interests of the state to political purposes. He found a Republican when he entered office at the head of the educational department of public instruction. He kept him there as long as he wanted to stay. When Mr. Olson resigned, Governor Johnson, instead of selecting a politician of his own political faith to succeed him as has been the custom, reorganized the office by promotion; in effect introducing for the first time civil service rules into the department. He never claimed special credit for this. He did it as a matter of course as the right thing to do. When Governor Eberhart begins to forget politics when making appointments in the department of education he will merely following Govenor Johnson's example.

A Wise Attorney General.

It is not surprising that in the governor's special speech credit should have been taken for what the attorney general has accomplished. That's what it is to have a press agent. Mr. Simpson's is a recent importation from Iowa. Among his other accomplishments is that of muckraker. I understand that George was persuaded that one of these fine days he was to figure in the popular magazines as a newly-pledged reformer. This was before he got mixed up in the deal to help out the creamery supply monopoly. He must now be content to be played up occasionaly in the first page story in a St. Paul evening paper which is easier to work.

The Kennedy Inheritance Tax Matter.

Simpson's long suit is in the taxes collected from the Kennedy estate. They tell me that when you get down to brass tacks, Simpson wouldn't have the credit for this at all if it wasn't that he was fortunate in having a special wide-awake press agent, and that he only acted after it was put up to him in an official letter signed by Sam Iverson. Also it is said that, as it was, he did not get within $130,000 the sum to which the state was entitled. Furthermore that he would have settled for $180,000 less than he got if there had not been those

ALL DAY SERVICE FOR RED LAKE FALLS

Red River Power Company Will Put on All Day Electric Service Here.

Work Will be Commenced at Once on Improvement in the Plant.

W. H. Brown, manager of the Red River Power company, was over from Grand Forks Tuesday and while here received a telegram from Arthur S. Huey, vice president of the H. M. Byllesby Company of Chicago, owners of the Red River Power company, which was as follows: "We will give all day service in Red Lake Falls."

This means that the improvements in the local plant that the company have been planning on making are to be made. Work is to be commenced at once and it is expected that before the end of next month the better service will have been installed. The improvement in the plant not only means that there will be power service twenty-four hours of the day, but that the lighting service is to be improved also.

This information ought to be a source of gratification to every user of power in the city. No other power is quite so satisfactory as electricity. It is clean, reliable, always ready for the job and all things considered is cheaper than any other power.

W. S. Cluro, the Red River Power comany's expert who was here securing contracts for power service, returned to the Forks last evening.

CASS LAKE STILL WET.

Liquor Stores There Will Not be Closed Oct. 15.

The strenuous protest made by officials at Cass Lake and Brainerd against the order providing for the closing of the saloons at those places Oct. 15, has resultd in the recinding of the order and the towns will not be dry. This does not mean that the department is going to be less vigorous in its campaign against the sale of liquor to the Indians but that the campaign will be carried on in somewhat different manner. Offenders will be vigorousy prosecuted and the co-operation of local officers to stop the sale to Indians will be expected. If this fails then there will be a general order closing the whole "Indian country," instead of the selection of certain localities. There will be no more discrimination and it is probable that local and state authorities will co-operate with the federal authorities.

A communication from Secretary Ballinger to Special Agent Vallentyne is as follows:

"Sir: From various petitions and communications addressed to me in connection with the enforcement of the acts of congress relating to the introduction of liquor into the Indian country of Minnesota, I feel called upon to express to you what seems to me to be the correct policy of the department in dealing with the questions. I fully understand and approve of the diligence of the Indian office in its efforts to enforce these statutes. It is true that there has been some contention respecting the right to enforce them. The law, however, appears to be settled in respect to the authority of the department and it, therefore, becomes purely a matter of administration. In the administration of these statutes the department cannot countenance discrimination or anything that savors arbitrary, capricious or vexatious proceedings.

"The officers in the field are entrusted with a police duty to protect the Indians under their supervision from the introduction of liquor, as contemplated by statute. You will therefore, instruct your officers to secure convictions for violations of these statutes where the evidence is available, and proceed throughout the territory involved to enforce the law with no discrimination as to persons or territory.

"In view of the limited force at your command, you will proceed to exercise the duties imposed upon the service, where the greatest demand seems to exist for its exercise from time to time.

"This does not imply that there is to be any lack of diligence in controlling conditions throughout the entire territory. Any and all orders of the deparment of the Indian service, heretofor made, in conflict herewith are hereby vacated. You will instruct and supervise your force in the field in such a manner as to efficiently carry out the enforcement of the obligations of the department as above outlined.

Very respectfully,
R. A. Ballinger, secretary.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER

Baudette, Spooner and Other Border Line Towns Completely Wiped Out.

Many People Have Perished—Millions of Dollars In Property Loss.

The great forest fires that have been raging along the border line during the past few days have resulted in much loss of life and much suffering and the destruction of millions of dollars worth of property.

Hundreds of people are missing and the number who have lost their lives will not be known for several days.

Spooner, Baudette and other border towns are completely wiped out. Settlers' cabins all through the burnt district have been burned and many families have perished. Those who escaped have lost their homes and are without clothing and provisions. The suffering is being relieved by liberal contributions from people all over the northwest.

GENTILLY WINS AGAIN

Cheese Gets Remarkably High Score of 98 in State Contest.

Rev. Fr. Theillon of Gentilly last Friday received a letter from A. W. Parkins, state cheese inspector, which reads as follows: "Accept my most sincere congratulations in taking first prize in the fifth contest. Score 98. Very fine cheese." This is only one of very many first score prizes that the Gentilly factory product has won. Those Gentilly people have the habit of winning first prizes which means that they have the habit of making premium cheese. A score of 98 shows a product about as near perfect as it is possible to make it.

The Red River Valley is going to be the famous dairy country of the northwest very soon and the prize winning cheese and butter makers are helping make it so. There is no place where better grasses grow than here and the more the farmers realize that and get into dairying business the better it will be for them and for the country.

BROWN HONORED

DEDICATION OF MONUMENT TO FOUNDER OF "MINNESOTA" ACCOMPANIED BY FESTIVITIES.

BIG CROWD AT HENDERSON

Governor Makes Speech in Which Pioneer, Soldier, Editor and Statesman Is Eulogized.

Henderson.—Henderson is filled with 3,000 guests from surrounding territory who came to attend the dedication of the Joseph R. Brown monument. Governor Eberhart presided at the dedication and delivered the principal address of the day.

The city was in holiday attire. A carnival company filled the streets and citizens and guests made merry in one of the biggest celebrations ever held in this city.

Major Brown's life story furnishes one of the most picturesque chapters in Minnesota's history. Born in Hartford, Conn., 1805, he ran away from the printing office to which he was apprenticed and joined the regular army before he was fourteen. Leaving Fort McHenry he was a member of the first detachment of troops sent here, under Lieutenant Colonel Henry Leavenworth, and helped build Fort St. Anthony, the present Fort Snelling.

After several years he left the army and became a trader with the Indians. He lived at Grey Cloud Island and other places. He was the first white man to raise wheat on Minnesota soil, and was also the first white man to visit Lake Minnetonka. The city of Stillwater was laid out by him, and he was the pioneer lumberman on the St. Croix river. Major Brown drove the first wagon over Minnesota's first reel road, the highway between Fort Snelling and Prairie du Chien.

Major Brown took a prominent part in the political affairs of his day. While a member of the legislature of Wisconsin, which then embraced Minnesota, he advocated the creation of the territory of Minnesota and he gave the state its name with the present spelling. Later he was a member and also chief of both houses of the territorial legislature of Minnesota. Brown was editor and owner of the Minnesota Pioneer from 1852 to 1854, the newspaper which later became the Pioneer Press. He was a member of the Democratic wing of the constitutional convention in 1859. Two years before he founded what is now the city of Henderson, and it was through his efforts that the government established trading posts and mills there.

During the Indian outbreak in 1862 he went back into military service and commanded the troops at the battle of Birch Coolie. He also took part in the battle of Wood Lake and was wounded there. He died in 1879 in New York, while on a trip to that state.

The last legislature appropriated $2,000 for a monument to Major Brown. The granite shaft at the base has this inscription: "Joseph R. Brown, Pioneer, Soldier, Statesman, 1805-1879. Founder of Henderson."

CLYDE J. PRIOR ENDS LIFE.

Former Semidji Newspaper Man Worried Over Poor Health.

Bemidji. — Clyde J. Prior, former newspaper man, at one time clerk of the court at Glencoe, and who was nominated at last Tuesday's primaries as Republican candidate for court commissioner of Beltrami county, took his life here.

Poor health and tangled finances are believed to have worried Pryor, who was 41 years old and one of the best known men of northern Minnesota. He was secretary of the Beltrami Commercial club two years and at the time of his death was Ninth district member of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs. Pryor came here six years ago from Crookston, and until a year ago he was engaged in work on the Daily Pioneer. Since Jan. 1st last he had been engaged in the real estate and insurance business.

HIGHWAYMAN IS HONEST.

Man Who Three Years Ago Held Up Bartender Returns Money.

St. Paul.—St. Paul has an honest highwayman. Nearly three years ago he held up a saloon here, masked in approved style and alone, nearly killed the bartender, and departed with a pocket full of cash. He escaped the dragnet of the police department, and Chris Batroot, the proprietor chalked up $51.05 to loss and forgot about it. On Tuesday he received a money order for the full amount, signed George Smith.

ANNULMENT SUITS PUSHED.

Fifty More Filed in Indian Land Cases on White Earth.

Fergus Falls. — Fifty additional suits for the annulment of deeds given by Indians to lands on the White Earth reservation were filed by the government in the United States court here. This makes a total of 159 suits that have thus far been filed for the annulment of these deeds, and the government attorneys state the work has only begun.

Trolley Surveyors At Work.

Mankato.—A surveying crew has begun work here on the proposed electric road from St. Paul through the farming country of southern Minnesota and is working east. The surveying crew is under the supervision of A. Alexandria and comprises 10 men. The men will work through Madison Lake, Waterville, Faribault, Northfield, Farmington and through numerous other towns up to St. Paul. It is said that at least two months' time will be required to complete the surveying work.

ORE DEMAND SMALL.

Navigation on Great Lakes Will Close Earlier Than Usual.

of navigation on the Great Lakes will be tame this year, unless it is enlivened by a spurt in the package freight business. Iron ore and grain have been depended on to give excitement to the closing weeks of the season, but the ore this season will not be a factor, and from present prospects grain will not. There is a possibility the export demand for grain will improve and if it does there may be a rush of tonnage for grain cargoes. It has been a heavy season up to the present in the ore carrying trade, but the ore carriers as a rule are going to quit early. The steel corporation's fleet, the Pittsburg Steamship Company, has announced it will be through with the independent boats in two weeks, and its own fleet will go into winter quarters about November 15, from two to three weeks earlier than usual.

The reason for the steel corporation putting its fleet in winter quarters early lies in the fact that the outlook for the iron and steel trade does not warrant unusual stocks of iron ore at the lower lake ports for consumption between the close of navigation and the opening next spring. From present prospects there will be a large amount of lake tonnage laid up between November 1 and 15. The coal receipts are heavy, and the Duluth railroads, having no car shortage to contend with are giving good dispatch to a large demand for the commodity in the territory which Duluth serves.

NAMES VICAR GENERAL.

Bishop Heffron Chooses Father Devlin of Austin for Important Position.

Winona.—Bishop Patrick Heffron of the diocese of Winona has appointed Rev. Edward H. Devlin of the church of St. Augustine, Austin, Minn., vicar general of the diocese. He has sent a communication to the priests of the diocese making that announcement and making the following appointments for confirmation and visitations: October 6, Clairmont and Mantorville; October 7, Somerset and Moravia; October 9, Owatonna; October 12, Minneiska, October 15, Waseca; October 16, Mankato and Madison Lake; October 20, Albert Lea and Twin Lakes; October 21, St. Mary; October 25; Madelia; October 26, St. James; October 29, Pipestone; October 30, Heron Lake and Dundee; October 31, Worthington; November 22, Ellsworth.

Bishop Heffron will preach the dedicatory sermon on October 12 at the new St. Mary's Catholic church at Minneiska. The dedication will take place in the morning and the blessing of the three bells will occur in the afternoon. Many of the clergy of the diocese will attend.

AUTO FALL IS FATAL.

Transient at Rochester Is Thrown From Footboard of Machine.

Rochester.—A transient in Rochester giving the name of J. Wallace is dead as the result of a fall from a moving automobile.

He had been attending the county fair and upon his return to the city sought passage on an auto livery rig that had a capacity load. Wallace mounted the running board and hung on the handle of the car door. He was unable to maintain his equilibrium and in twisting back and forth he accidentally unlocked the door, which flew open and forced him to the ground.

Lighting square upon his head, he was picked up in an unconscious condition and a medical examination revealed a fracture of the base of the skull. He never regained his senses, although he appeared rational at times, and died after a few hours.

All the stones were small. The complications, as diagnosed, were a slight adhesion of the small intestine to the gall bladder, acute inflammation of the pancreas and enlarged lymphatic gland, due to septic matters in the gall bladder.

"Though the danger will not be over for several days on account of these complications, he stood the operation well and the prospects for his recovery are good."

FEAR RAID ON WINTER

AUTHORITIES OF TOWN FEAR DIETZ WILL MAKE RAID.

Children of Dietz are Wounded by Sheriff and Posse Who Ambushed Them on Way to Town.

Winter, Wis., Oct. 3.—Myra Deitz, the 21-year-old daughter of John Deitz, who was shot Saturday when Sheriff Madden and two deputies fired on the Dietz children as they were driving to this town, was taken to the hospital at Chippewa Falls today.

A score of special deputy sheriffs armed with rifles stood about the train watching for John Dietz who had threatened to come to town and prevent the officers from taking his daughter away. The girl's condition is reported to be about the same as last night, although her wounds are said to be more serious than at first reported.

The attack was made while the three children were on their way to Winter to get their week's supplies for the family.

The shooting which resulted in the wounding of Almyra and Clarence Deitz and their arrest took place at noon yesterday on the road half way between the Deitz cabin on the Cameron dam and the town of Winter.

At noon Clarence Deitz, his brother Leslie and his sister Almyra drove along the road. They were in a buggy and John Deitz was not with them. He had stayed in his cabin home.

When the buggy was opposite the men Madden and his deputies stepped out in the road and called on the occupants of the buggy to hold up their hands. Madden says they did not obey. The shooting followed.

Almyra Deitz was sitting on the lap of her brother Leslie. A bullet struck her in the hip. Clarence Deitz threw himself forward to protect his sister and was hit in the arm. Leslie Deitz slipped to the ground and escaped through the woods, returning to the Deitz cabin.

The wounded man and woman were at once placed in the buggy and taken to Winter. Medical assistance was summoned from Hayward thirty miles away. Both of the prisoners were placed under arrest on warrants.

Coudry, Wis., Oct. 1.—Every able-bodied man in Winter and the surrounding country has been sworn in as a deputy sheriff and the town of Winter and all roads approaching the town are guarded by men armed with rifles, fearing an attack from John Dietz for the shooting of three of his children on Saturday.

Nobody knows what Sheriff Madden will do next, but everybody is expecting more shooting and bloodshed within a few days.

Madden may storm Dietz' stronghold on the Thornapple river or may start a waiting game and try to starve the family out. John Leslie, a son aged 20 who escaped with a bullet hole through his right arm after the attack, Helen aged 14, Johnnie aged 7 and Mrs. Dietz are still in charge of the cabin at Cameron dam and cannot be taken by storming the cabin without a heavy loss of life. Everything is quiet, but everybody seems to feel that something unlooked for may occur at any moment.

LARGE REWARDS OFFERED.

Amount Now Reaches $18,500 for Los Angeles Dynamiters.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3.—With a reward of $10,000 offered by Mayor Alexander on behalf of the city, the total reward now out for the perpetrators of the dynamite outrage on The Times building here Saturday amounts to $18,500.

So far only five bodies have been recovered from the ruins although an army of 300 workmen are engaged in digging in the twisted and burned mass.

The inquest will be held tomorrow.

Pinned down by tons of twisted steel girders a number of bodies were reported found early today by workmen engaged in removing the debris from the basement of the wrecked Times building.

The situation was found to be such this morning that it was impossible to make any progress in recovering the bodies and a steel crane will have to be placed in order to lift the heavy material away.

Search for Drowned Marines.

New York, Oct. 3.—Search was continued today for the bodies of the United States sailors drowned Saturday evening when the cutter in which they were returning to their ship, New Hampshire, overturned. Up to 11 o'clock this morning not one of the twenty-nine reported drowned had been picked up.

Sixteen others, sailors, are missing from the battleship and are believed to have overstayed their shore leave. The boat and launch crews from the harbor police and battleships today dragged the waters of North river in the vicinity where the boat overturned and also patrolled the shore for miles in either direction.

New York, Oct. 3.—The steamer Lapland, one of the two steamers detained yesterday by the health officers of the port in pursuit of their precautions against possible cholera infection, was this morning allowed to proceed to her pier.

Two deaths had occurred on board during the voyage, but neither of these was found to be of a nature to warrant the vessel's further detention. Five of her steerage passengers, however, were sent to Hoffman Island for observation. The steamer Perugia, from Naples and other Italian ports, was still at the quaratine.

Would Tell Only Part.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—State Sen. John Broderick, who is under indictment charged with giving a bribe of $2,500 to State Senator Holstlaw to secure the latter's vote for Wm. Lorimer for United States senator, appeared before the senatorial investigating committee today and sought to make reservations as to his testimony.

Broderick said that he was willing to testify as to the main charges without naming times and places, if he could be excused from undergoing cross examination. He cited the fact that he is under indictment as justifying his demand.

TWENTY KILLED

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION WRECKS LOS ANGELES TIMES OFFICE BUILDING.

MANY BOMBS ARE FOUND

City Is in a State of Panic Over Results—Owner Attributes Outrage to Labor Unions Which Deny Complicity.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 1.—The building and plant of The Los Angeles Times, one of the best known newspapers of the southwest, and of which paper Gen. Harrison G. Otis is editor and principal owner, was completely destroyed by an explosion and fire shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, resulting in the death of upwards of twenty of its employes and a financial loss of nearly half a million.

The management of the paper lays the blame of the explosion to a labor union with which the paper has long been engaged in a bitter warfare. It is charged that unknown parties set off the charge of dynamite in a blind alley which ran into the center of the building, completely wrecking the interior and setting it on fire from roof to basement.

Within a few seconds from the time of the explosion the entire building was a fiery furnace. The crowds that gathered early say they saw many men fall back from windows into the flames. Others leaped and were injured. The editorial rooms were on the third floor, but it is believed the greater part of the men on this floor escaped death.

In addition to the complete plant of The Times the building contained the large jobbing and commercial plant of the American Engraving Co. The property loss is estimated at $500,000.

Within a few minutes after the explosion the police arrested two men near The Times building and they are being held for identification.

The feeling which ran high throughout the city during the day over the Times disaster, was augmented when the discovery was made that a dynamite bomb had been found under the residence of Secretary Zeehandelaar and reached a state of alarm and consternation when the attempt on the Otis residence became known.

Reports of the finding of other bombs were made to police headquarters during the day, but investigation disclosed them to be unfounded. Assistant General Manager Chandler of the Times is authority for the statement that a similar attempt was made to blow up the Times auxiliary plant at College and San Fernando streets a few minutes before the explosion occurred which destroyed the main building.

The succession of tragic events and the rumors of attempted outrages set the populace of Los Angeles in a state of mind bordering on panic. Hundreds of policemen and detectives were busy in every direction running down clues and endeavoring to locate the alleged perpetrators of the crimes. But two arrests have been made and they were on suspicion.

The president of the local typographical union issued orders today that union printers may work in conjunction with non-union printers of the Times in any of the local newspaper offices in getting out the edition of the Times. This was announced after a consultation of the union men and the managers of the other newspapers.

The city council met in special session during the day and appropriated $25,000 for the purpose of determining the cause of the Times explosion and provide a reward of $2,500 for the capture of those responsible for the outrage.

Mayor Alexander and the city council, meeting with other city officers and local union leaders during the day, mutually agreed to call off the big union labor parade planned for next Monday night as a demonstration against local conditions alleged to be hostile to the interests of union labor.

The death list is this morning's disaster probably will total twenty.

There are four known dead and fifteen missing, whose bodies almost to a certainty lie in the still smoking ruins of the building.

Trailing Shipment of Dynamite.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 4.—That progress in the search for the perpetrators of The Los Angeles Times disaster may be made today is indicated by the statement given out here late last night by Earl Rogers, the Los Angeles attorney, who is in charge of the investigation of the explosion.

Rogers said: "We have important information in our possession." He expressed the hope that the investigation would develop sufficiently today to trail the launch "Peerless" in which the dynamite purchased at Giant, Cal., by a trio of suspects now being sought was taken away.

Barge Burns—Crew Saved.

Ludington, Mich., Oct. 4.—The coal barge, Frank L. Vance, bound from this port to Milwaukee, Wis., was burned a few miles off this harbor today, the crew being taken off by the lumber barge, Marshall, in time to save their lives.

The first report reaching here was from Captain McIsaacs of Pere Marquette car ferry No. 19 which sighted the barge on the way in from Milwaukee. The ferry and the Marshall stood by until driven away from the fear of an explosion, the engineers of the coal barge having reported the water low in the boiler.

In Picturesque Burano

by Dr. Habberton Lulham

AN OLD WOMAN OF BURANO

A BURANO YOUTH

A BURANO BEAUTY

A QUAYSIDE IN THE FISHER-ISLAND OF BURANO

A TYPICAL FISHERMAN OF BURANO

THOUSANDS of travelers hopefully seek Venice yearly, their imaginations long fed by the painters and poets who have pictured the beautiful city in hues and terms which, though it may be true to their own highly cultivated senses, tend to bring no little disappointment to the ordinary beholder. For Venice, but too often, proves to the latter not quite the fairy Venice of his visioning, his chief disappointment being, perhaps, its lack of those glowing colors which he has been led by books and picture ... to expect. And nowadays this falling ... of his ideal is increased by the vulgarizing ... of the penny steamboat—the vaporetto, with which the Venetians seem so contented—that ... sets the gondola rocking as it passes, and stirs up that in the sleeping canal waters which had better been let lie; to say nothing of the motor boat, which is threatening to do for the gondola what the "taxi" is doing for our hansoms at home.

If such a traveler be leaving Venice with a sense of disappointment, let him by no means depart till he has visited the fisher island of Burano, for, if he but choose his day and hour well, he will assuredly take home with him a satisfying picture of one spot at least, glowing with color and teeming with a picturesque life, that has outrun his most hopeful imaginings.

There can be few more pleasant experiences on a fine, warm afternoon in spring or autumn—in early May or mid-September for choice—than to take a gondola, with two good rowers, and win one's first sight of Burano.

A gondola it must be, not the vaporetto, that one may arrive alone or with a well-chosen companion, and not as one amongst a crowd of chattering, sight-seeing snapshotters.

The way to Burano takes one through about six miles of lagoon landscape to the eastward of Venice. The island is situated about five miles northeast of Venice, in northern Italy. The chief industries of the people are market gardening, building of boats and fishing; the women are employed principally in lace-making. The island of Torcello also belongs to Burano. It is located on an adjacent isle and the principal attractions that would interest travelers are the two museums of antiquities and the cathedral, which was built in the seventh century and was rebuilt during the year 1008. This cathedral contains many valuable mosaics.

It is a populous little place, with a busy community of fisherfolk and lace-makers. In the struggle for existence it has fared better than its older and once more prosperous neighbors, Mazzorbo and Torcello; the former it has, in fact, annexed by means of a long, arching, wooden bridge, which, seen from the low seat of a gondola, looks like that on a willow-pattern plate.

Approaching the island, one may find one's gondola passing or passed by increasing numbers of fishing boats racing each other home to Burano; finely bronzed, statuesque men stand bending lustily to their oars, their half-clad forms showing many a fine play and molding of muscle. The sails of these boats are of delightful coloring—saffron and sienna, orange, red and burnt umber—and are often emblazoned with fantastic designs, or with stars, flowers or portraits of patron saints.

Then the island, with its leaning campanile, appears before one, its many-tinted walls basking in the late sunlight. Approaching it on its westward side one glides past the opening of a canal that intersects the island, and a first glance reveals a scene that must live long in the memory of any lover of movement and color. The quay sides are lined with fishing boats, newly home, many with their gorgeous sails still swaying idly and glowing in the level rays of the late ... sun. Sunburnt, earringed men are heaping piles of glittering fish before the cottage doors, helped by the women, who add still more color to the scene with the shawls and kerchiefs worn over their heads. These most becoming garments are, however, not as a rule very brilliantly hued, but of mauve, fawn color, or a tawny red, the stronger colors being reserved for the bodices. Shoals of brown children laugh and dance about the shining heaps, thrusting out, here and there, little bare feet to touch and make leap some strangely shaped, brilliantly hued fish.

All is swift movement, glowing colors and vivacious sound, the whole picture backed by the cottage walls, which themselves display many a soft, weather-stained tint, for the Buranelli are fond of washes of pink, light green and primrose color.

There I first met old Pietro, with his crisp, white curls, ruddy bronze, and merry laugh, despite his ninety years and many seasons of toil in the boats, still cheerfully making his daily cast of nets. Old Nonna, his wife, was herself only a few years younger, but possessing a head of thick, wavy white hair, of which any woman twenty years her junior might have been proud. Always busy was she, mending, cooking, cleaning, and always, it seemed, happy, with a smiling word for every passer-by.

There, too, dwelt little Adelle, their granddaughter, an incarnation of youthful loveliness and delight in life. Merry, gracious, tender-hearted Adelle, with your great brown eyes, tossing curls, and flash of teeth, with your dancing feet and quick, helpful hands, how many pictures and memories you gave us, little one! I recall how when first we landed from our gondola, and the bandit horde of village children came flying down the shore, leaving their games to crowd around us, with their cries of "Soldi, soldi, signore!" you, like a proud little princess, remained behind, by the ruined wall, tying your bunch of rosy flowers.

Yet once you did beg; it was when you took us to see that poor, wasted little friend of yours, sitting at her cottage door, bending so frailly over her pillow lace; then you took her small, thin hand and drew it toward me, whispering a shy "Soldi" in my ear, and I felt proud of my little friend and her way of begging.

And again I see you, with your young rogue of a brother, Beppo, putting out in the small, light gondola—sandola, did you call it?—one May evening at moonrise, to take the same little friend's bunch of pink Judas-blossom across the lagoon and lay it before the shrine of the Fisherman's Madonna, that stood up solitary out of the shadowy waters, there to offer up your simple prayer for her recovery.

The Burandelli are an independent spirited, hardy, strongly marked race, but their dialect is one of a caressing softness; slurring and half-singing their words, they dwell on the vowel sounds till the consonants well-nigh disappear, and each sentence ends in a sort of crooning diminuendo.

One is loath to leave the little island and row home at last. But the lagoon is quieting down to a pearly gray in the evening light, though still flushed to westward with a faint rose, which touches also the far-away peaks of the Euganean hills. Presently the moon rises behind Murano, and ere long a welcoming path of reflected lamplights shines on the water, from Riva and Piazetta, and soon Danielli's landing stage receives one again. But that first glimpse of the brilliant, vivid scene in the fisherman's canal at Burano, of the healthy, handsome old faces and the laughing young ones, will haunt a grateful memory for many a day.

And Adelle herself may still be found there, only two years older, and still, one may hope, wreathing her flowers, tending her old folk and her little friend, working busily at her lace, and affording, in her gracious being, recompense for many a disillusionment of travel.

A NOTE OF SYMPATHY

Immediately on knowing of a death in the family of a friend one should show formal recognition of the fact, even though the acquaintance be slight. Only if one is really an old friend does one send a note or go to the house, but unless some attention is paid to the affliction those who are undergoing it have no way of knowing whether the others from whom they have not heard are aware of it.

To post one's visiting card, or, better still, to leave it at the house in person is the most formal way one may do. Something may be written on the card or not, as one chooses; but, generally speaking, if one writes at all the form should take that of a note and not a line on a card, which may always be considered casual, saving the bother of a note. The card, which should be accompanied also by that of the husband when a woman is married, is addressed to the widow or widower, as the case may be, or to the parents when the death has been that of a child.

Flowers which may be sent are addressed to the head of the house and visiting cards are placed in the box. It is not good form to send them when funeral notices request that flowers shall be omitted. If one is keenly desirous of expressing a sympathy which is felt, one may wait until after the funeral services and send flowers to the person most deeply bereaved, as the wife, or widow. Only at that time are blossoms received by an individual; that is, any sent before a funeral are supposed to be for use at the services and are not retained in the house. Those sent several days afterward are undoubtedly meant for the use of the individual to whom they are addressed.

It is a very pretty thought to show such an attention a week or so after a funeral, for those in affliction are more than apt to feel that their grief is quickly forgotten by their friends, who are all sympathy at first. It is not necessary that any note shall accompany the box, but the recipient is required to send a note of thanks, written either by herself or another member of the family or a friend for her.

Exact Knowledge Counts

Congressman Will Listen Closest If the Speaker Is Familiar With His Subject.

In an interview Congressman Weeks related his experience on first entering congress. He said he soon realized that a member who was thoroughly familiar with even one subject could maintain the attention of his audience better than a congressman who could talk fairly well on almost any subject. A measure came up involving the custom of "hazing" at Annapolis, and as he was a graduate, he was urged to say something in behalf of the bill. "You may not have as good a chance for five years to speak on a subject which you so thoroughly understand," said his colleague. He asked the speaker for an opportunity to state his views in five minutes. "When I rose to make my little speech," said Mr. Weeks, "the members were in the usual state of disorder, talking, writing, lounging or coming in or going out. 'Mr. Speaker,' I said as loudly as I could, with the idea of making my voice heard above the din, 'I am a graduate of the Naval academy at Annapolis.' Before I got any further, to my surprise, the noise ceased. Men stopped and looked at me with attention, as though saying to themselves: 'Here is a man who knows whereof he speaks. We will listen to what information he may be able to give.' Since then," continued Mr. Weeks, "I have found that exact knowledge on any subject under discussion will always gain the attention of the house of representatives."

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS IN EUROPE CAUSE ANXIETY

KAISER WATCHING THE NEW RAPID FIRING GUNS

GERMANY'S NEW NAVAL BASE

LONDON.—Great Britain is watching with considerable anxiety the activity of the German kaiser on the little island of Borkum, off the northwest coast of Hanover, where a new naval base has been established. It was there that two British officers were arrested recently as spies, in retaliation for which the British arrested a German officer named Helm. The German army has just acquired a new rapid firing gun that fires 600 shots per minute, and is safe and accurate. It has been approved by the emperor.

AGAINST THE HOBBLE SKIRT

Dress Designer from Paris Says It Is Horrible and Sidesteps Women Who Wear Them.

New York.—C. Poynter Redfern of Paris, dress designer, arrived here the other day to witness the opening of his new place in this city.

Redfern said he was bringing no new designs that would thrill us, and while a number of women on board "hobbled" near him, he seemed to move aside every time a hobble skirt came along.

"Don't you like the hobble skirt?" he was asked.

"No, I do not," he replied, "although I suppose I shouldn't say anything about them. They are horrible. I never did like anything that is extreme in the dress line. Women should have freedom in dress. Those skirts are too tight.

"We are not going in for them at all. The new style will be the long waist of the Louis XV type. There is a tendency in that direction in Paris now. Mme. Cecil Sorel wore such a waist at the opera lately and created quite a sensation.

"I'm not bringing styles here because you get them just as soon as they are out."

Centenarian a Pedestrian.

Worcester, Mass.—Although two years past the century mark, Patrick Burns, the oldest man in this county, walked from his home, near Brookfield, to his son's home, on the North Brookfield road, more than ten miles, in two hours and fifty-one minutes. He attracted much attention and was followed by a small army of admirers.

Burns has been in the habit of taking a walk each day, but never attempted so long a walk before. Burns has voted for most of the presidents of the United States.

BIRCH LEAVES FALL

Work of Skeletonizer Moth, Says Massachusetts Forester.

Scores of Letters From Different Parts of State Inquiring as to Cause Damage Done by the Tineid Moth.

Boston.—During the last two weeks the state forester, F. W. Rane, has received scores of letters from different parts of the state, inquiring into the cause of the damage to the birch trees, the leaves of which everywhere have become yellow or brown and are dropping off. So general is the desire for information that the state forester, through the medium of the press, desires to give the public the following facts:

The insect causing the damage is known as the birch-leaf skeletonizer (bucculatrix canadensisella), one of the tineid moths. The outbreak of the insect is by no means unprecedented, as a similar condition obtained over a considerable portion of Massachusetts in 1901, also in the eastern portion of New York state.

Little is known concerning the life history and habits of the insect. The moth is small, wings expanding about three-fourths of an inch. The larvae, or caterpillars, measure less than one-quarter inch long and occur the latter part of August or early in September, feeding on the soft parenchyma of the leaf and skeletonizing it thoroughly. At this time small oval cocoons may be observed here and there on the leaves. These are spun by the caterpillar during a molt. The true cocoons are brownish yellow ribbed structures about one-fifth inch in length.

These may be so abundant as to give color to portions of infested leaves. They are spun during the latter part of September and the insect passes the winter within. No permanent injury to the trees is likely to follow the attack of this insect, as the pest has shown that its outbreaks have been quickly suppressed by natural enemies.

By an act recently passed by the legislature the state forester is authorized to accept on behalf of the commonwealth bequests or gifts to be used in furthering the forestry interests in the state.

This act enables owners of waste land which is of no present value and on which the taxes are looked upon as so much money thrown away, an opportunity to free himself of the burden and be assured at the same time that the land will be converted into a forest growth which will add much to the value of the surrounding property and improve the scenic beauty of the section.

It is also hoped that public spirited parties will contribute to the undertaking and make possible the purchase of some of the low priced land in the commonwealth.

Of the 700,000 acres of waste land in the state, it seems a portion of this large area might be brought into value and act as an example to encourage land owners to undertake forest planting themselves.

EVERY HOUSE HAS ITS BABY

Benevolent Stork Is Busy Bird In Small Connecticut Town—Everybody Is Supplied.

Waterbury, Conn.—Terry's Bridge is a little knife town north of here, with less than one hundred families.

The special Sunday school service of the Union chapel was scarcely opened when one of the infant class, bursting with pride and excitement, announced to the room:

"We have got a little baby sister at our house. The doctor brought her this morning."

Another girl spoke up, "He brought one to our house, too, a little while ago."

"Yes," announced a third, with all the conviction of childhood, "he is going to bring everybody one now. Papa said we were going to have one the first time we were good a whole week."

Weight of Earth.

New York.—Mother Earth weighs seven trillion tons. Reinhart A. Wetzel, instructor in physics at the College of the City of New York, has finished a series of experiments by which he has computed the weight of this mundane sphere. According to instructor Wetzel the result is more nearly accurate than has hitherto been obtained. The apparatus used in the experiments was so delicate that they were carried on entirely after midnight to avoid even the jarring of footfalls in the farthest corridor.

WEE BEETLE INJURES TREE

Entomologist Blames Boring Insect for Withering Dogwoods—Remedy Now Lacking.

Philadelphia.—Householders who have been wondering why the branches of the dogwood trees in their yards and in front of their houses were withering need wonder no longer. Scientific investigation of the entomologist of the Academy of Natural Sciences have established the fact that the trees are being destroyed by a "boring, fleshy, wormlike larva of a Buprestis beetle, a medium-sized, thick-necked insect of dull color.

This was announced by Witmer Stone, the curator of the academy. He explained that many specimens of dogwood trees had been submitted to the entomologist and that he had examined them carefully.

The conclusion is reached that this insect is doing the damage. It is a mite of a beetle and deposits its eggs under the bark. Its color is such that it is not easily noticed, which accounts for the fact that so many persons have been puzzled over the cause of the destruction of the dogwood trees.

Ends of the slender branches of the ornamental dogwoods have withered and dropped off. When examined with the naked eye nothing was discernible. But the entomologist used the microscope and got at the root of the trouble. He was quick to blame the damage on the apparently harmless insects that multiply by the millions and that have been eating the life out of countless dogwood trees throughout the city.

No suggestion is made at this time as to a possible remedy, but the assurance is given that an effort will be made to find something that can be used effectively in killing these destructive bugs.

YOSEMITE WATERS IN RUSH

Tourists In Panic When Falls, Dry for Several Weeks, Is Flooded by Huge Cloudburst.

Yosemite, Cal.—Yosemite Falls, one of the sights of the valley, which has been dry for several weeks, because of the lack of rain, was restored to activity the other evening with a suddenness that caused a panic among the guests at the hotel.

Shortly before seven o'clock, a wall of water plunged over the top of the fall, coming without warning. The solid mass of water took the 2,600-foot leap to the bottom, landing with a roar that could be heard for miles.

The volume of water now pouring over the falls is equal to that of any spring high water record.

While no definite news has been received, it is supposed there was a cloudburst in the mountains.

Guests at the hotel were at dinner when the crash of the falling water came. They leaped to their feet in alarm, deafened by the noise, and made their way outside to witness the unusual spectacle

HIS CUSS WORDS ON RECORD

French Cabinet Officer Wouldn't Stand for Long-Drawn-Out Formality of Office.

Paris.—The present minister of marine, Admiral Bouse de Lapeyrere, is not used to red tape. Recently a French engineer sent a model of a new torpedo to the department.

The minister ordered the necessary tests to be made, but was informed that he might expect a report in six months' time.

The minister was astonished, and took prompt steps to remedy this state of affairs. He first called together the committee, and much to their astonishment, formally dissolved it.

Then, summoning a young officer of high technical attainments, he ordered him at once to examine the new torpedo, and to furnish a detailed report of it in three weeks.

There is a touch of the much honored Nelson about this. It reminds one, too, of John Nicholson, the hero of Delhi, who once kicked a bundle of government regulations across his office, remarking cheerfully: "That's what I do with these things."

Money for Baubles.

New York.—Gen. Howard Carroll, who has returned after an automobile tour of Europe, criticises the "extravagances of tourists from this country," who "spent $250,000,000 in Europe this year for baubles; souvenirs, jewelry and traveling expenses."

He said there were no grapes in Germany, and that France had few. In consequence he predicted a wine shortage.

Girls to Learn Plumbing.

Chicago.—A course in plumbing is an innovation announced by Superintendent Ella Flagg Young.

"So many girls know no more about the water and gas used in kitchens than 'turn the faucet and the water flows,' or 'the gas is ready to light,'" said Mrs. Young. "We want them to know more about these matters, from a sanitary viewpoint."

Tickl... ...the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat!" Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Constipation positively prevents good health. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. What does your doctor say?

RED LAKE IS DIFFERENT!

The Gazette has maintained in its anti division arguments that simply because some other and smaller counties of the state have lower rates of taxation than Red Lake county is no indication that to divide Red Lake county will result in lower taxation.

In an attempt to show that our contentions are wrong the Thief River papers last week made a comparison between Red Lake county and Kanabec county, a county having fifteen townships. The argument is concluded with the statement that—

> "Kannebec county has a handsome court house and hardly any debts of any kind. Red Lake is different."

Yes, Red Lake is different. And isn't that just the point? Will the reduced Red Lake or the proposed Pennington county be in the class with Kanabec that "has a handsome county court house and hardly any debts of any kind."

When Red Lake county was set off from Polk county the new county had to assume a part of Polk's debts and to pay a large sum for transcribing the records. That gave the new county a big load of debts and all county improvements yet to be made, and that condition is responsible in a large measure for Red Lake county's present indebtedness. The county tax levy was small for a number of years for the reason that it was felt that the people of the new county could not afford to pay more taxes than were absolutely necessary to keep the county government going.

The new county of Pennington, if created, will have to pass through a similar experience. It will have to pay a part of Red Lake county's debts as Red Lake county had to pay a part of Polk's. Then there will be the expenses of transcribing records and the cost of a handsome court house before it will be in the class with Kanabec.

And then it won't be in the class with Kanabec, after all, will it?—because Kanabec has a handsome county court house and "hardly any debts of an kind."

Yes, Pennington will be quite different, for it will have an indebtedness of more than $100,000.00 while Kanabec "has hardly any debts of any kind."

The Gazette still maintains that there is no fair comparison between the smaller counties of the state and the condition that will exist here if the county is divided.

"Do not tell me that it is unmanly, slavish, cowardly, not to resent an injury," said Cardinal Gibbons in his sermon at the Eucharistic congress. "It is the conventional language of depraved popular opinion. It is the highest type of moral courage to condone an injury. It is the part of the animal man to avenge an insult. It is only God and the sons of God that have the unanimity to forgive."

Roosevelt wouldn't sit with Lorimer, and in less than twenty-four hours sat with Boss Cox in Cincinnati, a man who could teach Lorimer more about political corruption than any other man since Tweed's time, says the Little Falls Herald. Cox's influence is needed to elect son-in-law Longworth to congress, so critics say. But, as has been often said Roosevelt can do what no one else can and still remain popular. Nevertheless with all his tremendous inconsistencies, his supreme egotism, and dislike of all reform except his own, he can do if he will, more good than any other American by broadening the opinions of those who believe in him.

JAMES GRAY'S "KEYNOTE."

St. Paul Pioneer Press: James Gray, the Democratic candidate for governor, in his keynote speech delivered at Fergus Falls, makes a decidedly comprehensive, clear and interesting statement on his attitude on what he considers the leading issues of the campaign, including both the chief declarations of the party's platform and, in several instances taking advanced ground.

Those who were fortunate enough to hear Mr. Gray doubtless will be charmed by his personality and his individuality as demonstrated in his speeches and will at the same time, receive from him a clear-cut unequivocal statement of his attitude on the issues upon which the contest is to be won or lost.

Mr. Gray's keynote speech follows closely along the declarations of the party platform except in the matter of county option and his reference to the recent findings of Judge Otis in the railway rate cases. He argues that a state which creates a corporation can not be expected to lose control and regulation of its creature, and he pledges his best efforts to protect and defend Minnesota's sovereign power in this respect.

Wheelock's Weekly: James Gray has captured Otter Tail county by his address here Tuesday night. He will, without question get one of the largest votes in the county's history. His views are those held by a majority of our citizens, regardless of party—that majority referred to by Senator Sageng in his introduction of the speaker as being carved out of the solid ranks of both old parties, in favor of the rule of the people and opposed to privilege and plunder. Mr. Gray's slogan, "Restore the Rights of the People," is one which every true man and every advocate of truer government should stand by and work for. It cannot be successfully assailed. It cannot fail to create everywhere the enthusiasm that it has here. It is the forerunner of the people's victory in November, in the triumphant election of James Gray to succeed John A. Johnson.

at the state capitol wise to the situation who put it up to him where he couldn't get away.

The Law Plain.

For there never was any doubt what the law is. The Minnesota law is copied from the New York law. The New York law has been tested repeatedly. It was declared good by the highest court in the state. In cases of this sort decisions in the court here the act was originally passed are cited as conclusive in other states which adopt the law. All that had to be done here was to find out the number of shares of Great Northern Stock Kennedy had and its market value on the day of his death and then make a demand on the estate for the inheritance taxes due. The estate could not resist payment, as indeed it did not in this case. Nevertheless Simpson hummed and hawed over the matter and would probably have laid it down altogether if he hadn't been pushed.

A Decision Held up.

It is rumored that a decision has been reached at the attorney general's office with respect to the McHale ordinance. It is said that the decision, which was written by a minor official in the legal department, holds that to secure a liquor license the applicant must prove that he has at least a 50 per cent ownership in the business. The opinion, although approved by the attorney general, will not be given out until after the election, however, as its political effect might be unfortunate.

Why He Sat Tight.

Some time ago it was rumored that Mr. Peterson of this department was to be candidate for judge in the Fergus Falls District. Mr. Peterson has had charge of the timber cases the successful issue of which is not the least of the feathers in the cap of the department. He is regarded in the profession as the ablest lawyer at the capitol, the secretary of the state not excepted. Mr. Simpson did not object to Mr. Peterson's getting into the fight, but suggested to him that if he did he would have to cut loose from his job in the attorney general's office. Peterson couldn't see his way clear to giving up a certainty for an uncertainty and so reluctantly gave up his ambition. The fact is said to be that Simpson would have been well satisfied to have him go, and had picked out Judge Nethway of Stillwater as his successor. Nethway is a good deal a politician, has influential connections, and Simpson has wanted to take care of him for some time.

Ole Through Plowing.

Things are so in Otter Tail county that Senator Sageng has no opposition. I am told that such arrangements have been made that he will give the greater part of his time between now and election to spellbinding for Gray. Anyone who has a chance shouldn't miss hearing him. They will understand then better why, without party at all behind him, he is so strong with the people of his district that opposition melts away. And he acts as good as he talks. No man made a better record in the legislature.

Ed. a Trifle Shy.

People are wondering why Ed. Smith didn't go down to Mankato to take part in the demonstration for Eberhart. Ed. really ought to show himself now and then. People would naturally like to meet the man who is the real representative of the power behind the throne and gives out the orders and the stuff.

Eberhart Recruits.

Whatever doubt there may be as to the attitude of others there is no question where the liquor interests are in this campaign. The Scott county agent of the Hamm Brewing Co., marshalled a delegation 200 strong which boarded the train at Shakopee to hear the governor open the campaign at Mankato. In Moorhead liquor men, who had up to that time been part of the Democratic organizations, would have nothing to do with Gray's reception. The liquor interests are pulling every string there is and have done, it is said, on the national body to strengthen the campaign fund. The Republican State Central committee is setting up no such roar as they were in the last campaign about not being able to shake down anything, Ed. Smith says, on the contrary, that so far as that is concerned they are on Easy street.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acrid formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S. S. S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.

I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S. S. S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S. S. S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.

Some Shoes Can't Shrink—and Why

Suppose your tailor made you a suit of clothes without sponging the cloth—what happens? Get into the rain and it's a sure thing that good looking suit will be "little brother" size. And the same with shoes.

In making shoes the leather must be moist so that it will be pliable and easily worked.

But if you take out the lasts, over which they are made, before the leather is thoroughly dry, the shoes will shrink out of shape when worn.

Some manufacturers do this to save money. We leave the lasts in to the end. Means the shoes are "foot shape" when they reach you—and it means too, they stay that shape, because all of their shrinking is done right in our factory.

Proposed Amendments
—TO THE—
Constitution
—OF—
Minnesota
—BY—
The Legislature
General Session
1909.

St. Paul, Minn., May 1, 1910.

Hon. Julius A. Schmahl, Secretary of State—

Sir: As required by Section 25 of the Revised Laws as amended, I have the honor to furnish you herewith a statement of the purposes and effects of the respective amendments proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota by the Legislature of 1909 and which are to be submitted to the electors in said state at the general election in 1910.

FIRST PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The first proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 506 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to authorize the payment by the State from the State Road and Bridge Fund of one-half of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein, and is an amendment of Section 16 of Article 9 of the Constitution, which now reads as follows:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided further, that in no case shall more than one-third (⅓) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund," and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund, to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add in such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that in no case shall more than one-half (½) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund."

EFFECT. The present Constitution authorizes the payment by the State, out of such fund so created of ONE-THIRD (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein. If this amendment is adopted the State could then pay ONE-HALF (½) of the cost of constructing any such road or bridge, and the effect of the amendment is thus to increase the amount which the State may lawfully pay toward such purpose.

SECOND PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The second proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 507 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to repeal the provisions of Section 11 of Article IX of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 11. There shall be published by the treasurer, in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, during the first week in January of each year, and in the next volume of the acts of the legislature, detailed statements of all moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, for what purposes and to whom paid, and by what law authorized; and also of all moneys received, and by what authority and from whom."

EFFECT. The Constitution requires the treasurer to publish yearly a detailed statement of the moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, giving the names of the persons to whom paid and the purposes for which it was expended. It also requires a like statement of the names of the persons, and the sources, as to money received, and in both cases a statement of the law under which payments were made, or money paid into the treasury. The effect of this Amendment, if the same be adopted, will be to repeal the section of the Constitution mentioned and insofar relieve the treasurer from such publication. This change in the Constitution, however, would not prevent the legislature from hereafter directing by law that such, or a different publication, of the same or other information should be made by the Treasurer.

THIRD PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The third proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 508 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 17, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment, by the State of Minnesota, of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, including the necessary expenses of giving effect to this act, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the State to become a trustee in the collection and disbursement of a fund for the payment of damages to growing crops by hail or wind, or either. This fund is to be created and maintained by a specific tax imposed by the legislature upon the lands of such persons, ONLY, as shall voluntarily list the same with their respective county auditors for that purpose. Under it there could be no tax for such purpose imposed on the lands of any owner who does not consent thereto. The legislature is also authorized to include in such fund the necessary expenses of administration of the law. The adoption of the amendment will authorize the legislature to direct that the taxing machinery of the state be used to levy and collect the tax necessary to raise such fund and to provide for the disbursement of same by the officers of the State; but any payments to be made by the State, by reason of damage by hail or wind will have to be made from such fund and from no other. In the settlement of any such damages the State would assume no liability beyond the amount of such fund, and could not further be rendered liable. A similar amendment was offered at the general election of 1908, but not adopted. The amendment then offered read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment by the State of Minnesota of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

The main difference between the amendment now offered, and the one last quoted, being that the legislature is now to be authorized, in addition to providing a fund for the purpose of paying damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, to further provide an additional tax upon the lands of the persons so listing the same, to meet the necessary expenses incurred in the administration of the law and thus relieve the State therefrom. This last provision was not included in the amendment offered in 1908.

FOURTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fourth proposed Amendment is contained in Chapter 509, General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to repeal Section 23 of Article IV of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and every tenth year thereafter. At their first session after each enumeration so made, and also at their first session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional senatorial and representative districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section second of this article."

and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year 1915, and every ten (10) years thereafter. At any session after any enumeration of the inhabitants of this state made pursuant to law and also at any session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or any of the same, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section 2 of this article."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment will be to direct the legislature to provide for a census of the inhabitants of the State in the year 1915, and every tenth year thereafter, and will also authorize the legislature to change the boundaries of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or of any one of such districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts, at any session after any State or Federal census. If adopted, the legislature might therefore, if it deems best, change at any session the boundaries of such districts and apportion anew the senators and representatives and thus redistrict the State every two years.

FIFTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fifth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 510, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 18, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 18. To secure a sustained yield of timber for the use of the people of this state, the proper officials shall annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property within this state, the proceeds of which shall be used for the purchase of land better adapted for forestry purposes than for agriculture for the state at not over $3.00 per acre, and for the production and maintenance thereon of forest according to forestry principles.

"Unexpended balances shall not lapse but constitute a fund for forestry purposes.

"The timber produced thereon shall be sold at a fair valuation and the revenue therefrom or from other source shall be paid into the state treasury, except that one-quarter of the net revenue shall be paid to the towns, or if unorganized, to the county, in which the land is situated, in aid of public schools and roads.

"Should any tract acquired be found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, it may be sold and the proceeds used for acquiring or developing forestry land.

"Until otherwise directed by the legislature, which may supplement these provisions with necessary enactments, the state forestry board shall draw and disburse the money hereby provided and purchase, manage and control the lands and forests.

"No money shall be paid for any tract until the attorney general shall certify to the validity of the title.

"It shall be competent for two successive regular legislatures, by a two-thirds vote of each house, to repeal any of these provisions."

EFFECT. This proposed amendment, and the proposed amendment hereafter mentioned should be read together. They constitute the foundation for a plan of State reforestration. As the constitution stands today, while the legislature might pass laws providing funds to be used for the purchase of lands, and the cultivation of the same for reforestration purposes, yet it is not directed to do so. The effect then of this amendment is to COMPEL the taxing officers of the state to annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property in the state, to be used as the legislature shall direct, for the purchase for the state of land adapted to forestry purposes, but at a price not to exceed $3 per acre. All unexpired balances in the fund at the end of each fiscal year shall not lapse, but shall be carried over into the fund thus raised for the succeeding year and shall be an addition thereto. It also directs the sale, at a fair valuation, of the timber produced on such land so purchased, the payment of three-fourths of the money received therefrom into the state treasury, and the payment of the remaining one-fourth to the town, if organized, or otherwise to the county in which the land is situated, and that the same shall there be credited to the public school funds. If after the land is purchased it is found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, authority is contained in this amendment to sell it, but the proceeds must be used for acquiring or developing forestry land. Until the legislature provides otherwise, all purchases shall be under the direction of the State Forestry Board. The title to all lands purchased must be approved by the Attorney General before purchase is made. It is further provided that two successive regular legislatures shall have power by a two-thirds vote of each house to repeal any of the foregoing provisions. That is to say, if after a trial, such plan for any reason is found to be impracticable or undesirable, and it so appears to two successive legislatures, any or all of the foregoing provisions of the amendment may be repealed. The legislature does not now possess such power and the same is a distinct change in the methods heretofore in vogue in Minnesota, in the making and revising of the Constitution. Heretofore an amendment might only be made to the Constitution or a provision of that instrument eliminated by direct vote of the electors. Under this amendment, if it be adopted, that power is not taken away and also exists. But a new power, that of repeal by the legislature, as to this amendment, is created. Such power, however, would extend to no other provision of the Constitution and affords an easy method of change in case of necessity or advisability.

SIXTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The sixth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 511, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution to be known as Section 17a, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17a. Laws may be enacted exempting lands from taxation for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon."

EFFECT. The effect of this amendment is to authorize the legislature to enact laws exempting from taxation lands of private persons to be used in the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon, and thus supplement where the lands of such private persons are devoted to reforestration, the purposes contemplated as to public lands by the fifth proposed amendment. The authority so granted is part of a general plan for the reforestration of land within the state. If the legislature does not pass such laws, such lands will not be exempt and the power to repeal such a law, when enacted, remains with the legislature. Power to pass a law to exempt such lands from taxation the legislature does not now possess, and it is, therefore, an additional grant of power.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE T. SIMPSON,
Attorney General.

St. Paul, May 1, 1910.

Mr. Julius A. Schmahl,
Secretary of State.

Dear Sir:—Referring to proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 2 would say: As state expert printer I have given the publications involved in this proposed amendment special thought, and am of opinion both these publications are entirely superfluous. The extensive annual publication "in a daily newspaper published at the capital city" attracts absolutely no attention. The annual report of the state treasurer is published in book form, and to an extent that makes it easy for every person specially concerned to secure a copy. To conform strictly with the law as it is at present, means the expenditure, under reasonably favorable printing contracts, of approximately $8,000, a sum which can be used to excellent advantage under conditions which ordinarily suggest the greatest care and economy upon the part of those under whose direction the printing fund is expended.

Yours respectfully,
J. T. MANNIX,
State Expert Printer

The KITCHEN CABINET

"THE world will be better when women as well as men learn [illegible] moderate in speech [illegible] as in eating and drinking."

Suggestions for Jelly Making.

The jelly-making season is upon us, and there will be, as of yore, the disappointed housewife whose jelly is [illegible] and leathery and that which will not jell. For the aid of those who are in trouble I would give a few hints which may be helpful. To obtain the clear, sparkling, toothsome product is not as difficult as it would seem, regardless of the fact that a really excellent glass of jelly is not common, even at our food exhibits.

If you have had trouble in getting your jelly to thicken, try making it in small quantities. If you take four cupfuls of juice to four cupfuls of sugar you will be more apt to succeed than if a larger quantity is used in making currant jelly.

If the currants are wet they will need longer cooking than if dry, as they should be. After a heavy rain fruit that is water-soaked will not thicken. Overripe fruit will never make as good jelly as that which is slightly green.

The thickening principle in fruit called "pectin" is present in larger quantities in unripe fruit, as the ripening by sun and heat changes it to sugar. In making currant or grape jelly see that there are a good number of green ones on the bunches.

Cook the fruit until soft but not mushy, as it will not be clear if cooked too long, then drain in a jelly bag. Take plenty of time for this process. A good way to do is to let the fruit drip over night and make the jelly in the morning.

Jelly that is sour to be used for accompaniment to meats need not have equal bulk of sugar as it will thicken with very much less.

A great advantage of the small quantity plan is that if a failure is made the devastation is not quite complete.

The hot sugar should be stirred in as soon as the juice is hot. Heating the sugar hastens the process. Stir until dissolved, then boil two minutes and try a little in a cold saucer. As soon as it shows the slightest thickening pour it into the glasses and let stand a day or two in the sun to finish. Too long cooking will make the jelly "livery" or change it into a sirup that will never thicken.

"IMITATION and emulation break up homes without number. The woman whose husband has one thousand a year is trying to do the same as the woman whose husband has five thousand. Of course the result is failure. Don't imitate. What the world hungers for is originality. We can all be original; there's no other me, there's no other you. Be like the flowers, each going along in its own little line of business and the daisy doesn't try to be a rose."—M. M. [illegible]

The Care of the Refrigerator.

Nothing can be more dangerous to the health of a household than a refrigerator carelessly kept.

One of the first essentials is to see that the drain pipe is not connected with the house drain, because of the possibility that sewer gas might come up the waste pipe into the refrigerator. At any event it is not desirable to have the food supply connected with the house drain.

The refrigerator should be well cleansed once a week and oftener in hot weather. Strong ammonia water is good to use for the cleaning, then rinse and wipe dry. One of the properties of a good refrigerator is perfect dryness. Any food with a strong odor should be kept from the company of milk and butter. A few bananas will ruin the flavor of a jar of butter in a few hours.

Charcoal or a piece of dry lime if kept in the food compartment will absorb odors and impurities. Keep milk and butter closely covered so that the flavor may not be lost or changed.

"DINE well and wisely and the cares of life will slip from you, its vexations and annoyances will dwindle into nothingness."

Cheese Dishes.

Cheese being a highly nutritive food, takes the place of meat during the hot months on many tables. Unless carefully prepared it is difficult of digestion. One reason that it is hard to digest is, it being such a concentrated food it needs careful mastication, which it doesn't always have.

Uncooked or cooked at a low temperature is best.

The Italians appreciate the value of cheese and have many delightful ways of preparing it. The following is one of the many:

Polenta.

Make a thick mush of cornmeal, season well with salt and pepper. Cook over hot water for an hour. Then for each pint of mush stir in one cupful of grated cheese—the ordinary kind. When the cheese has melted pour into greased pans. Let stand until cold. When wanted to serve, fry in a little butter after cutting it in slices.

Cheese and Eggs.

This is a dish similar to a rarebit, but easier of digestion. Cut fine or grate half a pound of cheese. Put in a sauce pan with a cupful of rich milk or thin cream, a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of salt and pepper. Stir over the fire until the cheese is melted, then add four well-beaten eggs. Serve with, or on, toasted crackers.

Cheese Roll.

This is a most appetizing way of serving cheese. Take a cake of cream cheese, one cupful of grated New York cheese, a dash of red pepper and half a cupful of finely chopped pimolas (stuffed olives), enough sweet cream to mold in a roll. Serve on a plate covered with a doiley.

Cheese Souffle.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour and when well mixed add half a cupful of scalded milk. Then add half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and a fourth of a cup of grated cheese. Remove from the fire, add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs. Cool the mixture and cut and fold in the beaten whites of three eggs that have been beaten stiff and dry. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake 20 minutes in a slow oven. Serve at once.

"Let each man keep his heart at ease,
No man died of that disease."
—Beaumont & Fletcher.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Sweet sandwiches, to be used instead of cakes with different punches, cocoa or tea, is a dainty that may be easily made in an emergency and is always appropriate.

They are much easier of digestion when simply made than the rich cakes so often served.

The variety is endless and the following are a few of the many:

Honey and Pecan Sandwiches.

Mix four tablespoonfuls of honey with two tablespoonfuls of chopped pecan meats. Split hot soda biscuits, butter and fill with the mixture. The biscuits should be made not thicker than half an inch.

Date and Orange Sandwich.

Here is a nice sandwich to serve with lemonade:

Blend one-half cupful of finely chopped dates with two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, spread on buttered whole-wheat bread.

Chopped marischina cherries mixed with cream cheese makes a delicious sandwich filling and one quite uncommon.

Cottage cheese and candied cherries is another combination which is very good.

Cinnamon Sandwiches.

Mix three tablespoonfuls of sugar with one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Butter Boston brown bread and spread with the mixture. These are good served with cocoa.

Cocoanut Sandwiches.

Take one cupful of freshly grated cocoanut, one-fourth of a cupful of walnut meats chopped, one teaspoonful of rose water, one tablespoonful of powdered sugar; mix well, add three tablespoonfuls of thick cream and spread on white bread.

Date and Nut Sandwiches.

Add one cupful of rich cream to a cupful of chopped dates; when well blended add half a cup of chopped walnuts. Use on whole-wheat bread.

Oriental Sandwiches.

Take one-half cupful each of preserved ginger and candied orange peel chopped fine; mix with three tablespoonfuls of thick sweet cream and use on white bread.

Household Tips.

The label on a glass jar will keep clean and in its place longer if pasted on the inside. Of course this applies only where dry materials are kept, such as rice, tapioca, etc.

To clean the water bottle shred a page of newspaper in bits, add to strong soapsuds and shake at intervals for a half hour. It will come out as bright and clean as ever. Try the same remedy on vases.

Charcoal or a lump of dry lime should be kept in the refrigerator. They absorb impurities and act as a disinfectant.

Daily Baths.

A daily bath is a necessity if the body is to be kept sound and sweet. If one's constitution will not permit of a daily plunge, the sponge bath will prove sufficient for all purposes of cleanliness and health.

Whether the bath shall be a cold one in the morning or a hot one at night is determined entirely by the physical strength of the bather.

A cold bath is a tonic to most, but if after the bath there is a sense of depression and a feeling of chilliness it is best to leave off taking them.

Nellie Maxwell.

For the Sleepless.

The head should be kept as low as possible to insure good circulation of the blood in the brain.

Do not lie in a crouched position, but stretch every limb to its full length. Sleep only on the right side. When you lie on your back you court dreams and nightmares. If you lie on your stomach you impede the free working of the lungs, and if you lie on the left side the digestion and the action of the heart are handicapped.

A brisk walk or a shower bath before retiring is often found to be an excellent preventive of insomnia.

The old suggestion of counting sheep jumping over a fence or the waves as they wash in on the shore are by no means foolish ways of wooing the god of sleep.

Sometimes a few bites of a dry cracker will give the stomach something to do and draw the blood away from the brain, so bringing on sleep.

A glass of warm milk is recommended to be taken in sips just before retiring.

THREATENING MOVE WILL FRIGHTEN TIMID GOATS

Most Extraordinary Characteristic Feature of These Animals Is That They Scare and Faint Upon Slightest Provocation.

Did you ever hear of fainting or nervous goats? There are said to be many of them in existence.

The most extraordinary characteristic of these animals is that they are very easily frightened. To simply say "boo" at them in a threatening manner will cause them to fall helplessly to the ground and remain there until the spell leaves them.

Angora Kids.

They scare and faint upon the slightest provocation. To merely jump over a fence or bar 16 to 18 inches from the ground is sufficient to cause them to become stiff and faint.

While under the influence of these spells the goats can be turned over and dragged about as if they were dead; they become so rigid that they can be lifted bodily without bending.

The animals seem to retain their faculties during these extraordinary spells, but their eyes have an expression of anxiety—one might say agony.

The reasons for such a peculiarly highly developed nervo-muscular system have not as yet been ascertained. The goats seem normal in every other particular, and have this advantage over the common goats: They can easily be kept within prescribed grounds.

STANDARD OF GOOD ROAD

Demand of Present Age Is for Highway That Is Smooth, Hard and Usable Every Day in Year.

(By HOWARD H. GROSS.)

The roads of the central west have been so proverbially bad for the last generation that the people have fixed a low standard for what they term a good road. All of the earth roads are sometimes good and when in prime condition, as they now and then are, nothing could be better, but when the rain comes and the frost heaves, they are about the worst possible. Those who have seen some of the better roads of New England, and the highways of Europe, will fix a much higher standard. The demand of the age is for a road that is smooth, hard, and usable every day in the year, that the road condition shall in no manner interfere with the use of it. This can only be brought about, first, by proper grading and a thorough drainage, which is the most important feature of road-building, and next, to cover it with a hard, smooth, wearing surface of long life.

Economy in road building does not necessarily mean low first cost. On the contrary, this low first cost is apt to make the road expensive to maintain. It is better to add 25 per cent. or 50 per cent. to the cost in the first instance and secure long life and low maintenance. In the central west gravel, crushed lime stone, and where available, blast furnace slag, are the materials from which the main part of the road should be constructed. Four or five inches of these materials will form a good foundation for the wearing surface. This should be a harder substance. What is known as Wisconsin granite is the best material available in the central west for wearing surface. Enormous quantities of it are found throughout the central portion of the Badger state. Three inches of this material spread upon a highway, thoroughly compacted and bonded with some asphaltic mixture, such as the asphaltic residuum of Texas petroleum, some products of coal tar, or, best of all, granulated asphaltic rock, will give a surface of excellent texture, dustless and with wearing qualities at least twice that of lime stone and two or three times that of ordinary gravel. Upon the roads that have the heavy traffic, it is better to use materials of this nature for the wearing surface. With roads of less traffic, gravel or lime stone will serve the purpose admirably. The people having in charge the road administration ought to realize that the most expensive way to build a road is by the annual tax levy, building the road little by little. The burden is heavy, the construction expensive and the results not satisfactory. Good stone or gravel roads are a permanent improvement; they last for generations with a moderate amount of attention, and the cost of them ought to be spread over a series of years, not less than twenty, and let those that come after us help bear the burden of road construction. If this plan were adopted, supplemented by state aid, whereby all taxable property of the state would be subject to a tax to pay one-half of the expense of building and maintaining the highways, and road supervision were made a county instead of a township matter, so that the roads could have skilled supervision in building and maintenance, and all road taxes paid in cash, there would be an immense saving to the taxpayer and better roads for every one to use.

Good and Inferior Cow.

Weighing and testing milk is the only sure way to determine the difference in value between the good and inferior cow. Weighing and testing daily is only a business proposition. It is the only safe way of determining what price to ask for a cow in selling her or of what to pay for her in buying. An intelligent farmer will sell a cow for thirty dollars that will make him a net profit of $40 or $50 a year. Neither will he keep a cow that doesn't pay him a profit if he knows it. Test and weigh the milk is the only way to know.

Caring for Potatoes.

It is a good plan sometimes, when it happens to be quite warm at digging time, to put the potatoes in piles on the ground and cover them with straw and dirt.

PROPER DEPTH FOR DRAINS

Roots of the ordinary cultivated plants will not grow in soils saturated with water. Air and a certain amount of moisture are necessary and the deeper the soil is drained the deeper the plants will feed. In light soils the tile may be placed four or five feet deep; in heavier soils three feet will give better results. A dense clay or hardpan may be impervious to water and a drain sunk any depth in it would be useless.

PROPER TIME TO CUT WHEAT

If Left to Stand Until Dead Ripe Much of It Will Be Shattered—Shocking Is Also Important.

(By W. D. NEALE.)

I have found it best to cut wheat when it is a golden yellow. If it is cut green it is very liable to spoil if a rainy season sets in on the shocks fall down. Especially is this true if the bundles are large. If it is left to stand until it is dead ripe much of it will be shattered at cutting time. The falling of the heads on the canvas and the kicking of the bundles to the ground by the machine and the handling of them in shocking will shatter much of the grain. This is a complete loss.

The shocking of the wheat is very important unless it is threshed in a very short time. The shocks must be well put together if they stand the wind and rain of summer months. It is a good idea to follow a system in building shocks. Every one ought to be about the same size and built after a good substantial plan. The following has proved itself to be a very successful way of putting bundles together to stand the storms of summer.

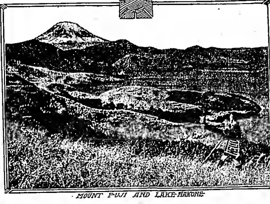
Place three pair of bundles in a row and set a bundle at each end. The bundles in the pair should be set out at the butts to give a good slant when set together. It is well to see that the heads of the two outside pair slant well to the heads of the center pair. The end bundles should also slant sufficiently. Now place three bundles to each side and put on a couple of caps.

The shock should be set with the end to the direction from whence most storms blow.

Alfalfa in Argentina.

It is said that in Argentine as many as 50,000 acres of alfalfa can be seen in single tracts, and that cattle, sheep and horses are pastured on it with scarcely any loss from bloat.

The Hakone District of Japan



MOUNT FUJI AND LAKE HAKONE

THERE are few places that can offer more delights to those who love a ramble o'er hill and dale than the Hakone district of Japan. Its lovely wooded lands and mountains, ringing with the sound of rills and rivers, cascades and waterfalls, make it a veritable paradise for a holiday. A railway journey of two hours from Yokohama brought us to Kozu, whence we journeyed by electric car to Yumoto, the terminus of the line. Here we made a slight detour from the main road, to see the cascade called Tama-dare-no-taki. Entering the pretty gardens of a tea-house, we were immediately taken in charge by little smiling musumes, who, with many bows and much giggling at our broken Japanese sentences, toddled along under the maples and led us to the foot of the falling waters. A hundred feathery streams gushed from the mountain-side, falling down the rocky slope into a limpid crystal pool below, where huge gold carp were lazily gliding about in shoals or loafing under the shade of the bridges and overhanging trees.

The road to Miyanashita, through the village of Tonosawa, disclosed fresh beauties at every turn as it wound its way up the mountainside. On the left was a dense forest of pine and maple trees, and tall bamboos with feathery leaves quivering in the breeze; while on the right were the steep slopes of the roaring Hayakawa, down which scores of streamlets danced their way to the rushing waters below. There are many charming excursions to be made from here, but the favorite one is that to Lake Hakone. The road leads along the left bank of the Hayakawa for some distance, and thence strikes off up a steep pathway into the Ashinoyu mountains through the village from which they derive their name. This place is famous for the curative properties of its sulphur springs. Ashinoyu is 2,800 feet above the sea, and is always cool, even in the hottest months of summer.

Just before the lake comes into view there are some famous carvings to be seen. The most interesting of these is an immense bas-relief, cut in the face of a wall of rock, of Jizo, the Buddhist god who watches over the souls of little children.

This image is said to be the work of Koho Daishi, a Buddhist saint who lived in the eighth century, and he is credited with having accomplished the feat in a single night.

The surroundings of Lake Hakone are very beautiful. It nestles among the hills, with the long street of low Kaia-thatched houses of Hakone village at one end, near which is the summer home of the emperor, while in the north Fujiyama's shapely crest towers above the surrounding mountains, crowned with a diadem of dazzling virgin snow. Walking through the village, I was attracted by the sign, "The Guide Book to Hakone," in a cottage window. I bought one, and found the little blue volume embellished with a golden outline of Fujiyama so quaintly interesting that I leave the rest of the description of this region to its author—a Japanese—and quote verbatim from the work. Speaking of the beauties of the place and its approaches, he says: "Owing to toilsome ascent many difficulties must be endured by travelers. The result of toleration is pleasure. There the imperial palace stands, Hakone Gongen, a Shinto temple, adorns itself with perpetual unchanging dress of forest; the Ashi lake spreads the face of glowing glass reflected upside down the shadow of Fuji, which is the highest, noblest and most glorious mountain in Japan, and the mineral hot springs warmly entertain the guests coming yearly to visit them during summer vacation. The purity of the air, the coolness of summer days, and the fine view of landscapes are agreeable to all visitors; for these facts, they do not know how is the summer heat and where is the epidemic prevailing." A little further on I find another expatiation on the quality of the air, as follows: "Draughts of pure air suspends no poisonous mixture, and always cleanses the defilement of our spirit. During the winter days the coldness robe up all pleasures from our hands, but at the summer months they are set free."

The beauty of the view has apparently given wide scope for the full power of the author's imagination and opened up an opportunity for a fine display of expression and similes, while a warmth of poetic zeal is awakened which scorns any trifling inconsistencies. Of it there is this to be said: "Whenever we visit the place, the first pleasure to be longed is the view of Fuji mountain and its summit is covered with permanent undissolving snow, and its regular configuration hanging down the sky like an opened white fan, may be looked long at equal shape from several regions surrounding it. Every one who saw it has ever nothing but applause. It casts the shadow in a contrary direction on still glassy face of lake as I have just described. Buildings of Imperial Solitary palace, scenery of Gongen, are all spontaneous pictures. Wind proper in quantity suited to our boat to slip by sail, and moonlight shining on the sky shivers quartzy luster over ripples of the lake. The cuckoo, singing near by our hotel, plays on a harp, and the gulls flying about to and fro seek their food in the waves. All these panorama may be gathered only at this place." In such a burst of unrestrained enthusiasm it is scarcely to be supposed that such unimportant discrepancies as the gulls flying o'er the waves of a still glassy lake or a cuckoo playing on a harp should be heeded. Not far away is the village Oidaira or "Old Man's Plain."

One of the attractions of the lake is boating in summer time, and I read: "The preparation of boats and Japanese small ships is made for the diversion of residents. If the boat excursion on the lake be wished, an order for fittings will be given to boatmen; if the boat race be desired, the waveless part of the lake between Toga-shima and Hatabikiyama will be chosen for; and if we want to go to Ubego, the ferry boat will carry us forth at the morning and back at the evening after bathing all day."

Hakone was the scene of many fierce conflicts in feudal times. The latest battle is described thus: "At May, of the first year of Meiji, about thirty years ago from the present, two feudal and military chiefs engaged in battle on Hakone mountain. One of them was Okubo Kagano-kami, the lord of Odawara-Han, and the other was Shonosuke Hayashi, lord of Boshu, and the former belonged to the imperial army and the latter was on the Shogun's side. One time Hayashi staid at Numadzu and held a good many soldiers. Leading them, he passed Mishima and came to Hakone. He requested to the guardsmen of Barrier gate to let his army pass through it. At that time the guardianship of the gate was in the hand of Odawara Han, and the request was not permitted by its master Kagano Kami. He durst to pass through it by military power. Then the battle was instigated and instantly guns were fired. All of the dwellers of Hakone were so frightened that they fled out of their dwellings and hid in mountains and valleys. After short struggle the guardsmen could not conquer him, and retired to Odawara to shut themselves up in the castle for its defense. Taking advantage of victory, he advanced his army to destroy them. He missed unexpectedly his cogitation. He was defeated very badly and retired to Yumoto. Secondly, he ran back to Hakone, defeated by enemy. By violent pursuit of imperial army he was finally obliged to run to Ajiro, about four miles south from Atami, and thence to escape to his own previous domain. Thenceforth, the construction of perfect imperial government by the revelation of Meiji, placed the nation out of impetuous struggles of feudalism. And the ruin was remained to endless fancy."

This is the style of the little volume from beginning to end, and it ranks among the most interesting of my Japanese curiosities.

"My comic opera will contain no drunken king, no merry villagers, no bandits."

"What will it contain?"

BROOD MARES FOR PROFIT.

It is now costing the farmer about $90.00 a year to support a horse in Minnesota, according the statistics carefully kept at the Experiment Station. The necessity is apparent for the farmer to get into methods of handling his horses so they will return a profit, in addition to the work they do, "to pay for their board." It has been suggested by the secretary of the Minnesota Stallion Registration Board that the present average farm horses be at once converted into high class brood mares capable of raising a colt annually. The geldings should be sold to people whose business will keep them busy throughout the year and pay their owners a profit. Colts of high class brood mares will sell at the end of the second or third year for a sum sufficient to give the farmer a fair profit on his mare, while her labor will have paid him part of the cost of keeping through the idle season. The farmer needs a horse that will pay him a profit every day in the year.

NEW SCOTLAND YARD

London's Detective Headquarters in Fact and Fiction.

Writers of Romances Have Attributed Wonderful Feats to Marvelous Sleuths—Like an American City Hall.

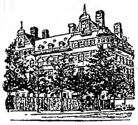
London.—Scotland Yard, the most famous detective center in the world, owes its fame to fiction. Plots far more involved than the mysterious Doctor Crippen case have been worked out and the solutions credited to this institution by a host of story writers led by Charles Dickens. Writers of romance, good and bad, have had a hand in creating impressions of secret passages, elaborate disguises and superhuman powers of deduction.

Stealthy sleuths glide forth into the highways and byways to recover necklaces of incredible value, to find abducted maidens and solve the dark and bloody puzzles of impassible murder mysteries.

This is the Scotland Yard of fiction. The Scotland Yard of fact is a handsome red brick building, elaborately trimmed, and very much like an American city hall in appearance. Nowhere within its door is there a hint of sensationalism. The building was designed to afford a headquarters for the vast police business of London, and it is business, from its foundation stones to its weather vanes. Technically, the present Scotland Yard of present police fame is new Scotland Yard. Old Scotland Yard opens off Whitehall, midway between the present police headquarters and Trafalgar square. In long bygone days the detectives had three little rooms in the old yard, littered beyond belief with papers—dirty and unbusiness like.

It was these three rooms that Dickens knew. Detectives and police were under separate administrations then, and it was only when the police made a failure of a case that the detectives were called. Anyone who was willing to pay the cost anywhere in the United Kingdom had a right to call a detective from Scotland Yard. At present, a Scotland Yard detective is not allowed to leave London except on rare occasions.

It was from the old force that Dickens drew material for the detective sketches that all Dickens readers know. Inspector Welld, "a man of portly presence, with a large, moist, knowing eye, a husky voice and a habit of emphasizing his conversation by the aid of a corpulent forefinger, which was in constant juxtaposition with his eyes and nose," was, in reality, Inspector Field, whose memory still is green. Field also was the original of Inspector Bucket in "Bleak House." Inspector Stalker, one of Dickens' characters, was Inspector Walker in real life. A few years ago there were many men on the force who remembered Thornton, the man whom Dickens changed to Dornton, the sergeant, "famous for pursuing the inductive process, and, from small beginnings, working from clue to clue until he bags his man."



The New Scotland Yard in London.

However, the Scotland Yard is said to be overwhelmed as the hub of detective skill. It would not be fair for an American correspondent to intimate that the constables in London are up to the American standard of efficiency and intelligence in police duty. Much less is expected of them, as a rule, and they have a much less troublesome class of people with which to deal. The London public, even in the worst quarters of the city, has a greater fear of the police than has the New York or Chicago public. From the constables are recruited the men who compose the aristocracy of the detective force. These are the men who eventually handle the "big cases."

HIGH HEELS NEARLY KILL

Woman Falls Down Steps and Onto a Broken Tumbler, Which Severed an Artery.

Richmond, Va.—One of Dame Fashion's fancies, an unusually high-heeled slipper, came near causing the death of Mrs. John Devine, wife of a prominent merchant, and herself well known in society circles, when they caused her to fall down the front steps of her home while carrying a glass of water.

The glass smashed on the stones under her right arm, cutting a deep gash and severing an artery. The blood flowed from the cut for over two hours, and physicians had much difficulty in stopping it.

Added to her weak condition from loss of blood, a fractured wrist was sustained. She will recover.

Forget all the evil people of history, and remember the good ones who have made the world better.

Trousers Stolen; Phones Wife.

Omaha, Neb.—Leon J. Millard had to keep to his berth on his arrival in Omaha because his trousers were stolen from his Pullman berth while he slept. Mr. Millard was en route to this city on a train from Kansas City. The thief reached through the window and grabbed his trousers while the train stood in the yards at St. Joseph. He also got $200 in money and checks and a monogram watch and chain. Mrs. Millard was notified of her husband's plight and sped to the station with wearing apparel.

Joseph B. Sande, who has resided in southern Red Lake county for the past seven years and has occupied the Sutter place for the past two years, will, after selling his personal property at auction, Oct. 24, return to his old home in the southern part of the state.

The county commissioners last Friday awarded the contract for building the sidewalk and concrete retoining wall for the court house grounds to Hussey and Goedker of Crookston who have been doing much cement sidewalk construction work the past two months. They have already started on the work and in the course of a few days the improvement on the grounds will be made.

Injured in Auto Race.

Geo. Gonyea, a cousin of Mrs. S. A. Swanson of this city, was injured in an auto race at the Polk county fair at Crookston. His injuries are not serious though he had narrow escape.

The Parry car driven by Cummings, of the Parry factory, Indianapolis, Indiana, and which was carrying Geo. Gonyea, who is a machinist residing at Crookston, lost a wheel while going sixty miles an hour, the car tearing over the race track embankment, smashing another wheel and landing right side up, but facing exactly opposite. Both men were knocked out of commission and Gonyea is in the hospital with a broken nose and badly bruised and scratched up, but it is not believed his condition is serious. Driver Cummings suffered a bad gash in his leg. The crowd was panic stricken and several ladies fainted when the cloud of dust told of the accident, and it was a miracle that the two men were not instantly killed.

"RAILROAD ERRAND BOY"

Governor Eberhart So Characterized by Writer in La Follette's Weekly.

WORKED FOR THE INTERESTS

Ray Stanard Baker Takes a Fall Out of Him for Trying to Pack the Conservation Congress.

Governor Eberhart is now calling himself a "Progressive." He has forgotten his interview in Washington last spring in which he assured President Taft that the people of Minnesota were beginning to like the Payne-Aldrich tariff; he has forgotten that during that same visit he took particular pains to get Secretary Ballinger to address his Conservation meeting of March last. He has forgotten that he then gave assurances that there was "no insurgency in Minnesota." He has so completely forgotten that he went down to Beverly to invite Mr. Taft to speak at his September Conservation meeting, that he couldn't remember his name in his keynote speech. He has forgotten that during the primary election he did everything possible in the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Eighth districts to nominate "Standpat" candidates to congress and to embarrass and defeat Progressives. In fact he is playing that old, old game of "running with the hare and hunting with the hounds."

To show how Mr. Eberhart's tactics are regarded outside the state, we reproduce the article from Senator La Follette's publication, together with the information that it received editorial endorsement from the senator:

"The Conservation Congress to be held in St. Paul beginning Sept. 5 has suddenly become charged with large meanings. Originally designed to consider the somewhat limited problem of the public land policies of the nation, it now promises to be the forum for a titanic struggle between the supporters of the people's rights on the one hand—the Progressives or Insurgents—and the defenders of special interests—the Standpatters—on the other hand. With most of the notable political leaders of the country in attendance, the Congress cannot fail to have a profound political significance.

"No sooner had the Congress been announced for St. Paul than the Interests began to move upon it—either to destroy it utterly or to dominate it. As customary in such cases, a local board of management was appointed to make the necessary local arrangements, including the choice of an auditorium and the raising of money for the immediate expenses. In no case formerly has a local board ever had anything to do with the arrangement of the program, the appointment of speakers or officers, or with matters of publicity. But no sooner had this particular board been appointed, with Governor Eberhart of Minnesota at its head, than it began to move secretly but with determination toward the control of the Congress itself.

"In order to understand the reasons for this particular action, certain underlying causes must be made plain. For years the Republican party machine in Minnesota has been the creature of the Great Northern Railroad Company. For a time its reign was threatened and it has had to accept a man like Senator Clapp in the United States Senate, but its hand upon the state government in Minnesota ever since Governor Johnson's death has been very heavy indeed. The real governor of Minnesota is not Eberhart, but Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad. Eberhart, now nominated to succeed himself as the Standpat candidate for governor, is really nothing more than a railroad errand boy.

Interests Against Conservation.

"Now, the railroad interests of the Northwest, and Louis W. Hill in particular, are against conservation, against people's government, against the Progressive group of leaders. So Eberhart's committee began to interfere at once with the plans of the Conservation Congress. They objected to certain speakers, notably Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, and they interfered so actively that Mr. Pinchot and his associates threatened to remove the Congress to Kansas City. This the Interests did not want; they wanted it in St. Paul where they had greater powers of control than they would have in Missouri. So they quieted down, but they did not for a moment stop their underground work.

"As soon as the presence of the Congress in St. Paul was assured, they began again to work for a change of the program. It was found that the governor was in constant communication with President Hill, and that every effort was being made to change the Congress from a conservation meeting into an anti-conservation meeting. By pressure exerted in high places they succeeded in getting the names of Senators Cummins and Clapp removed from the program, and of adding the names of a number of Western governors known to be hostile to the national conservation of our resources. They have refused to give reduced railroad fares to delegates, knowing that this will tend to cut down the attendance of delegates from the East.

"Exercising, also, his great influence upon politics in the Far West, where his railroad runs, President Hill has been most active in his efforts. A conference of Western governors called together at Salt Lake City will plan a definite campaign and appear in the Congress with a full quota of delegates. The policy which will probably be adopted will be the demand, not national, but state control of public lands—which would utterly defeat the conservation movement. The old selfish theory of states' rights is to be injected into this question as it was injected into the political discussions previous to the Civil war for the defense of the privileged class of slaveholders.

"As it now stands the program of the congress is divided into two parts. The anti-conservationists will be given the first chance: the Western governors will speak. After that the national conservationists will appear: Roosevelt, Pinchot, Garfield, several insurgent senators and many others." —La Follette's, Sept. 3.

A TRULY EBERHART PLATFORM.

In his keynote speech at Mankato Governor Eberhart said:

"I stand squarely upon the platform adopted by the Republican party of this state. This platform is clear, definite, comprehensive and distinctly progressive."

It is just the kind of a platform upon which one would naturally expect Governor Eberhart to "stand squarely." It is shifty, evasive, deceptive and misleading. Of course he stands squarely upon it. Just as corroborative evidence that we have rightly described Mr. Eberhart's platform, we append hereto an extract from the St. Paul Dispatch of June 22, the day after the platform was adopted. It says:

"It is a platform notable for what it skipped or straddled. It urges no advanced theories; it expresses no deep conviction. It occupies a serene and indifferent middle ground and is content. In these times of freedom of opinion and courage of conviction it is singularly lacking in both. To call it a fair statement of Republican sentiment in Minnesota on the most urgent question of the day—the emancipation of the party from influences that threaten its ruin—is simply absurd. The people of this state have convictions on this matter to which it was the business of the convention to give expression."

You have read Governor Eberhart's "keynote" speech, delivered at Mankato the other day, and note that he says that he is "making report of his stewardship to the people." We hope that you read that speech carefully; that you analyzed it, and noted particularly what he claims as his own performances as chief executive during the time he has occupied the executive chair made vacant by the death of Governor Johnson. He calls attention to the convention which nominated him, and says of it: "It was absolutely free from domination by any clique, faction, interest or corporation, free to express the will of the people in the selection of candidates and the adoption of a platform."

In this connection we would call your attention to the fact that this free convention voted down the following resolution:

"The Republican party was organized to give the nation a great principle. It has ever since been a party of freedom and the 'square deal.' The Republican party recognizes that there is a strong and growing sentiment in Minnesota favoring a restriction of the influence of the liquor interests in the legislation of this state. This sentiment has been crystallized in a statewide movement in favor of county option. We, therefore, pledge this party to a full, fair and free consideration of any measures whose purpose is the adoption of county option legislation, and to keep the control of the affairs of this great commonwealth where they of right belong—in the hands of the whole people."

Just read that resolution over again carefully and find out just how little it asks of this free and untrammeled convention, this convention undictated to by any adverse interests. It asks only for "full, fair and free consideration of any measures whose purpose is the adoption of county option legislation." It doesn't ask that the Republican party pass such legislation; it does not ask that the party organization pledge itself as favorable to such measures; it only asks full free and unbiased consideration. This was refused. What do you think of a great party in Minnesota which refuses "full, fair and free consideration" to any measure which is of interest to the people of the state? Do you believe the convention which refuses this reasonable request is free and uncontrolled? It sounds like a brewers' convention.

The balance of the governor's speech is largely made up of reports from the various elective state departments. It does not show one single thing to the credit of the executive department during his incumbency. This being the case we might supply a few items:

In February last he dug up and paid what is known as "the Seabury graft." You probably remember this incident. A bill that had twice been refused payment by Governor Johnson because it was illegal, was paid by Governor Eberhart, even though such payment was not sanctioned by the attorney general.

Then there was the appointment of that probate judge down in Redwood county. The incumbent died without warning one night, and before the news of his death became public property his successor was appointed by Governor Eberhart. There was violent protest from the people of the county, but it availed them nothing until they had an opportunity to express themselves at the primary election, when Governor Eberhart's judge was snowed under about four to one.

Nor should we forget the Waterman incident. Banker Waterman was joyriding in St. Paul, when a common person driving a wagon got in his way. The festive banker rode over him, spilling him and his wife out in the street, wrecking the wagon and causing other damage. An unfeeling police judge sentenced Waterman to thirty days in the workhouse, without the option of a fine. An appeal was made to the governor, who immediately convened an extra session of the state pardon board to act on the banker's case. However he did not dare to stay and act for himself in this case, and left his proxy with a clerk, advising him to vote him with a majority of the board, whichever side the majority went. The other members refused to rise to the bait, and the banker served the thirty days.

Then there was the "settling" of the switchmen's strike last [illegible] when Mr. Eberhart appointed Great Northern attorney, John Mason of Fergus Falls, as a member [illegible] the board of arbitration to "do" the switchmen.

This, we believe, is a fair representation of the governor's record [illegible] the executive office. The balance [illegible] his time has been devoted, quoting the Minneapolis Tribune, to "talking" platitudes to Sunday school conventions and ogling women's clubs."

What do you think of that as a record of performance covering more than a year's time?

MANKATO, FAVORED CITY.

How notable events do crowd each other, to be sure.

Following hard on the heels of Governor Eberhart's "keynote" speech in that fair city, Mankato reports the birth of a two-headed pig.

If that pig follows the footsteps of some illustrious representatives of the porker family and becomes an "educated pig," he will need both his heads and then some to grasp the full significance of that Republican platform which Mr. Eberhart says he stands on.—Minneapolis Daily News.

These death-bed repentances are all right, if the patient dies, but suppose he recovers? As a case in point, there is Julius Schmahl, candidate for secretary of state on the Republican ticket. We all remember how Julius broke into print just after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill and informed the people of the Northwest that Minnesota had at least one congressman who would not be apologizing for his vote two years hence, and he regretted that there was only one. Again, when Mr. Taft came to Winona and "boosted" for Tawney, Mr Schmahl swelled up and said, "I told you so." Then Mr. Roosevelt came to Minnesota and took a shot at the man who, according to Julius, had no apology to make on his tariff vote, and Julius said: "Oh, Roosevelt is hot because Tawney wouldn't let him squander all the money in the treasury on battleships." Then came the New York convention, at which the "Old Guard" was scattered like chaff, Julius made up his mind he was in wrong, and he shouted: "Hurrah for Teddy; didn't we put it to them," and ever since he has been a vociferous Progressive, as has "Me-Too-Eberhart." But the people have memories.

Mr. Ballinger is truly a consistent "conservationist." He doesn't overlook anything, even to the beer business. On Thursday last he revoked the order of the Indian department, by which all saloons in the Indian country were to be closed on Oct. 15, and the brewers are naturally jubilant over their victory. Governor Eberhart and Secretary Ballinger are again together in perfect harmony in the great conservation chorus. Verily, he who puts two saloons where one flourished is a benefactor of the brewers.

Governor Eberhart says that the Democrats have "painted the pump to purify the well." But, my dear governor, you purified the waters of the Democratic well, so far as the liquor crowd is concerned. You have lifted the whole liquor bunch bodily out of the Democratic party, and enrolled them under your banner. It is "business" with them, governor, and we don't know that we blame them for the switch, but what did you promise them—under the rose?

The Minneapolis bartenders have organized in behalf of Governor Eberhart. Their organization is known as the Aegis Circle. What is the matter with calling it by its right name? Is the governor ashamed of his new-found support, or do the promoters fear to indicate the character of their occupation in their official title? The governor seems to be "taking the schools out of politics," but putting the bartenders in.

Of course it is possible that all those Democratic brewers and saloon keepers are supporting Governor Eberhart because they believe he will enforce all laws—including liquor laws—more rigorously than would Gray. Do you believe it?

The man who can be used to get through petty grafting can be depended on for big steals. You remember, perhaps, how Governor Eberhart was used in the Seabury graft?

Lives Saved by Tobacco.

John Wesley was saved from disaster by tobacco, as is shown by this extract from his journal:

"Came to Turner's hall (Deptford), which holds (by computation) 2,000 persons. The press both within and without was very great. In the beginning of the expounding, there being a large vault beneath, the main beam which supported the floor broke. The floor immediately sank, which occasioned much noise and confusion among the people. But two or three days before a man had filled the vault with hogsheads of tobacco, so that the floor, after sinking a foot or two, rested upon them, and I went on without interruption.'

INTROSPECTION.

One can accomplish but comparatively little when all is said, for, make no mistake about it, however much we may pose and strut in the outside world, in the solitude of our own studies there are few of us but know how the faults and blemishes of our craft stand boldly out and stare us in the face to remind us that we are small enough and halting enough to be always learning, never quite gloriously achieving.

ATCHISON'S ORDER OF SPINS

Unmarried, and Contented Withal They Have Mapped Out for Themselves a Pious City.

There was called a meeting of the Ancient Order of Spins last evening and papers were read on every subject from removing grease from carpets to the sad memories that attach to a bunch of old letters. The Spins were having a hilarious time when a staid Spin got up to make a few remarks. She said that, while they are happy now, there was a sad time coming. "Think of the day," she said, "when, having no husbands or children, you will be all alone." There was a sniff and then a snort as Spin after Spin recalled wives and mothers who were alone from daylight till dark, except when some member of the family wants waiting on. The sniffling and snorting increased in volume as Spin after Spin told of her freedom from worry, her independence in financial matters and the joy of doing as she pleased. "But we must not take offense at what our sister has said," one Spin remarked. "Let us show our good intentions by calling on every lonesome wife and mother we know." This was six weeks ago, and although the Spins have devoted every afternoon and evening since to this missionary work, they haven't made half the rounds yet.—Atchison Globe.

His First Lesson In Economy.

"When I was a very small boy and a dime looked pretty big to me, I met John H. Farley—who had always been my good friend—on the street one June day," says Frank Harris.

"'Frank,' he said, 'the Fourth of July is coming soon. You'll want some change then. Let me be your banker until then and you'll have more money for firecrackers, torpedoes, lemonade and peanuts.'

I emptied my pockets into his hand and every day thereafter until the Fourth I turned over to him my small earnings. When the day of days came around I had a fund that enabled me to celebrate in proper style, while many of my playmates were flat broke. It was my first lesson in thrift, and it was a good one. Hundreds of Cleveland people would be glad today to testify to the fact that when John H. Farley was a friend of a man or a boy he was a friend indeed."—Cleveland Leader.

Why He Wouldn't Hurry.

They were riding to church and were late. Several of the party were worried and one remarked: "The audience will be waiting." "Well," observed the old pastor (who was to preach that forenoon), "don't let's fret over it if we are a little late. It reminds me of the man who was being taken to execution. His guards were greatly exercised over the fact that they could not possibly get there on time. 'Never mind,' said the poor fellow, philosophically. 'Don't fuss over it. The people can wait. There'll be nothing doing till I get there.'"—Christian Herald.

A Question.

Vera (eight years old)—What does transatlantic mean, mother?

Mother—Across the Atlantic, of course, but you mustn't bother me.

Vera—Does "trans" always mean across?

Mother—I suppose it does. Now, if you don't stop bothering me with your questions I shall send you right to bed.

Vera (after a few minutes' silence)—Then does transparent mean a cross parent?—Ideas.

A Contradiction.

"Queer, wasn't it, that water in the place you went to made the folks there sick?"

"Why was it queer?"

"Because it was well water."

I hold it indeed to be a sure sign of a mind not poised as it ought to be if it be insensible to the pleasures of home.—Lex.

A FOOD DRINK.
Which Brings Daily Enjoyment.

A lady doctor writes:

"Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of my enjoyment daily obtained from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not a poison like coffee.

"I began to use Postum eight years ago, not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day.

"On the advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as directed on the package. As I had always used 'cream and no sugar,' I mixed my Postum so. It looked good, was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend always wanted her coffee to look—'like a new saddle.'

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many 'substitutes' for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied, with my Postum in taste and effect, and am yet, being a constant user of it all these years.

"I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will like it in place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, can sleep sound and am not nervous." "There's a Reason."

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants deserted. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found. A ladder out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned. During the excitement a man stole into the house. A search failed to reveal him. Miss Innes shot an intruder. A man limping was seen on the road. Halsey mysteriously disappeared. Louise sensing danger before his absence was noted.

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

"He's as dear to me as he is to you," she said sadly. "I tried to warn him."

"Nonsense!" I said as briskly as I could. "We are making a lot of trouble out of something perhaps very small. Halsey was probably late—he is always late. Any moment we may hear the car coming up the road."

But it did not come. After a half-hour of suspense, Louise went out quietly, and did not come back. I hardly knew she was gone until I heard the station hack moving off. At 11 o'clock the telephone rang. It was Mr. Jamieson.

"I have found the Dragon Fly, Miss Innes," he said. "It has collided with a freight car on the siding above the station. No, Mr. Innes was not there, but we shall probably find him. Send Warner for the car."

But they did not find him. At four o'clock the next morning we were still waiting for news, while Alex watched the house and Sam the grounds. At daylight I dropped into exhausted sleep. Halsey had not come back, and there was no word from the detective.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Halsey's Disappearance.

Mr. Jamieson came back about eight o'clock the next morning; he was covered with mud, and his hat was gone. Altogether we were a sad-looking trio that gathered around a breakfast that no one could eat. Over a cup of black coffee the detective told us what he had learned of Halsey's movements the night before. Up to a certain point the car had made it easy enough to follow him. And I gathered that Mr. Burns, the other detective, had followed a similar car for miles at dawn, only to find it was a touring car on an endurance run.

"He left here about ten minutes after eight," Mr. Jamieson said. "He went alone; at 8:20 he stopped at Dr. Walker's. I went to the doctor's about midnight, but he had been called out on a case, and had not come back at four o'clock. From the doctor's it seems Mr. Innes walked across the lawn to the cottage Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter have taken. Mrs. Armstrong had retired, and he said perhaps a dozen words to Miss Louise. She will not say what they were, but the girl evidently suspects what has occurred. That is, she suspects foul play, but she doesn't know of what nature. Then, apparently, he started directly for the station. Along somewhere in the dark stretch between Carol street and the depot he evidently swerved suddenly—perhaps some one in the road—and went full into the side of a freight. We found it there last night."

"He might have been thrown under the train by the force of the shock," I said tremulously.

Gertrude shuddered.

"We examined every inch of track. There was—no sign."

"But surely—he can't be—gone!" I cried. "Aren't there traces in the mud—anything?"

"There is no mud—only dust. There has been no rain. And the footpath there is of cinders. Miss Innes, I am inclined to think that he has met with bad treatment, in the light of what has gone before. I do not think he has been murdered." I shrank from the word. "Burns is back in the country on a clew we got from the night clerk at the drug store. There will be two more men here by noon, and the city office is on the lookout."

"The creek?" Gertrude asked.

"The creek is shallow now. If it were swollen with rain it would be different. There is hardly any water in it. Now, Miss Innes," he said, turning to me, "I must ask you some questions. Had Mr. Halsey any possible reason for going away like this, without warning?"

"None whatever."

"He went away once before," he persisted. "And you were as sure then."

"He did not leave the Dragon Fly jammed into the side of a freight car before."

"No, but he left it for repairs in a blacksmith shop, a long distance from here. Do you know if he had any enemies? Any one who might wish him out of the way?"

"Not that I know of, unless—no, I cannot think of any."

"Was he in the habit of carrying money?"

"He never carried it far. No, he never had more than enough for current expenses."

Mr. Jamieson got up then and began to pace the room. It was an unwonted concession to the occasion.

"Miss Armstrong Is Very Ill and Unable to See Any One."

"Then I think we get at it by elimination. The chances are against flight. If he was hurt, we find no trace of him. It looks almost like an abduction. This young Dr. Walker—have you any idea why Mr. Innes should have gone there last night?"

"I cannot understand it," Gertrude said thoughtfully. "I don't think he knew Dr. Walker at all, and—their relations could hardly have been cordial, under the circumstances."

Jamieson pricked up his ears, and little by little he drew from us the unfortunate story of Halsey's love affair, and the fact that Louise was going to marry Dr. Walker.

Mr. Jamieson listened attentively.

"There are some interesting developments here," he said thoughtfully. "The woman who claims to be the mother of Lucien Wallace has not come back. Your nephew has apparently been spirited away. There is an organized attempt being made to enter this house; in fact, it has been entered. Witness the incident with the cook yesterday. And I have a new piece of information." He looked carefully away from Gertrude. "Mr. John Bailey is not at his Knickerbocker apartments, and I don't know where he is. It's a hash, that's what it is. It's a Chinese puzzle. They won't fit together, unless—unless Mr. Bailey and your nephew have again—"

And once again Gertrude surprised me. "They are not together," she said hotly. "I—know where Mr. Bailey is, and my brother is not with him."

"Miss Gertrude," he said, "if you and Miss Louise would only tell me everything you know and surmise about this business, I should be able to do a great many things. I believe I could find your brother, and I might be able to—well, to do some other things." But Gertrude's glance did not falter.

"Nothing that I know could help you to find Halsey," she said stubbornly. "I know absolutely as little of his disappearance as you do, and I can only say this: I do not trust Dr. Walker. I think he hated Halsey, and he would get rid of him if he could."

"Perhaps you are right. In fact, I had some such theory myself. But Dr. Walker went out late last night to a serious case in Summitville, and is still there. Burns traced him there. We have made guarded inquiry at the Greenwood club and through the village. There is absolutely nothing to go on but this: On the embankment above the railroad, at the point where we found the machine, is a small house. An old woman and a daughter, who is very lame, live there. They say that they distinctly heard the shock when the Dragon Fly hit the car, and they went to the bottom of their garden and looked over. The automobile was there; they could see the lights, and they thought some one had been injured. It was very dark, but they could make out two figures, standing together. The women were curious, and, leaving the fence, they went back and by a roundabout path down to the road. When they got there the car was still standing, the headlight broken and the bonnet crushed, but there was no one to be seen."

The detective went away immediately, and to Gertrude and me was left the woman's part, to watch and wait. By luncheon nothing had been found, and I was frantic. I went upstairs to Halsey's room finally, from sheer inability to sit across from Gertrude any longer and meet her terror-filled eyes.

Liddy was in my dressing room, suspiciously red-eyed and trying to put a right sleeve in a left arm-hole of a new waist for me. I was too much shaken to scold.

"What name did that woman in the kitchen give?" she demanded, viciously ripping out the offending sleeve.

"Bliss. Mattie Bliss," I replied.

"Bliss. M. B. Well, that's not what she has on her suitcase. It is marked N. F. C."

The new cook and her initials troubled me not all. I put on my bonnet and sent for what the Casanova liveryman called a "stylish turnout." Having once made up my mind to a course of action, I am not one to turn back. Warner drove me; he was plainly disgusted, and he steered the livery horse as he would the Dragon Fly, feeling uneasily with his left foot for the clutch, and working his right elbow at an imaginary horn every time a dog got in the way.

Warner had something on his mind, and after we had turned into the road he voiced it.

"Miss Innes," he said. "I overheard a part of a conversation yesterday that I didn't understand. It wasn't my business to understand it, for that matter. But I've been thinking all day that I'd better tell you. Yesterday afternoon, while you and Miss Gertrude were out driving, I had got the car in some sort of shape again after the fire, and I went to the library to call Mr. Innes to see it. I went into the living room, where Miss Liddy said he was, and half-way across the library I heard him talking to some one. He seemed to be walking up and down, and he was in a rage, I can tell you."

"What did he say?"

"The first thing I heard was—excuse me, Miss Innes, but it's what he said, 'The damned rascal,' he said, 'I'll see him in'—well, in hell was what he said, 'in hell first.' Then somebody else spoke up; it was a woman. She said: 'I warned them, but they thought I would be afraid.'"

"A woman! Did you wait to see who it was?"

"I wasn't spying, Miss Innes," Warner said with dignity. "But the next thing caught my attention. She said: 'I knew there was something wrong from the start. A man isn't well one day, and dead the next, without some reason.' I thought she was speaking of Thomas."

"And you don't know who it was!" I exclaimed. "Warner, you had the key to this whole occurrence in your hands and did not see it!"

However, there was nothing to be done. I resolved to make inquiry when I got home, and in the meantime, my present errand absorbed me. This was nothing less than to see Louise Armstrong, and to attempt to drag from her what she knew, or suspected of Halsey's disappearance. But here, as in every direction I turned, I was baffled.

A neat maid answered the bell, but she stood squarely in the doorway, and it was impossible to preserve one's dignity and pass her.

"Miss Armstrong is very ill and unable to see any one," she said. I did not believe her.

"And Mrs. Armstrong—is she also ill?"

"She is with Miss Louise and cannot be disturbed."

"Tell her it is Miss Innes, and that it is a matter of the greatest importance."

"It would be of no use, Miss Innes, my orders are positive."

At that moment a heavy step sounded on the stairs. Past the maid's white-strapped shoulder I could see a familiar thatch of gray hair, and in a moment I was face to face with Dr. Stewart. He was very grave, and his customary geniality was tinged with restraint.

"You are the very woman I want to see," he said promptly. "Send away your trap, and let me drive you home. What is this about your nephew?"

"He has disappeared, doctor. Not only that, but there is every evidence that he has been either abducted or—" I could not finish. The doctor helped me into his capacious buggy in silence. Until we had got a little distance he did not speak; then he turned and looked at me.

"Now tell me all about it," he said. He heard me through without speaking.

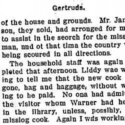
"And you think Louise knows something?" he said when I had finished. "I don't—in fact, I am sure of it. The best evidence of it is this: She asked me if he had been heard from, or if anything had been learned. She won't allow Walker in the room, and she made me promise to see you and tell you this: don't give up the search for him. Find him, and find him soon. He is living."

"Well," I said, "if she knows that, she knows more. She is a very cruel and ungrateful girl."

"She is a very sick girl," he said gravely. "Neither you nor I can judge her until we know everything. Both she and her mother are ghosts of their former selves. Under all this, these two sudden deaths, this bank robbery, the invasions at Sunnyside and Halsey's disappearance, there is some mystery that, mark my words, will come out some day. And when it does, we shall find Louise Armstrong a victim."

Then we drove slowly home. I had the doctor put me down at the gate, and I walked to the house—past the lodge where we had found Louise, and, later, poor Thomas; on the drive where I had seen a man watching the lodge and where, later, Rosie had been frightened; past the east entrance, where so short a time before the most obstinate effort had been made to enter the house, and where, that night two weeks ago, Liddy and I had seen the strange woman. Not far from the west wing lay the blackened ruins of the stables. I felt like a ruin myself as I paused on the broad veranda before I entered the house.

Two private detectives had arrived in my absence, and it was a relief to turn over to them the responsibility of the house and grounds. Mr. Jamieson, they said, had arranged for more to assist in the search for the missing man, and at that time the country was being scoured in all directions.



Gertrude.

The household staff was again depleted that afternoon. Liddy was waiting to tell me that the new cook had gone, bag and baggage, without waiting to be paid. No one had admitted the visitor whom Warner had heard in the library, unless, possibly, the missing cook. Again I was working in a circle.

Well Matched by Milliner

King Midas Found for Once That All Things Did Not Always Come His Way.

With a nonchalant air King Midas allowed himself to be led upon a shopping expedition for a new hat for the queen.

What cared he?

He knew perfectly well that all he had to do was to touch anything handy and convert it into gold wherewith to settle the bill.

However, they arrived at the store, and the queen tried on one hat after another until at last she selected a perfectly lovely creation resembling an inverted waste basket surmounted by the ruins of a flower garden.

"That will suit exactly," said King Midas. "And now, my young friend," he said to the saleslady. "I shall show you how to pay millinery bills. Don't bother to tell me the price of the hat."

With a lordly air he touched the hat and instantly it became solid gold.

"Take your change out of that," ordered King Midas.

The saleslady took the hat away, had it assayed and weighed and the value of the gold computed. Then she returned.

"Thirty-eight dollars and 25 cents more, sir," she demanded.—Chicago Evening Post.

Dumas' Mushrooms.

A Paris contemporary, commenting on the little knowledge of French possessed by some Germans, relates a story of Alexander Dumas (pere), who knew little German. He found himself at an inn in German Switzerland. He exhausted his small stock of German in trying to make the waiter understand what dishes he required for dinner. One he could not make the man understand, so in despair the author of "Monte Cristo" called for a pencil and sketched what he wanted. Some minutes later the innkeeper himself appeared, bearing a large open umbrella. Dumas had ordered mushrooms.

TYPIST IS OF ROYAL BLOOD

Third Lady of England Proves Her Interest in the Writing Machine to Be Real.

London.—Even the daughters of royalty do not scorn knowledge of useful occupations. Often we read of pretty and youthful princesses who have begun the study of some art, perhaps along domestic lines, cookery or sewing, or have finished a course in nursing, or can show a certificate testifying to their ability in some business line. The daughters of the late King Christian of Denmark, namely the Queen mother of England, the Dowager Empress of Russia and the Duchess of Cumberland, were taught to make all their own clothes and, furthermore, to trim their hats. The Empress of Germany holds that a knowledge of children, kitchen and church is to be preferred before all other accomplishments and other members of royalty are proud of the fact that they have provided their children, as they grew up, with the means to gain proficiency in any useful line they chose to follow.

PRINCESS VICTORIA ALEXANDRA.

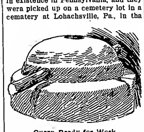
The latest student of royal blood in the business world is the 13-year-old daughter of King George, Princess Victoria Alexandra. This little lady, the only daughter in a family of six, became much interested in the typewriters in daily use where she resided. There are two lady typists attached to the secretarial staff of Marlborough house, which has been the King's residence, and finally the young princess declared her enthusiasm and asked one of them to give her the necessary instruction that she might operate a typewriter. She has learned to use the machine at a fair rate of speed. Now she plans to assist her mother, Queen Mary, regularly with her correspondence. Thus the third lady in England today, for her grandmother ranks second, is an accomplished little business woman in at least one line.

QUEER OLD HAND MILL FOUND

"Quern," as This Implement Is Called, First Used in America by the Indians.

Reading, Pa.—Ever since the Israelites gathered manna, ground it in mills, or beat it in mortars, or since the time the Hebrews grew corn and the Romans pounded the wheat they grew, we have had in history the upper and nether millstones. In primitive times the method of grinding and pounding cereals was all done by querns. The housewives of Scotland, who had too far to go to the little water mills, ground their oats and corn by hand with those little stone mills, known as querns, and which were from one foot to one and one-half feet in diameter.

In American history the quern was the first mill that the Indians used to grind their Indian corn. The photos of the quern, shown in this article, are those of the only Indian mill, still in existence in Pennsylvania, and they were picked up on a cemetery lot in a cemetery at Lobachsville, Pa., in the Oley valley, where the Indians had a number of their villages.



Quern Ready for Work.

No one seemed to recognize the historic value of the little stones, thousands viewing them, with the simple remark, "queer stones," passing on and never thinking about them any more. Some time ago a number of historians happened to hunt old inscriptions on tombstones several centuries old in this cemetery, when they accidentally came across the curious quern. Lifting the same apart, they recognized this primitive Indian mill. The quern is now in the rooms of the Berks County Historical society here, where it is one of the most important historical relics on exhibition.

The quern is in two parts, and weighs seventy-five pounds. The lower stone is hollowed out to a depth of about four inches in which the upper or grinder part of the quern fits. Through the center of the grinder a round hole is drilled, and through this opening the operator of the quern dropped the corn, feeding the mill as fast as it would grind it. On each side of the hole was a smaller hole in which a handle, made either of wood, stone or iron, fitted, and by pushing the handles in a half circle, the grinding operation was completed and the ground cereals, were the corn, wheat or rye, flowed from the lower stone by way of the spout, which was a cavity cut into the lower stone, two inches wide, and as deep as the surface of the interior of the hollowed surface.

Widow Healy Indulges in Some Plain Speaking to Her Devoted but Timid Lover.

The courting of the Widow Healy by Terence Corcoran was a tedious affair to every one in Magray place, most of all to the widow herself, who tried various expedients to assist her timid admirer.

"I'm thinking I might go for a sojer," Terence announced one night, when his fancy had been stirred by a newspaper account of a military pageant. "I'm not so old but I could do it. I was want in a school regiment."

"You go for a sojer!" cried the Widow Healy in mingled scorn and alarm. "A man that calls on a lone widow for two years and more, widout pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the makings of a dhrummer boy in him."

George was a manly fellow, yet, surprising as it may seem, he was guilty of a grave charge, a criminal offense—theft, for had he not many times stolen kisses from his fair sweetheart?

Monda, one of the most lovable of girls, was equally guilty as an accessory; she received the stolen property. Each seemed to have perfect confidence in the other, however, and when sentence was pronounced by a properly qualified official, they decided to serve their time together.

They remained loyal to the end, neither making any effort to have their sentence abrogated or shortened, but during the course of their long term together several small offenses were directly chargeable to them.—J. W. B., in Puck.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. HUEY, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

A traveler entered a railway carriage at a wayside station. The sole occupants of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, about twelve years old. Nothing of note occurred until the train steamed into the station at which tickets were collected. The woman, not having a ticket for the boy, requested him to crouch down.

The traveler intervened and suggested putting him under the seat.

"Man," said the excited woman, "it's a hair at death; but there's twa under the seat a'ready!"

Woman-Like.

"I hate him! I think he is the meanest man I ever met."

"Gracious, Jeanette! What is the trouble?"

"Why, he told me he loved me devotedly and I told him it would be impossible for me to love him in return. The poor fellow looked so downhearted I told him to try and forget me."

"Well?"

"Boo-hoo! He he—did!"

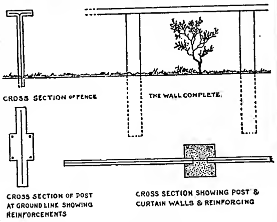
DESIGN FOR BUILDING STRONG CONCRETE WALLS

How One Can Construct Fence Without Cracking—Has Minimum Amount of Material, But of Immense Strength.

Some years ago there was published in the Gazette a design for building walls of concrete for farm use. The idea was of a thin curtain wall, only 4 inches thick, carefully reinforced and held by buttresses or concrete posts at distances of about 10 feet apart. If there is much pressure against the wall it will be better to put these buttresses only 6 feet or 8 feet apart. Since I published my plans I have seen several walls that had been built in the manner described, and I know that they are all right. I have also learned something of how one can best do the work and have no cracking at all, writes Joseph E. Wing in Breeder's Gazette. Bear now well in mind that this, while it looks like a wall, is really on the principle of a concrete fence, the thickness of the part between supports being but 4 inches, capped with a 4-inch cap 16 inches wide. To the observer it is a thick, heavy wall and it is immensely strong. The panels themselves need not go into the earth, unless to prevent washing under of water.



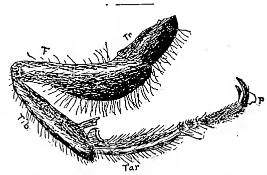
CROSS SECTION OF FENCE
THE WALL COMPLETE.
CROSS SECTION OF POST AT GROUND LINE SHOWING REINFORCEMENTS
CROSS SECTION SHOWING POST & CURTAIN WALLS & REINFORCING

A Solid Concrete Fence.

To construct this wall first stretch up in the line of it a very good fence of wove wire—any strong wire fencing will serve. Let it be as high as you desire the wall, and stretch it very tight. Use a sort with close meshes, say 6-inch squares. Two strips of hog fencing, one above the other, lapping and tying together, will serve well. Now make some tight panels of good dressed and matched boards, each panel as long as the distance between the centers of the posts is to be. When you have these panels made, soak them first in linseed oil and let it dry. Afterward get from your butcher a quantity of tallow and melt it and mix with kerosene oil to make it easily spread. Grease these wooden panels very thoroughly each time you use them; that will keep the boards from warping. A surer plan would be to cover the panels with smooth sheet iron which you would grease each time; that would leave a very smooth wall and look well. Put a cleat at the end of each panel of 2x2-inch stuff, vertically. Set them up now, one on each side of your wire fence, and clamp them together. The middles will be best held with wires. You now have a form that will hold your concrete curtain wall, 4 inches thick, with the wire in its exact center. Fill it with concrete soft enough to flow, not sloppy. Agitate it enough to settle it well. Let it set for 24 hours, then carefully remove the form and build another panel. As fast as the forms are taken off carefully brace these panels against wind pressure.

The holes for the posts should have been dug for convenience sake before the curtain walls were built. Put them down 4 feet and make them 12 inches square. Your curtain walls will lack 4 inches of touching at the ends. The post comes around them. Reinforce the post well. If you can get some odd pieces of 2 inch pipe, they will serve. Or use four rods, one at each corner, of about ¾-inch steel. Get the reinforcement run from the bottom of the hole to the top of the post. Let the posts come up just even with the top of your curtain wall. Excavate a transverse trench across the middle of the post, the trench 4 feet long and 12 feet deep, about 6 inches wide. When you fill the post mold with concrete, fill this trench. It runs out like the roots of a tree on either side. Reinforce this also. When you put up the post mould, it will be 12x12 inches on the inside and will embrace the ends of the curtain walls. Take flour paste and cover the ends of the curtain walls with heavy paper so that they will not adhere to the concrete of the posts. This will let them continue to contract and not crack by being held rigidly. You are now ready for the cap. It also must be well reinforced. The wire of the fence should come to the top of the cap. It need not be more than 4 inches thick and may be continuous. With the cap on, the wall is complete, and, while it has taken the minimum of material it has immense strength. It has also the appearance of a solid concrete wall.

FORELEG OF BUSY HONEY BEE



The accompanying illustration is a highly magnified representation of the foreleg of a worker bee. The little finger and the groove shown at what is called the tibia-palmar joint are used to clean the ligula or tongue and the antennae or feelers. To accomplish this the ligula or the antenna is placed in the groove, the leg flexed or drawn up, which decreases the space between finger and groove. The ligula or the antenna is then drawn through very much as a rope would be drawn between the thumb and first finger. The act may be observed daily as the bee takes flight for the field. Running out at the entrance it pauses a moment reaches up over its head, seizes the antenna and strips them clean, and then away it goes. The movement very much resembles that gone through by the school boy in winter when he stops to pull his cap over his ears before springing from the porch. The little claws at the extremity of the leg are of course used in climbing or in seizing hold of anything and the tiny pad between the claws is the pulvillus. The pulvillus secretes a viscous substance which enables the bee to climb smooth surfaces like glass. Tr is the trochanter, F the femur, Tib the tibea, Tar the tarsus.

Cauliflower Culture.

Cauliflower seed is hard to get up. Don't plant it too deep. Just cover it and roll the surface. It may be planted from the first of May to the middle of June. The plants must be properly set, and any farmer can tell in three days that it is growing. Hoeing and cultivating should be begun at once.

Leaves should be used to shade the heads. Cauliflower grows very fast in warm weather. The early flowers are more easily spoiled than the older ones. The older ones are sold for 30 cents, and at no time do they bring less than five cents—a large amount of water may do good just as they are about to head; but this may do harm, too.

Land for Goat Raising.

In a general way all land in the United States except very low, swampy tracts are suitable for goat raising. The feed that goats prefer is browse with a small admixture of weeds and grass, and therefore those tracts burdened with brushwood and briers are especially desirable. The fact makes it clear that in the colder parts of the country it would be necessary to provide some feed in winter, as nothing but the soft twigs remain at that time as browse. Goats will eat grass if required to do so and will thrive upon it, but grass land is regarded as being so much more profitable for hay production or as pasture for cattle and sheep that the placing of goats upon it is not to be considered.

Soil for Celery.

Sandy land is not suitable for celery as a market crop unless it can be easily irrigated. But for the home supply, where quantity is not the first consideration, the superior quality of celery grown on sand makes it desirable.

Slaughter of Birds.

H. R. Walmesoy of the Missouri Audubon society, of Missouri, declares that the slaughter of birds has cost the United States over $800,000,000. He says the English sparrow is the only bird that is of no value to the farmer.

FILED FIRST CLAIM

Daniel Freeman Got Homestead Number One.

As a Soldier in Nebraska in 1862 He Took Advantage of the Law Immediately After It Went Into Effect.

Lincoln, Neb.—When Daniel Freeman filed on the first free home provided for free men, at one minute past twelve o'clock on the morning of January 1, 1863, he inaugurated the history of homestead entries, which have since developed the western prairies into the heart of American agriculture. The Freeman home is at Brownville, Neb., on the quarter-section of land for which the first patent was issued. He always regarded this old patent as one of the most interesting and valuable relics of American history. Its face indicates that Freeman made entry No. 1, his proof of residence was No. 1, his patent is No. 1, recorded on page No. 1 of book No. 1, in the United States land office.

Freeman's name is linked with that of Galusha A. Grow of Pennsylvania, once speaker of the lower house of congress, and whose maiden speech in the house was on the subject of "Man's Right to the Soil." That speech was made in 1852, but it was not until ten years later that he was able to see his measure, the homestead law, recorded in the statute books.

Freeman at that time was a young soldier, detailed to perform a secret mission at Brownville, Neb., where the first United States land office was opened. The presence of many prospective settlers awaiting the opening January 1, 1863, of the land office, to take advantage of the homestead law, attracted Freeman to the idea of securing a free home. On December 30, however, he was ordered to report in St. Louis for a new assignment. To add to his troubles, January 1 was a legal holiday. The young soldier, nothing daunted, sought out James Bedford, who had charge of the government land office, and told him his troubles. Bedford agreed to sign the filing papers following the stroke of midnight the following night if Freeman could secure the consent of other prospective settlers to waive their right to make entries until the following day. All day December 31 Freeman sought out the settlers and secured their consent to the scheme, in order that he might get away New Year's morning. There was a dance at the town hall in the evening and at midnight all the young Beau Brummels repaired to the land office to see Uncle Sam's soldier become the first homesteader. The papers already had been made up and were signed just after twelve o'clock. Freeman started at once for St. Louis and was able to visit the land but twice during the next three years, the law making special provision for soldiers.

Freeman and His Home.

In 1865 Freeman laid down his arms and took up the peaceful pursuit of agriculture on his claim. He built a log cabin as the first structure on the farm. On an adjoining claim lived a young woman with whom Freeman had become acquainted during his previous visits, and when the cabin was completed they were married and moved into the new home. Freeman was energetic, and from an open prairie homestead the quarter section was developed into the finest farm in Gage county. Additional land was purchased and Freeman became wealthy. Three fine orchards surround a comfortable brick dwelling and a forty-acre timber claim has developed into a young forest.

Daniel Freeman was a pioneer Indian fighter and carried two scars as the result of bullets from the Indians' rifles. One of his peculiarities was his free thinking doctrine. He always maintained that the Bible was made for the people who believed in it and that they had no right to force it upon persons who did not want it. Taking this stand, he brought the famous lawsuit to force the Bible out of Nebraska schools. The suit was brought against the school board of his home district and he won out. His contention was that no religion could be legally taught in the public schools and that teachers could not lawfully read the Bible in school. The supreme court sustained his contention and the Holy Writ disappeared from the Brownville school.

Had Fondness for Sweet Things.

Old-time inhabitants of England had a decidedly sweeter tooth than most moderns have. In Tudor days it was the general practise to pour honey over the meat and honey or sugar was used in so many dishes (to say nothing of being mingled with the wine) that it is on record that the teeth of most people were black in consequence. Most of the old dishes would be too rich today, for oysters were stewed in wine, pigeons stuffed with gooseberries, grapes boiled in butter and mutton was stuffed with oysters

HIS RUBBERS HAD VANISHED

Consequently Man From the Country Had Little Use for City Methods.

The benches in the waiting rooms at the Union depot in Kansas City are used for other purposes than to rest on by travelers, the Kansas City Star enlightens us. At every midnight the maids clean out the rooms. They do not forget to poke under the benches for stray bundles left by trusting travelers.

Sometimes, after intervals, the travelers return to claim their property. Some time ago a red cap at the depot saw a man in a linen duster, a felt hat and the manner of one who had spent his life in a secluded part of the Ozarks get down on his knees and peer carefully under several of the benches.

"Lost anything, mister?" the red cap queried.

"Wall, no, sonny, not e'zactly. I left a pair of rubbers here last January when I was on the way tew Emporey. Hain't seen nuthin' of 'am, have you?"

The red cap explained that he hadn't, and, moreover, that the room had been cleaned out several dozen times since last January.

"Well, I swan," replied the traveler, blinking and stroking his beard, "the city methods do beat me."

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing.

"Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

Now They Sleep Inside.

George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have jointly and severally decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader. They were both in a deep snooze out at the Beattie farm, near Chagrin Falls, the other night, when a runaway team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full speed.

Sound asleep, but dreaming of impending danger, Ralston rolled out of his cot toward the north, and Beattie from his cot toward the south. The runaway horses dashed between the sleepers, oversetting everything in the way, but missing Beattie and Ralston by margins too narrow to be measured. Since that night Ralston has slept in his town house and Beattie has found shelter under the ample roof of his house on his big plantation.

Flirting With Fashion.

That innate tendency on the part of the fair consumer to flirt with fashion, playing fast and loose with various commodities, is responsible for the uncertainties that have prevailed during the month. There was such a lack of confidence as to the ultimate acceptance of the various lines prepared by distributers and consumers that buying was somewhat minimized. Prosperity or adversity has nothing to do with the millinery business. Fashion alone makes or breaks.—Millinery Trade Review.

The Weeds Return.

"Confound these election bets, anyway!" grumbled Harker.

"Lose heavily?" inquired his friend.

"No, I won ten boxes of cigars and they were so rank I sold the whole lot to the corner tobacconist for a dollar."

"Well, you made a dollar, anyway."

"Yes, but that is not the worst of it. My wife saw the boxes in the window marked 'A Bargain, $2,' and bought the whole lot to give me as a birthday present."

Points to Good Future.

Seven poor children, four girls and three boys, all about ten years old, want to a nearby seashore resort, in charge of two women, for a day's outing. The funds for the picnic were provided by two boys who sell papers and who live in one of the two houses from which the excursion party was recruited. One of the women in charge of the children said that the boys had arranged the outing "of their own accord, and the remarkable thing is this: They are not good boys by any means and one of them is probably the naughtiest boy in the neighborhood. But we think that when boys do little things like this they will come out all right."—New York Tribune.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

THE FIRST INDUSTRIAL CONTEST

Enthusiastic Meeting of School Children at Plummer Last Saturday.

Meeting at St. Hilaire Saturday Oct. 15, and Red Lake Falls Oct. 22.

The first of the series of industrial contests to be held in the county this fall was held at Plummer last Saturday and the meeting, the first contest of the kind ever held in the county, was a pronounced success. Two hundred people were in attendance and school children from twelve districts participated in the contest. There were 153 entries, 83 prizes were awarded and $40 paid to the children in prize money.

Supt. L. V. Koos of the Red Lake Falls high school accompanied Supt. Anderson to Plummer and gave a talk at the meeting on contest work in the public schools and the need of industrial work in the country schools.

The next contest will be held at St. Hilaire, Saturday, and preparations are being made for a big meeting.

A week from Saturday, on Oct. 22, a contest will be held in Red Lake Falls and it promises to be very fine meeting. Supt. Anderson has arranged a fine program and the local merchants are contributing liberally for the prizes to be awarded in the contest. The meeting will be held in the assembly room of the high school building. Following is the program:

Seed Corn Conservation.

The farmers who observed "Seed Corn Week," and who secured an adequate supply of fully matured selected ears from which to plant their fields next spring, are to be congratulated; as also are those who, finding their corn backward and immature at that time, nevertheless were enabled by favorable weather to select their seed ears, in the same way, a little later. As an inferior resort, with those who are yet behind in securing seed, a selection from the best ears in the shock may be made at husking time; but probabilities are so great that most corn in the shock will have been affected by frost, that such should not be planted unless carefully tested for germination. Better buy seed from a neighbor who has been aforehand or fortunate enough to secure a surplus of good seed, than to take the risk of using an inferior article. One Minnesota farmer last year sold his surplus of good seed corn at $5 a bushel, shelled.

The right selection of seed corn on your farm will have been made to little purpose, however, unless it is rightly cared for between gathering and next years' sowing. Having seen to it that it is thoroughly dried let it next be your care to protect it from damp, from insects and from mice. Your seed-room is your treasure-house, let none of these robbers break in! Then next spring, with fall-plowed land awaiting the planter, your battle for an increased production per acre will be half won in advance.—C. R. B. Extension Division.

Keugh & Co., Ladies' Tailors, Chicago.

I have accepted the agency for the above company and am prepared to take measurements for suits, skirts jackets, capes. Call and see Keugh's all wool samples. I have also fine fall and winter hosiery. Racine feet, cotton, fleece lined and woolen.—Miss Carter.

"ON TO BRAINARD"

That is the Slogan of the Northern Minnesota Development Boosters.

The first annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held in the city of Brainerd Thursday and Friday, December 1st and 2nd, 1910.

The citizens of Brainerd are preparing to take care of even larger numbers than have attended previous meetings. The work to be done at this time will require the greatest care and thought of the delegates and it is hoped that all the counties will send full delegations as well as others interested in the good work for the state.

It is expected that bills for presentation at the coming session of the legislature will be drawn up, included in which are reapportionment, good roads, one mill tax, state lands, consolidated rural schools and other objects of state wide interest.

Proposals Wanted.

Sealed bids will be received by the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, up to the opening hour of the session of said board, October 21st, 1910, 10:00 o'clock a. m., for the furnishing and installing of the electric light fixtures for the Red Lake county court house, Red Lake Falls, Minn., in accordance with the plans showing outlets as prepared by architect F. D. Orff on file in the county auditor's office.

Bidders will be required to submit designs for the best fixtures they can furnish installed at a price not exceeding $1500.

A certified check of $100 must accompany each bid payable to the order of the county auditor. The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to invite open bids.

By order of the Board.

Badly Burned.

Last Friday while Andrew T. Nelson was babbitting some pinions on his threshing engine, assisted by C. J. Bugge and his waterman, the babbit exploded in one of them, badly burning Mr. Nelson and the waterman, while Mr Bugge escaped with a few slight burns and some of the metal had to be removed from his eyes by the doctor. Dr. O. F. Mellby of Thief River Falls was telephoned for, and was soon on the ground and dressed the wounds of the injured men, and finding the waterman so badly burned took him back to the city with him so that his eyes and wounds could be properly attended to. Although Mr. Nelson received some bad burns he was out in a few days little the worse for the accident.—Erie Eleven Towns.

HELP IS APPRECIATED

Red Lake Falls' Contributions are Relieving Distress of the Needy.

Mrs. F. L. Farley, chairman of the committee having in charge the work of securing contributions for the aid of the fire sufferers, has received a letter dated Oct. 15, from Rev. Sidebotham chairman of the Warroad relief committee, which is in part as follows:

"Your letter with draft for $101.05 came this afternoon. I am glad your note was as it was. Money is coming which cannot be used for needy objects, because it must be turned to Red Cross. Your money will be used for immediate needs. I cannot see how in such a short time the ladies could collect so much. Will you please express to the ladies and to the donors not only my thanks but the thanks of our entire committee.

"The boxes of clothing also—these were put right into a car for Williams. It seems that at Beaudette they are merely caring for the needs there, and at Pitt and Graceton. Friday I went down the line and learned that Cedar Spur and Williams were being overlooked, so we are supplying both of these places."

GOVERNOR IS COMING

Will Speak in Red Lake Falls Monday, Oct. 31.

Hon. A. O. Eberhart, governor of Minnesota and Republican candidate for the office he now occupies, will deliver a political address at the Bijou theatre at 1 o'clock in the afternoon on Monday, Oct. 31. The Red Lake Falls concert band will play and it will be a lively occasion no doubt.

After the meeting the governor will go to St. Hilaire and will speak there at 3 o'clock and at Thief River Falls in the evening.

Easy For Fosston.

The Fosston high school foot ball team won the game from Red Lake Falls last Saturday by a score of 36 to 0. It was a better game than the score would indicate, though the locals never caused the Fosstonites much trouble. The locals went into the game without much training. Two or three of the boys had not been in the practice until the night before the game and others were quite inexperienced. However, there is some good material, and the boys have been getting into shape this week for the next game, to be played at Fertile Saturday afternoon.

OPPORTUNITY FOR AN OPEN FIGHT

The People of Red Lake Falls Would Like to Debate the County Division Proposition.

The proposition whether or not Red Lake county shall be divided is one which concerns all of the people of the county and is a question on which the people should be well informed to vote intelligently.

The people are entitled to a free discussion of the important question and the anti-division committee of Red Lake Falls suggests that joint debates be held and wish this to be considered a challenge to such debates—a challenge to the people who are making the fight for the division—the debates to be held at any or many places in the county.

The suggestion to debate has been made to the Thief River Falls people within the past few days, but has not been entertained. They think the suggestion is a bluff. It is—it's a big bluff. We dare you to come out in the open and give the people a free discussion of the important question. Name the places; make the dates. A refusal to consider this proposition will indicate your intention to carry on a dirty campaign, to excite some of the people by charges of corruption, to keep them excited until after election, instead of giving them an opportunity to know what are the real points at issue and determine whether your proposition has any merit. Is it true that you believe that your proposition has no merit? Are you afraid of an open discussion?

It is believed that many people in the county would like to know more about the division proposition. Speakers for public meetings to be held anywhere in the county are yours for the asking. If the people in any locality desire a meeting all they need to do is name the date and place and make their desires known. Send a letter to "Secretary Anti-division Committe, Red Lake Falls," and a speaker will be supplied at no expense to you. This is the fight of the farmers of Red Lake county more than of the people of Red Lake Falls city, but we are with you in the fight and our services are yours for the asking.

COUNTY TAXES & FIRES

Schoolmaster Hay and Attotney Halvorson Tell Things at St. Hilaire.

There was a public meeting at St. Hilaire last Saturday evening at which Schoolmaster Hay and Attorney Halverson of Thief River Falls made some "telling remarks" on the subject of county division.

Attorney Halvorson said that Thief River Falls people had arranged to give the proposed new county a deed to the city hall to be used as a court house "until such time as it is burned." That was intended as a clever joke and everybody saw the point, but nobody saw it as Mr. Halvorson did. Everybody knows that the building is intended for temporary use only and is to be disposed of when the county gets to doing business—if it does. But it was not known before just what disposition is to be made of the old building. It will make a good fire. Schoolmaster Hay spoke on the subject of taxes. He had a nicely prepared chart, as any schoolmaster should have. On the chart he had printed $62,000 in nice big figures. This, he informed his hearers, is the amount of Red Lake county's taxes. And then the schoolmaster in the best pedagogical style said that he'd be glad to answer any questions that the members of the class might desire to ask. Somebody was inquisitive and asked what are the items that make up the $62,000. The schoolmaster was very accommodating and accounted for "all except $18,000." He did not know what that was for so somebody who knows something about county taxes told him that it was for ditch assessments which are not taxes at all.

More than 25 per cent of the tax levy is not a tax against anyone but assessments against lands benefited by the construction of ditches, obligations voluntarily assumed by the owners of the lands benefited. A large part of the tax is levied for purely local purposes, the county authorities simply collecting and transmitting funds to township and other local authorities, and as a matter of fact less than one-third of $62,000, or a little more than $18,000 is levied for the expenses of county government. For how much less than $18,000 could the proposed new county with the big debt that must be assumed and no funds on hand—for how much less could it be run if simply the expense of county government and interest on debts are paid, to say nothing of paying any of the principal or the cost of a new court house?

Schoolmaster Hay speaks as one having authority—without knowing what he's talking about. He also says that the records can be transmittd for $2,000. That would buy a few books.

CONTEST AT ST. HILAIRE

Fine Meeting of School Children Held Last Saturday.

About three hundred people attended the industrial contest held at St. Hilaire last Saturday and the meeting was an enthusiastic one. Children from ten school districts surrounding St. Hilaire participated in the contest.

There were 250 entries, about 150 prizes were awarded and about $40.00 was paid out in prize money. There were unusually fine exhibits of grains and sewing and other exhibits were good.

H. R. Daniels of the Crookston experiment farm officiated as judge and also gave a talk on industrial work. The St. Hilaire schools and the ladies of the village served lunch.

Sell Fresh Eggs Only.

There are farmers who still persist in packing eggs as a speculation, holding them for a rise of a few cents per dozen. With the high prices that have prevailed in this community for the past few years, it is poor business to hold eggs for higher prices, as there is bound to be a loss on stored eggs and some body will have to stand a loss. The pure food commissioners of different states have been getting more strict on the egg question right along and farmers, shippers and merchants have been fined heavily. Consumers expect value received for their money as well as farmers and people should not be expected to pay for eggs that are not strictly fresh eggs that cannot be used for boiling in the shell. If a farmer has any doubt as to every egg being fresh he should at candle them.—Iowa Farm Journal.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Helm received the glad tidings by phone from Crookston Sunday that their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Quesnelle, are parents of a baby girl born Sunday morning.

BIG MEETING AT ST. HILAIRE FRIDAY

Red Lake Falls People Will Talk on County Division Proposition.

Every Tax Payer Who Can do so Should Attend This Meeting.

An anit-county division meeting will be held at St. Hilaire Friday evening. Red Lake Falls people will have something to say that will be worth hearing. Every tax-payer for miles around St. Hilaire should attend the meeting. Facts will be presented that should interest every tax-payer, facts that he should seriously consider in determining his vote on the proposition. Turn out and hear what the anti-divisionists have to say. You will be well entertained. All are invited.

FLAMES DESTROY THREE TOWNS

MINNESOTA DISASTER GREATEST SINCE HINCKLEY FIRE 15 YEARS AGO.

BEAUDETTE, SPOONER, RAINY RIV.

Property Loss in Rainy River, Beaudette and Spooner is $1,500,000 —Hundreds are Dead.

Warroad, Oct. 10.—The greatest catastrophe that Minnesota has experienced since the Hinckley horror 15 years ago occurred Friday night and Saturday, when the whole Minnesota-Manitoba boundary country was swept by fire that is still raging, and as details become known, the disaster assumes appalling proportions.

The number of deaths is estimated at from 100 to 200 or more, almost entirely among settlers in the woods around the towns of Beaudette, Pitt, Roosevelt and Graceton.

Very few of the settlers are known to have escaped and this estimate will likely fall considerably short of the actual number.

Scene of Horror Enacted.

Scenes of horror are reported on every hand. People lost their heads completely and ran aimlessly about, bewailing their loss. Streets of towns were strewn with personal belongings which were thrown away in their flight.

Crowds of able-bodied men, mostly workmen with no person to care for, ran pell-mell to board the waiting train at Beaudette to the exclusion of women and children, and refused positively to assist in saving property.

The village of Pitt was burned at 7 o'clock Friday night and at 8 o'clock the towns of Spooner and Beaudette, six miles distant, were in flames.

A hurricane was blowing at the time and within 10 minutes after the appearance of the fire the inhabitants of the town were forced to flee for their lives, being unable to save any of their property.

Then were enacted scenes which will never be forgotten by those present. Sick people apparently by the score appeared and were carried or assisted to points of safety. There were five patients in Carrigan's hospital, which was burned. One woman, who had given birth to a child at 5 o'clock the same evening, had to be carried to the office of the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company, in whose building many people took refuge.

Property Loss $1,500,000

The property loss in Rainy River, Beaudette and Spooner alone, including the Rat Portage Lumber company's plant and yard at Rainy River and the yard of the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company at Spooner, will total about $1,500,000.

The people of Rainy River are doing everything possible to assist the homeless residents of the two American towns.

Steps were at once taken by Mr. Mathieu, the executive head of the Rainy River Lumber company and the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company, to have timber shipped over from Rainy River for the purpose of building temporary shelters for the people in Beaudette and Spooner and the boarding camp of the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company is feeding as many of the people as possible.

Situation at Rainy River.

Rainy River, Oct. 10.—This town was on fire from the international bridge to Sixth street, a distance of half a mile.

Included in the burned area are the Rat Portage Lumber company's mill and lumber yard, containing 10,000,000 feet of lumber; the Western Canada flour mills company and surrounding buildings. There are 50 houses burned and scores of people are homeless. Fire is raging in the woods as far as can be seen along the south bank of Rainy river.

Most of old Beaudette, situated at Minnesota and International bridge, has so far escaped the fire, as well as the buildings of the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company's plant, through the activity of the Canadian Northern Railroad company.

Most of the women and children of these towns have been taken on special trains to points east and many more are on steamers ready to leave should the wind change and the fire spread.

All available hose is in use, but the fire, driven by a furious northwest wind, is beyond control and must burn itself out.

Awful Scenes at International Falls.

International Falls, Minn., Oct. 10.—More than 250 dead, millions upon millions of dollars' worth of property destroyed, 8,000 refugees fleeing from the flames, is an epitome of the happenings of the hell session in the Beltrami county forest fires.

Thirty-five typhoid fever patients were carried on improvised litters from Spooner just before it was wiped off the map. Forty-five were carried from Beaudette and the scenes of all the refugees, carried or loitering from exhaustion was Rainy River, Can., across the water from the fire-ridden districts of Minnesota.

Then the flames hit Rainy River, destroyed the lumber mills, and 2,000 panic-stricken refugees piled into freight cars and all were pushed by the engineer of a switch engine, who thinking there was no danger, started to pull them out of the town.

A PROCLAMATION.

By virtue of my position as president of the State Red Cross society, in view of the dire needs of citizens of the northern part of this state who have suffered from recent forest fires, I hereby call upon the people of Minnesota to respond at once with contributions of money, provisions and clothing, to be distributed to the needy under the direction of this society.

Such contributions will be received by Kenneth Clark, St. Paul, treasurer of the State Red Cross society, and F. M. Prince, Minneapolis, acting as assistant state treasurer, and I hereby designate the mayors of the towns and cities of the state to act as collectors of this fund in their respective localities.

Prompt and generous response is imperative as the reports from the afflicted districts indicate that the need is great and will continue for months.

Given under my hand and seal this ninth day of October, 1910.

Adolph O. Eberhart, Governor.

Later, the flames subsided and 500 refugees landed in International Falls —strong men, shaking like leaves in a gale, women and their children, fever patients on shutters, burned men and women swathed in bandages and a whole motley crowd in stock-cars like cattle.

International Falls met them at the station, opened the city hall and hotel for them and gave them beds, such as could be provided.

There was no escape to the west. The east was the only chance and it was a slim one.

Bridges and culverts had burned out, wires were down and trains were run at their full speed. All the way from Beaudette and Rainy River west to Warroad, a distance of 50 miles, was a solid mass of flames.

Beaudette is only a charred remnant of a town. Spooner is wiped off the map. Cedar Spur, Graceton Pitt, Swift and Roosevelt, mere hamlets, are burned to the ground.

Every settler in a district bounded by the Rainy River and the Lake of the Woods on the north to 25 miles south, and from Warroad west, who is not accounted for, is dead according to the most conservative information obtainable.

A special relief train arrived on the Minnesota and International railroad bearing provision destined for Rainy River and the Bemidji company of the Minnesota National Guard, which will take charge of the distributes of supplies and the preservation of order. The burned district will be placed under martial law.

Mayor John Berg of International Falls appointed a relief committee to arrange further to care for nearly 300 fire refugees now quartered here.

There are three typhoid fever cases among them, six men badly burned and it seems that every family of settlers has from two to ten children. They are absolutely destitute. The women have borne up under the terrible strain with wonderful fortitude and all stories from the fire district are that the women and not the men were the heroes.

When the refugees fled in panic for the freight train that bore them from Rainy River Saturday to this city, men crushed women and children and in spite of the fact that the cars were choked so that standing room was at a premium, they insisted on cramming themselves in.

Miss Myra Burt, a prominent young woman of Beaudette, stationed herself at the door of one car, kicked every man in the with her pointed shoe who attempted to board the car, and herself reached out and took babes from the arms of mothers.

When the train started, there were five babies aboard whose mothers were left behind. They are being care for in the hospital here.

Duluth Sends Relief Train.

Duluth, Oct. 10.—Six hours from the time an appeal to Mayor Cullum came from Beaudette, a special relief train was flying along the tracks of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern and the Canadian Northern toward the fire stricken region. It carried Mayor Cullum, President W. A. McGonagle of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern; Superintendent J. F. Kritter of the same road; Col. F. E. Resche, Third Regiment M. N. G.; Ray Higgins of the Kelly How Thomson company and newspaper men.

C. H. MOYER TALKS TO MINERS.

President of Western Federation Now in Black Hills District.

Lead, Oct. 10.—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, is in the hills on a short business visit and is addressing the different miners' unions on the labor situation. While many of the union miners who left the employ of the Homestake at the time of the labor trouble last fall have quit the country, there are still several hundred here.

Illinois Primary Law Defied.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 10.—Believing that the new primary law is unconstitutional and will be so declared, the Democrats of the 26th senatorial district met in conference here complying with the old law and under the Australian ballot system, and placed D. D. Donahue of this city in nomination for the legislature. This is the only convention of the kind held in Illinois since the new primary law has been adopted. A certificate of the convention was filed immediately with the secretary of state.

Force of Habit.

"They say Doctor Sawyer, the famous surgeon, is a very rude man in social life—that he never speaks to anybody on the street."

"That's professional habit. You see he is so used to cutting people."

The Explanation.

"Jagsby said the neglect of his friend to ask him to dinner cut him to the quick."

"Oh, I guess he meant a cut to the quick lunch counter."

Not for Him.

"Ever use an automobile for a getaway?" inquired the first burglar.

"Nix," answered the second burglar. "We fellers run risks enough without taking chances on being pinched for speeding."

Not His Business.

"Doctor Grouchy is one of the men who never seems to like his neighbor to enjoy good fortune."

"Well, can you in justice expect a doctor to wish others well?"

NO SALOON LID

MR. BALLINGER WIPES OUT GROGSHOP CLOSING ORDER IN UPPER MINNESOTA.

MEN TO AID ENFORCEMENT

Cass Lake and Moorhead Mayors Told No More Restricted Belts in Indian Treaty Territory.

Washington, D. C. — Secretary Ballinger declared there shall be no specific "red light" or "wet" and "dry" districts in the Indian country in northern Minnesota.

In other words, the recent order of the Indian office creating such districts and proposing to close saloons therein is wiped out.

The delegation coming here to protest against the order on behalf of Moorhead and Cass Lake expressed to the secretary complete satisfaction with this order.

Mayors Dumas of Cass Lake and Dover of Moorhead promised cordial co-operation with the government in enforcing the law and prosecuting offenders who sell liquor in violation thereof.

Arguments Carry Weight.

It is plain that Secretary Ballinger was much impressed with the force of the contention of the visiting delegation that the proposed saloon closing order would discriminate against Moorhead and Cass Lake and in favor of other towns in the Indian country.

The secretary indorsed the policy of the department in the following order addressed to the commissioner of Indian affairs:

"From various petitions and communications addressed to me in connection with the enforcement of the acts of congress relating to the introduction of liquor into the Indian country in Minnesota I feel called upon to express to you what seems to be to be the correct policy of the department in dealing with these questions. I fully understand and approve of the diligence of the Indian office in its efforts to enforce these statutes.

Contention Over Laws.

"It is true there has been some contention respecting the right to enforce them. The law, however, appears to be settled in respect to the authority of the department and it, therefore, becomes purely a matter of administration. In the administration of these statutes the department cannot countenance discriminations or anything that savors of arbitrary, capricious or vexatious proceedings.

"The officers in the field are entrusted with a police duty to protect the Indians under their supervision from the introduction of liquor as contemplated by the statute. You will therefore instruct your officers to secure convictions for violations of these statutes where the evidence is available and proceed throughout the territory involved to enforce the law."

OPERATOR'S CARELESSNESS.

Stock Escapes From Cars—Traffic Is Interrupted for Hours.

Montevideo. — One man was instantly killed, two were fatally injured and died shortly afterward and a fourth was seriously hurt in a head-on collision between an eastbound stock train and a west-going freight train on the H. and D. division of the Milwaukee road near Minnesota Falls.

Several head of cattle and hogs were killed when the 33 cars of the stock train were thrown into an inextricable heap and broken. A great number of the animals broke away and are now roaming at large over the prairie.

The wreck is said to have been the result of carelessness on the part of the operator at Minnesota Falls, who has disappeared and is now being sought by railroad detectives. Arrangements had been made for the two trains to meet at Minnesota Falls. The freight arrived ahead of time and the operator, instead of handing the hold order to the conductor, gave him, by mistake, the clearance papers, and the train immediately pulled out. The order was found on the operator's desk after his disappearance.

GAME WARDEN CATCHES FIVE.

Crookston Officer Arrests Illegal Hunters, Who Pay Fines.

Crookston.—Game Warden Munch arrested five men at Mentor and each pleaded guilty and paid the fines assessed by Judge Nels Paulsberg. The men were: Joka Burkhard of Illinois, $27; Charley Knutson, Raymond Buhn and Arthur Buhn, all of Mentor, $12 each; for hunting ducks from a launch; Emil Bunneesa, Maple Lake, $12, for shooting a grouse in September.

Drys Win in Blue Earth.

Blue Earth.—Judge J. H. Quinn in the district court handed down a decision making the city election of last April, in which the no license faction cast four more votes than their opponents, valid.

Following the city election, J. P. Bartell, representing the voters opposed to the no license program, began an action charging illegal balloting at the election and other irregularities. He charges were not sustained. The dry faction is delighted over its victory.

SETTLERS TO CONTEST.

General Land Office Says State Must Prove Land Not Swamps.

Cass Lake.—Another and probably the final chapter in the long-drawn-out swamp land litigation between the settlers and the State of Minnesota is about to be written. Notice was received at the local United States land office from the commissioner of the general land office that lands selected by the State of Minnesota as inuring to it under the swamp land act after the examination in the field made during the summer of 1909 are subject to contest by actual settlers who had established residence on such lands prior to March 14, 1910, the date when the list was filed here.

A radical department has been made in these cases from the practice prevailing in the cases which have heretofore arisen where settlers have been in conflict with selections made by the state of lands shown to be swamp by the field notes of survey. In the latter cases, the most of which arose in Koochiching county, the burden of proof was upon the settler to show the non-swampy character of the land.

In the new cases arising out of conflict where an examination was made in the field the burden of proof will be upon the state to show that the land is swamp, when contest arises with an actual settler. Many settlers have been waiting for four or five years for a chance to be heard in these cases before the department.

Notice will be served upon the Governor and sixty days will be allowed the state to make answer to the claim of the settler and ask for a hearing. Two cases have already been started and many more will follow. The order affects lands in the vicinity of Cass lake, Deer river and Leech lake. The lands which have been claimed by the state, even though patented, will not be disturbed. In other instances the settlers have already offered final proof.

FIRE CHIEF INDICTED.

Minneapolis Official Mixed in Real Estate Deal.

Minneapolis.—James R. Canterbury was indicted by the Hennepin county grand jury, arraigned before Judge John Day Smith, and released on $3,000 bail for wrongfully receiving money while acting as chief engineer of the Minneapolis fire department. Mr. Canterbury did not wait for a warrant to be served on him but came to the sheriff's office and gave himself up.

The transaction which led to the indictment was purchasing of a site at University and First avenues northeast for a repair shop for the fire department. It was declared that, by that transaction, Mr. Canterbury realized a profit of approximately $3,000 to which he was not legally entitled, and that the city was mulcted of that sum.

The offense charged is a felony and is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years and not less than three, or by a fine not exceeding five times the value of the amount of money involved, or by both.

A special committee of thirteen, especially appointed to investigate the case, accepted the resignation of Mr. Canterbury Friday night, after a spirited meeting in which many were in favor of discharging the chief.

STATE SEEKS BACK TAXES.

Draft for $12,499.12 Made Against Rainy River Railway.

St. Paul.—State Auditor S. G. Iverson has issued a draft for $12,499.12 against the Minneapolis and Rainy River Railway Company for back taxes. The draft has been turned over to State Treasurer Pettijohn for collection. This action was taken upon the recommendation of Public Examiner Schaefer, who has just completed an accounting made for the purpose of verifying the gross earnings reported by the companies for taxation purposes. Errors in omission were located in the returns amounting to $320,766.06, which would net the state $12,499.12 in taxes. The company has not yet decided whether it will pay the tax or take the question into court.

MALT IS BARRED IN BEMIDJI.

Indian Agents Put Lid on Sales and Close Five Shops.

Bemidji.—Another severe blow was struck in Bemidji by the government in its crusade to stop the sale of liquor to Indians when Agents T. F. Brents and N. J. Sero clapped the lid on the selling of malt and put five places out of the business for selling it.

At the Blue Front "Soft Drink Emporium" on Minnesota Avenue, five cases of the so-called malt were confiscated, taken out in the street and dumped. Orders were issued in each instance to have all the remaining goods shipped out of the city and the restricted district within twelve hours. The alleged malt is said to have been beer, as it showed 4 per cent alcohol.

MANY TONS OF HAY DESTROYED.

Fire Sweeps Prairie for Five Miles and Farmers Lose Fodder.

East Grand Forks.—A strip of prairie land about five miles long and three miles wide, near Euclid, east of this city, was burned and a large quantity of hay was destroyed. A. A. Weekly, a resident of this city, lost about one hundred tons of hay, together with a hay press and other equipment, while Nels Peterson, of Grand Forks, lost a similar amount of hay.

Sailor Convicted of Murder.

Duluth.—Serafin Petros, a sailor, was convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of a shipmate, John Hendrickson, on the steamer James Corrigan in Duluth harbor July 29. The men had quarreled while on shore leave and renewed the dispute aboard ship, when, it was charged, Petros shot Hendrickson. Petros claimed that Hendrickson was the aggressor and denied to the last that he shot him. The case has occupied four days before Judge Cant in district court.

DISCOVERY DAY

FIFTEEN STATES OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF FINDING OF AMERICA.

TAFT REVIEWS A PARADE

Chicago, New York, Boston and Other Large Cities Remember Date and Proper Observance of Occasion is Made.

New York, Oct. 12.—Two big parades, in which Italian societies were prominent participants, featured the New York city celebration of Columbus day.

Fifteen states now observe the day—California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

The outdoor feature of the day's local celebration was started in Brooklyn with a parade.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Discovery day was generally observed in Chicago today. The banks, the board of trade and courts as well as many business places were closed. Twenty thousand Italian Americans marched in parade.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 12.—Columbus day was observed for the first time in Massachusetts today. The celebration centered in Boston where a parade of 60,000 men was reviewed by President Taft, Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald and Archbishop O'Connell.

Although legally a public holiday, the principal observances were almost entirely Roman Catholic. The paraders all were members of Catholic societies, except the militia.

President Taft planned to reach the state house about noon, motoring up from Beverly.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12.—The Italian residents of Detroit celebrated Columbus day by unveiling a statue of the great navigator.

TIES UP FRANCE.

General Strike Greatly Impedes Many Lines of Business.

Paris, France, Oct. 12.—Encouraged by the effectiveness of the strike of the employes on the Northern & Western railroads and the extension of the movement throughout the Eastern road and Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean lines, the leaders of the French working men generally threaten a gigantic move to paralyze the activities of the whole country.

Employees of the Eastern Railroad voted to strike at noon and the trainmen on the Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean lines decided to go out this evening.

Electricians and employees of the Omnibus, Metropolitan and Subway transportation line of this city considered today the advisability of seizing this opportunity to launch a strike for the consideration of long standing grievances.

The situation throughout the republic is regarded as grave. The railway companies are making a desperate struggle to maintain some sort of service with the aid of military engineers and men from the navy, but are meeting with little success.

Probing Freight Rates.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.— Investigation by the interstate commerce commission into the proposed advance in freight rates in eastern trunk line territory was resumed today at the commission's office after an adjournment of hearing from New York city. In a general way the increase suggested by the roads affect nearly all articles of freight handled at either class or commodity rates.

The testimony adduced heretofore at the hearings indicated the aggregate amount which would accrue to the various lines though advances had been figured at about $35,000,000 annually.

The full interstate commerce commission, with Martin A. Knapp presiding, conducted the hearing.

Merger Case Nears End.

St. Paul, Oct. 12.--Judge P. F. Dunn, of San Francisco concluded his argument before the United States circuit court on behalf of the Union Pacific railway in the suit of the government against the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and other railroads to dissolve the so-called Union Pacific merger. Judge Dunn was followed by W. H. Loomis, general solicitor of the Union Pacific.

The defendants will close their case tomorrow evening.

Barnes Resigned Position.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Contending that his party loyalty had been questioned through the failure of Ezra P. Prentice, new chairman of the republican state committee to re-appoint him a member of the executive committee of the state committee Wm. Barnes, jr., of Albany, has tendered his resignation as a committeeman from the twenty-third congressional district comprising Albany and Schenectady counties.

Barnes led the fight against the selection of Colonel Roosevelt as temporary chairman at the recent republican state convention at Saratoga.

Crosby Had Street Fair.

Crosby, N. D., Oct. 12.—Crosby held a street fair, and the event was one of the most successful functions ever pulled off in the county. More than $1,000 was expended in prizes and attractions, and the display of vegetables and grains could not be beaten in North Dakota. Northwestern Williams county probably suffered less from drought this year than any other part of the state, and the result has been a bountiful harvest, wheat running about fourteen bushels per acre, and [illegible] more than paid its market value in this year's flax crop.

Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. The Privilege of Man.

B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the executive board of the Frisco system of railroads, on one occasion took to task a young man in his employ who had announced his intention of marrying. The youth in question was drawing a small salary, and Yoakum remonstrated with him on the ground that he could not afford to marry and that his wife would have to suffer great privations.

DIETZ HOME SURROUNDED BY DEPUTIES

DEITZ SURRENDERS 8 YEARS WAR ENDS

BRAVE DEFENDER OF CAMERON DAM GOES DOWN BEFORE SUPERIOR NUMBERS.

ONE DEPUTY KILLED IN BATTLE

Which Raged Around the Lonely Forest Clearing For Eight Hours.—Deitz Has His Hand Shattered By Bullet.

Winter, Wis., Oct. 10.—Handcuffed to Fred Thorbin the man who is his own sworn enemy, John F. Deitz, the defender of Cameron dam, surrendered at 3:20 Saturday afternoon to the law and will stand trial.

A bullet wound in Deitz's right hand, which prevented him from using his gun to advantage, is supposed to have hastened the surrender.

Oscar Harp, a deputy, was killed. Deputy Vonpomerlo was with Harp. Both men made a run for the lumber pile. Harp fell dead with a bullet in his mouth.

Mrs. Deitz and Leslie are prisoners, and are not injured.

The terms of the surrender were unconditional, other than a request from Deitz that he be protected from violence.

Helen Deitz, the 14-year old daughter of the prisoner, represented the family side in the final peace negotiations; the other side represented by Sully Heffelfinger of Minneapolis, the man chosen by Sheriff Madden to go in and make arrangements with Deitz and promise him absolute protection from violence to either himself or his family.

John Deitz, his wife, his eldest son Clarence, and his son Leslie occupy cells in the county jail at Hayward while his eldest daughter, Myra, although under arrest, is still confined at the hospital at Ashland as the result of the bullet she received in the back from Thorbin's pistol a week ago.

The log cabin which Deitz has defended on Cameron dam for the last six years during his fearless defiance of the law and the authorities, is riddled with a thousand shots.

Rev. Father Pilon Enters Cabin.

Rev. Father J. A. Pilon was the first to enter the cabin since the progress of the earnest seige.

While Helen, acting as her father's emissary of peace, was asking the deputies for protection from violence, the brave Catholic priest, learning that there were wounded in the shack, took advantage of the truce and with the permission of Sheriff Madden, crossed the clearing to the cabin where he lent assistance to the wounded father.

The interior of the Deitz cabin is one mass of bullets. Every log is riddled and daylight peeks in at every angle.

During the shooting, Mrs. Deitz and Helen and John, Jr., occupied positions of comparative safety, behind a barricade of boxes, chairs and the organ in the living room floor.

To Mrs. Deitz is given the credit of the surrender with the loss of only one life. With Helen and Johnnie at either side, the mother sought in every way to shield her young from the merciless deadly rain of steel and lead.

Although bleeding profusely from the nasty bullet wound in his right hand, Deitz would only grit his teeth and return the intermittent fire when the bullets continued to pop inside the shack.

The pleadings of the mother and the frightened, yet silent set faces of the two children, especially John F. Deitz, Jr., his father's pride, finally softened the heart of the man who for six years has defied anyone and everyone, law or no law. The hardships of war were soon softened by Father Pilon who in all kindliness and truth complimented Deitz upon his bravery in surrendering.

Deitz received his wound as he placed his hand to the cabin door about to enter after he had covered the retreat of his son from the hill early in the day. Leslie had just ran into the barn—had ran a full 500 yards through a perfect hail of bullets from every direction.

There was an affectionate reunion when John and Leslie Deitz were brought into the county jail at Hayward where Clarence Dietz has been confined since the shooting of the children several days ago by the sheriff's posse.

Since he took his frugal breakfast in his cabin with his family, after the regular morning devotions, John Deitz had not been allowed a mouthful of food.

According to Mrs. Deitz, the treatment of the prisoners on the way to the jail was most inconsiderate and even cruel. They were roughly handled by the sheriff and his men, despite the fact that Mrs. Deitz is in a delicate condition, expecting soon to become a mother.

Deitz Denies Killing Harp.

John Deitz, in an interview here, soon after his arrival declared that he did not fire the shot which caused the death of Deputy Harp. He says that Harp was either deliberately shot by some of the guards, or that he got into the crossfire and was killed by one of his companions.

John Deitz must face a charge of "assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Other members of the family are charged with "complicity in an assault with intent to kill."

Story of John Deitz Fight.

For eight years John Dietz had successfully defied the processes and warrants of county, state and federal courts; fought off sheriff's posses with his rifle, punctured an occasional deputy who came too close, and maintained his right to his isolated homestead in the wild forest along the Thornapple river.

Dietz' warfare with official society began eight years ago. He had lived with his family for years on the spot they call home. By hard work he had won his living from the soil. He claimed ownership of the clearing—and of Cameron dam, on the Thornapple river, over which a lumber syndicate—the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co.—drives its logs. Deitz demanded a toll of 10 cents a thousand feet for all logs shunted over the dam, and also a little claim for back wages unhonored by the lumber syndicate.

So Deitz did exactly what syndicates usually do when they have the upper hand—he sat tight on his land, kept his fingers crossed and his rifle primed. They sent deputies with civil processes to serve. He warned them away. Others came and he demonstrated that trespassers on his land, after fair warning, would be shot. He didn't hanker for visitors and uninvited deputies would be treated as marauders.

Nobody got near enough to serve the papers. Warrants for arrest on contempt of court likewise went unserved. Sheriffs and deputies tried to surprise Deitz. A few were carried off wounded, or crawled away. His home is a natural fortress, almost entirely isolated by a curve in the river, approached by a winding wagon track through dense woods, every inch of it known to Deitz and his family, but to few others.

Deitz, his two older sons and his two daughters were expert rifle shots. So was Mrs. Deitz, a former school teacher. Deitz was well educated, well read, knew his rights and backed them up with a rifle. He also knew what usually happens in court to a poor man opposed by a rich syndicate. So he preferred his natural stronghold to any legal safeguards the law throws around a poor man. He stood on his policy of refusing to serve papers, and his right to shoot any trespassers on his land.

Few people cared to oppose him. He went regularly to the town every week for supplies. The warrants, issued years ago, remained unserved. They were pulled out of dusty pigeonholes when Dietz shot Horel.

Ely Descends After 11 Miles.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Eugene Ely, lone entrant in the Chicago-New York aeroplane flight, started on the record-breaking test Sunday afternoon, but remained in the air only twelve minutes. At that he traveled eleven miles and landed. The young aviator descended because of a clogged carburetor. Repairing this was a matter of a few moments, but in the rapidly gathering dusk in trying to start again Ely ran the machine onto a rock and the front running wheel was torn away.

Mr. Debs Indorses Mr. Taft.

Fargo, Oct. 10.—Eugene V. Debs is strong for the renomination and reelection of President Taft. "He has made a safe and sensible president and deserves well at the hands of the voters of the United States," said Mr. Debs.

M. Lagercrantz's Successor Named.

Stockholm, Oct. 10.—Count Ehrensvard, Swedish minister to Belgium, was appointed minister at Washington in succession to M. Lagercrantz resigned.

Improvement in the Dairy Herd lies in better breeding, in better housing and in better feed in greater quantities. Corn fodder, clover and roots must succeed slough hay in winter, and old, weedy pastures must be broken up and sown to clover, blue grass and timothy for summer feeding. Systematic care, and feeding with only the substances which may be grown on every farm in Minnesota, is the practice at University Farm, St. Anthony Park, and is what gives the results reported from the Experiment station.

Weighing and Testing Milk.—This is the only sure way to determine the difference in value between the good and inferior cow. Weighing and testing daily is only a business proposition. It is the only safe way of determining what price to ask for a cow in selling her, or of what to pay for her when buying. No intelligent farmer will sell a cow for thirty dollars that will make him a net profit of $40 or $50 a year. Neither will he keep a cow that doesn't pay him a profit if he knows it.

GARDENS AT SCHOOL

English Children Taught to Raise Flowers and Vegetables.

Work Found Useful in Forming Good Habits and in Character Building—Happy Results Attained and Pupils Successful.

London.—Gardening is now included as a codal subject for English school children. There are two courses in the year, each consisting of at least twenty hours' practical work.

"The boys are quite keen about it," said the head teacher of Sutton schools to a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. "Each of the 14 lads who form the class for gardening has his own little plot of ground for which he is responsible and at which he works under my supervision. The produce is his, and great is the joy of taking home the first spring radishes of his own growing, a fine head of lettuce, or a basketful of marrowfat peas.

"As to the educational benefit, gardening teaches the boys to do the right thing at the right time and induces habits of method and observation. It also creates a love of outdoor life—a splendid counter-attraction in later years to the public house and music hall."

Two hours and a half a week is all the time that can be given to gardening, but so keen are the children that they put in a good many spare minutes on their own account. Even the infants, under the kindly care of the schoolmaster's wife, have their own special allotment, which they zealously rake and weed and generally look after. The mysteries of digging, trenching, potting, grafting, etc.—in fact, a good, all-round training in the growing of vegetables, herbs, fruits and flowers—is imparted with most happy results.

The cultivation of peas, lettuces and tomatoes proves perhaps more attractive on the whole than that of roses and carnations, but flowers are by no means neglected. A fine chrysanthemum avenue in the Sutton school garden, the splendid bloom of which gained a gold medal for their owner, has proved very stimulating to youthful competitors.

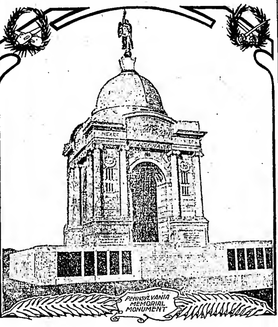
French gardening has also recently been introduced into many reformatory schools. In one instance a group of smart uniformed boys, most of them town boys convicted of theft, were to be seen engaged in bunching rhubarb. Their evident pleasure in their work was greatly increased by a precise knowledge of its commercial value. The patch was rather less than an acre, and it produced £85 ($425) worth of produce last year.

In round figures the 100 boys belonging to this particular reformatory have 100 acres of land to live on and to work. Parts are thick with plum and other fruit trees; gooseberries and small fruit underneath, and earlier in the year bulbs or other flowers made gay lines between the gooseberries.

In these schools the work on the land is considered to be the prime agent in restoring character and in reviving wholesome interest. In one case the land supports the establishment without any external aid beyond the per capita grant. The farm and garden pay as well as educate, and educate the better for paying.

After leaving school the boys keep in close touch with their old masters; they are visited, they write letters; they come back to visit the school. The system is so thorough that a report of 90 per cent. of successes has been kept. Ninety of every hundred get and keep good employment.

GETTYSBURG HEROES HONORED



The state of Pennsylvania has just dedicated on the battlefield of Gettysburg a magnificent memorial to the Pennsylvanians who lost their lives in that mighty struggle. The monument is in the form of a massive arch surmounted by a figure of victory and decorated with bas-reliefs and with the names of the generals from the Keystone state.

YANKEES TOO CLOSE

Americans Are Not Good Spenders, Says Old Guide.

Likes Russians Best Because They Enjoy Fine Time and Are Not as Inquisitive as Trans-Atlantic Visitors.

Stockholm.—This city is visited by hundreds of tourists and many conventions are held here. Necessarily, therefore, it has not a few professional guides. The patriarch of the tribe submitted himself to an interview the other day, and it may interest Americans to learn what he has to say about them and other foreigners. He is nearly seventy years of age and has been a guide for many years. Of all the globe-trotters whom it falls to his lot to pilot about Stockholm and Sweden the Russians, he says, give the most satisfaction and pleasure. Americans he considers too stingy and too exacting.

"Russians are in the highest degree the most delighted and most thankful," was the tribute of the veteran guide. "They treat me as an old friend of the family, as an uncle or a relative. They want good living and a good time. After them come the Austrians and even the Germans are a social lot, but the Americans and English cannot be put in the same category. They are the least agreeable. The Americans are frightfully pretentious and have the habit of asking questions about everything. Nothing escapes their notice. They seem to delight in propounding interrogations that cannot be answered without writing a book. If, for example, they happen to come across the portrait of some well-known personage and the artist did not sign it, they will nevertheless want me to discover who was the artist. I say he is unknown and then comes the final question, 'When did he die?' The women have many more wants to be satisfied and seem astonished that every police officer and cabman cannot reply in English.

"But the American children are the worst. The disrespect they show their parents is scandalous. Obedience is unknown. If an American youngster has the idea that he will rest more comfortably by putting his feet, with their dusty shoes, on the lap of his mother, he does it. If the affectionate mother remonstrates and puts down the offending extremities up they come again. The poor mother's expostulations are of no avail and to obtain peace she gives the youngster his way.

The Americans are not great spenders and are careful of their quarters and dimes. In this respect they are surpassed only by the English.

"I must say the English are the most fussy creatures I have met. They have seen so much that they seem indifferent. They begin by telling me that they do not care for museums, castles or other so-called curiosities, as they can see much better ones at home; they wish to see things of interest. What can I show them?"

Cats Sold for Rabbits.

London.—In his report issued recently the medical officer of Finsbury describes the discovery of a cat in a consignment of Ostend rabbits.

"The cat, a fat, sleek, well matured animal, weighing about four pounds, had been decapitated, its tail removed, and its carcass had been dexterously attached to the emaciated head of a rabbit, sewn on by ordinary gray thread.

"On a previous occasion three carcasses of cat-rabbit had been confiscated in like manner." The doctor also describes a bottle of lemon squash which contained a large portion of the backbone of a fish.

Lock of Napoleon's Hair.

Atlanta, Ga.—A priceless art and curio collection was left by Julius L. Brown, eldest son of Georgia's war governor, who died the other day. Among notable things in the collection is a lock of Napoleon's hair, with a certificate from the emperor's physician attesting its genuineness. Keys of Andersonville prison, the first ballot cast for Jefferson Davis and Alexander Stephens as president and vice-president of the southern confederacy; a splinter off the coffin which Maximilian was placed in after execution, and original manuscript of "Lalla Rookh," are among the curios he had collected.

Old Rome is Disappearing

Celebrated Palaces Being Torn Down to Give Clearer View of Victor Emmanuel Monument.

Rome.—Many interesting landmarks in Rome are slowly coming down in order to make the view of the imposing monument to Victor Emmanuel less obstructed. It has become necessary, in order that Romans may see the memorial to the "Re Galantuomo" down the mile-long Corso to the Piazza del Popolo, that opens on the ancient Via Flaminia, to pull down some of the finest palaces.

Among the latest of these edifices that have been demolished are the Torlonia palace and the Nepoti, which were situated in the space between the capitol and the Corso—which are now dominated by the imposing monument, which, when completed, will have cost about $10,000,000—one of the narrowest streets of Rome. In the old carnival days curtains were stretched across from house to house here for the Ripreso del Barberi—to stop the wild career of the Barbary steeds that raced riderless wildly down the Corso and caused so many accidents that the custom was abolished in 1883.

The beautiful Palazzetto di Venezia, built by Pope Paul II., from which he often watched the carnival games, is also being taken down for the sake of the Victor Emmanuel monument. It is to be re-erected, however, in the neighboring Piazza di San Marco. On the suggestion of Sig. Ricci, minister of fine arts, the interior colonnade will probably be left standing. It will make a picturesque link between the mediaeval beauty of the great Palazzo di Venezia, which the Hapsburg government inherited from the republic of Venice in 1797, and which is now the seat of the Austrian embassy to the Vatican, and the classic splendor of Sacconi's noble memorial. The monument, it may be recalled, was begun 25 years ago.

HAWKS SAVE ALFALFA CROP

Colorado Birds Pass Up Chickens for Grasshoppers and Are Protected by Farmers.

Loveland, Colo.—Chicken hawks, once the bane of the farmers' life, are now the best-protected birds in this part of Colorado, the ranchmen of this district guarding them against slaughter with a vigilance that has put state game wardens to shame.

The unusual alliance is due to a pest of grasshoppers which has threatened the alfalfa crops with ruin. The hawks, nearly a thousand of which have collected in this neighborhood, have proved to be the most successful means of destroying the grasshoppers, which they evidently regard as a delicacies in the matter of food, leaving chickens unmolested.

CURIOUS TWO-HEADED SNAKE

Reptile Bites Both Coming and Going—Of Garter Variety and Over Two Feet Long.

Towanda, Pa.—H. C. Spencer of Mount Lake, four miles from Towanda, brought to the county seat a snake with two heads. The reptile was of the garter variety, was beautifully striped and 2½ feet long.

Mr. Spencer found the snake in a shock of oats, and picked it up, intending to snap its head off. While getting a strangle hold on the head, the other head took hold of Mr. Spencer's thumb, and then for the first time did he realize that the reptile had two mouths. The extra head is near the regular one, and the second neck is about two inches long. The extra head appears blind, but rudimentary eyes can be seen with with the aid of a magnifying glass. It is one of the most peculiar appearing reptiles ever killed or captured in this land of snakes.

Bears Attack Sheep Herds

Ferocious Animals Driven in by Forest Fires Doing Much Damage to Flocks in Oregon.

Crescent, Ore.—According to reports received here, bears are attacking sheep in the reserves near here and there will be a heavy loss. The creatures are driven from their usual feeding grounds in the hills by the forest fires. Sheepmen who make Crescent an outfitting point report that the animals are bolder than at any time within the past ten years and apparently more numerous. A herder who was here recently stated that within the past three weeks more than 200 head out of a band of 3,000 had been killed by the bears, a loss of 10 per cent.

What is especially discouraging to the sheepmen is their inability to kill the destructive animals. In the dark woods where the sheep are bedded down for the night the bears sally out of the underbrush and by swift attack work havoc with the band and escape before the herders are able to train their rifles upon the marauders. The herders, rolled in blankets and armed with rifles, guard the band at night.

A change of feeding ground for the sheep apparently makes no difference, for the bears follow after and are on the job as soon as darkness falls. As a result, it is expected that the sheepmen will remove their charges from the forest reserves to the winter range much earlier this year than last.

Flood-Closed Mill to Open.

Pittsburg, Pa.—One of the steel industries wiped out by the Johnstown flood of 1889 is to be resumed at once. The intelligence came about through the placing of contracts for the construction of new mills. The Cambria iron works will resume the manufacture of wire, which it once shipped far and wide over the country.

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contesting for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 65,000,000. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles,—to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December.

Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco. Therefore, we urge our readers to write to the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, requesting them to support New Orleans in the contest.

IT'S A PIPE DREAM

Talk of Deal Between Clapp and Lind.—The Campaign Book.

St. Paul, Oct. 18—Since John Lind delivered his effective speech at Albert Lea in support of the candidacy of James A. Gray, the Republican state central committee has seen the necessity of doing something to counteract the effect of his arraignment of the stand pat organization. For want of a better reply their publicity agent professes to have discovered the evidences of a deep-laid plot to which John Lind and Senator Clapp are fell conspirators and of which Senator Nelson is to be the innocent and unsuspecting victim.

Two Bold Conspirators.

It is pointed out, in the first place, that, while Mr Lind openly endorsed the candidacy of Senator Clapp for the senate and approved the attitude of insurgency he had assumed, he failed to recognize the value of Senator Nelson's recent public service or to see in him the Progressive Republican his friends claim his record to show him to be. From this they induce the evidence of designs upon the senior senator's seat. The state senate, they say which is to be elected in November will the same senate which will be called upon to elect a United States senator two year's hence when Senator Nelson's term shall have expired. Senator Clapp is represented as willing to betray him and reciprocate later Mr. Lind's effective support in this campaign by giving Mr. Lind his support at that time.

A Pipe Dream.

Of course this is all a pipe dream, but it is hoped that it will prove a good-enough-Nelson until after election. To any one familiar with Mr. Lind's recent course, the idea that he is still seeking political preferment seems ridiculous. If he really wanted to go to the U. S. senate the easiest way to it was through the governor's chair which there was never any doubt of his being able to reach if he had said the word. There was at this time no occasion for him referring to Senator Nelson who has the reputation of always being able to look out for his own interests. Senator Nelson is not making his campaign this year. Senator Clapp is. Mr. Lind was not making new issues. He was meeting those which had arisen. In doing so he merely, with his usual candor, gave credit where a credit was earned and here his endorsement would have needed effect.

The Republican Text.

For the first time in the Republican party's history in this state the campaign managers have concluded that it is necessary to issue a Republican campaign book with the purpose of counteracting the effect of another book issued by Lynn Haines in which the record of some Republican leaders now prominent was traced from official source and which did not place them in a very enviable light According to the former reliable authority the original progressive Republican of Minnesota was Sam Johnson, whose attack when public examiner on R. C. Dunn is still remembered. Everything that has happened since that—the record of the attorney general, the large additions to the public revenues from timber source, and much besides—traced to this source of sweetness and light. The fact that since then we have had a Democrat and not a Republican state administration, is naturally not enlarged upon. It is anticipated that R. C. Dunn will find this part of the work entertaining light reading for his long winter evenings.

Ed. Smith's Good Work.

Some ingenuity has been exercised by the able authors to find something which would shed light upon the public services of E. E. Smith, the committe's chairman. It is needless to say that there was great rejoicing when it was discovered. It was Senator Smith, it appears, who introduced the employers' liability bill in the senate. My recollection is that this bill which was prepared by Mr. McEwen whom Governor Johnson appointed to the head of the labor commission, and transmitted to the house in a special message by Governor Johnson. Senator Smith is certainly deserving of credit for his efforts to make effective this characteristic specimen of Democratic legislation.

For Boosting Gray.

The anti-saloon league has not officially endorsed Mr. Gray's candidacy, although it is known that the effective workers in that organization more or less openly favor it. The trouble appears to have been they did not want to embarrass Republican friends who are candidates for the legislature. It was allowed to leak out from Republican headquarters that if any action were taken unfriendly to Governor Eberhart, the state organization would retaliate by withdrawing support from Republican county option candidates. It would be interesting to know how many of these candidates are sharing in the material aid Senator Smith has been able to induce the brewers' organization to contribute to his campaign.

Another Cause of Trouble.

If the anti-saloon league is embarrased it is said that the liquor interests in the country are no less so. The Democrats in a number of districts, it is said, are beginning to resent saloon activity in opposition to the Democratic candidate for governor which is generally quite pronounced. Curiously enough appeals from these saloon keepers are reaching Republican headquarters in increasing numbers. They fear if they keep up the fight there will be a lot more towns go dry next spring. If they don't the county option candidates are likely to win. They appear to be between the devil and the deep sea. One cannot but sympathise with them in their distress.

The Political Effect of the Forest Fires

One hears the most diverse reports as to how the campaign is going on. As there is no ill without its accompanying blessings, at Republican headquarters there is much gratification that the disastrous fires in Minnesota should have given Governor Eberhart opportunity to take advantage of it to place himself in a favorable light. Republican campaign orators make quite effective mention of the matter by dwelling upon the way the governor has sacrificed his political interests to promptly extend succor to the homeless and distressed, and it need not be denied that in this matter he has followed the plain path of duty.

Further Relief Measures.

While temporary relief has been promptly extended to the sufferers from the dreadful catastrophy which befell them, it is feared in some quarters that voluntary contributions will not be sufficient to meet all needs of the sufferers. There is talk of raising loan of $100,000 as suggested by R. C. Dunn to be met later by a legislative appropriation. The plan is practical and meets with general favor. It has, it will be remembered, been successfully resorted to when the need was less obvious to secure funds to have the state properly represented at one or two of the worlds fair. At all events whatever plans ultimately there can be no doubt that public sentiment will fully approve any measures taken to tide the settlers over the winter and give them a start again in the spring.

Clearing the Country

Geo. Welsh, the commissioner of immigration, is of the opinion that much good may ultimately come out of the disaster. There are large areas of rich agricultural land in the burnt-over district. It can now be more readily reached and the fire has saved prospective settlers labor which otherwise they would have to perform. Moreover it has effectively cleared the country and removed the menace of future disasters of a similar character. It has, too, been a revelation even to the people in our own state of the rapidity with which the northern country is being taken up. The Hinckly fire was followed by a rapid settling up of the country thereabouts. It is thought the experience will be repeated in the vicinity of Beaudette.

Trust Busting

The trust busters have been at work during the past week in St. Paul. The merger of the Union and Southern Pacific railroads was the object of attack with Frank Kellogg and Cordy Severance in the spotlight as the principal performers. It is generally believed that they will be successful (on paper) in knocking this merger into smithereens. A few years ago some equally distinguished patriots brought about, also on paper, the dissolution of the Northern Securities company and elected a Republican governor on the strength of it. Not that it affected the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific any. They are still doing business under a gentleman's agreement in the old way, and using jointly the lines of both in this state thus being able to abandon one set of stations. This, too, without asking the consent of the state railroad and warehouse commission popularly supposed to have something to say when station doors are locked against the public. But then everybody realizes that the Minnesota state railroad and warehouse commission is a good deal of a joke except its cost to the state which is no joke. It was never known yet to prevent the railroads from doing anything they wanted to do or to compel them to do anything they didn't want to do. In view of our experience with Judge Mills and his accommodating associates perhaps federal control might not after all be so bad a thing. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the record made by the railroad and warehouse commission is one of the things which the Republicans Text book bases Republican claims to public support. O Temporo! O Mores!

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anaemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons became inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitos. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red carpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling. S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the largest size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificiently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Pipe Gives Cadet Typhoid.

Midshipman Smith, who was stricken with typhoid fever on the Indiana at Plymouth, England, contracted the disease, it is said, from smoking a briar used nearly a year ago by his roommate at Annapolis who had a bad case of typhoid. This theory is taken as proof that concentrated nicotine cannot destroy a typhoid germ. The medical department of the navy will examine into the theory with the result that midshipmen of the future may confine themselves to their own pipes.

There Are Reasons

Why so many people have ready-at-hand a package of

Post Toasties

The DISTINCTIVE FLAVOUR delights the palate.

The quick, easy serving right from the package—requiring only the addition of cream or good milk is an important consideration when breakfast must be ready "on time."

The sweet, crisp food is universally liked by children, and is a great help to Mothers who must give to the youngsters something wholesome that they relish.

The economical feature appeals to everyone—particularly those who wish to keep living expenses within a limit.

Post Toasties are especially pleasing served with fresh sliced peaches.

WOOLLY APHIS INJURES VALUABLE APPLE TREES

Damage Is Particularly Serious in Case of Nursery Stock and Young Plants—Aerial Form Easily Controlled.

(By EDITH M. PATCH and O. A. JOHANNSEN, Maine Agricultural Experiment Station.)

Throughout the summer on the lower portion of the trunk and particularly on the water sprouts of the apple may often be seen small bluish-white flocculent or cottony patches, which indicate the presence of colonies of one of the worst enemies of the apple, viz., the insect known as woolly aphis (fig. 34).

It exists in two forms, the one just referred to, above ground on the trunk or water shoots, and another inhabiting the roots. On the roots its attacks induce enlargements or galls or swellings, and in the cracks of these galls and swellings the root form occurs in clustered masses.

The damage is particularly serious in the case of nursery stock and young trees and is less often important after the tree has once become well established and of some size. Where this insect is abundant on the roots of a young tree to the depth of a foot or so become clubbed and knotted by the growth of hard fibrous enlargements (fig. 35) with the results in a year or two of the dying of the rootlets and their ultimate decomposition with attendant disappearance of the galls and also of the lice, so that after this sage is reached the cause of the injury is often obscure. On the trunk the presence of the lice sometimes results in the roughening of the bark or a granulated condition which is particularly noticeable about the collar and at the forks of branches or on the fresh growth around the scars caused by pruning, which latter is a favorite location. On the water shoots, they collect particularly in the axils of the leaves, often eventually causing them to fall, and on the tender greener side of the stems. The damage above ground, though commonly insignificant, is useful as an indication of the probable existence of the lice on the roots. A badly attacked tree assumes a sickly appearance and does not make satisfactory growth and the leaves become dull and yellowish, and even if not killed outright it is so weakened that it becomes especially subject to the attacks of borers and other insect enemies.

The common forms both on the roots and above ground are wingless lice, not exceeding one-tenth of an inch in length, and of a reddish-brown color, and abundantly covered, especially in the aerial form, with a flocculent waxy excretion.

In October or November, among the wingless ones, numbers of winged individuals appear, which are also all females, and are the parents of a true sexed generation of minute, "winter egg." This egg is attached within a crevice of the bark.

The winged females appear somewhat abundantly in autumn, and are one of the means of the dispersal of the insect.

The aerial form can be readily exterminated by the use of any of the washes recommended for plant lice, such as kerosene emulsion, tobacco decoction, a strong soap wash, etc., the only care necessary being to see that the wash is put on with sufficient force and thoroughness to penetrate the covering and protecting cottony excretion. If the wash be applied warm its penetration will be considerably increased.

The much more important root form, however, is more difficult to reach and exterminate. The common recommendations are of applications of strong soap or tobacco washes to the soil about the crown, or soot, ashes, or tobacco dust buried about the roots; also similarly employed are lime and gas-lime."

Badly infected nursery stock should be destroyed, since it would be worth little even with the aphids removed.

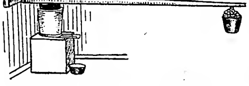
A HOME-MADE CHEESE PRESS



A cheese press is a handy implement on any farm. One can be made at small cost and the illustration gives a good idea of the method of making such an article at home.

Don't Neglect Sheep.

Because sheep can nip the short grass and subsist on almost anything that is herbage, from the coarse, sour grasses that grow on low grounds to the tough, dried leaves of the mullen, and 500 or more kinds of weeds, and relish the fresh leaves of the brush that grows in the waste places, they should not be made subjects of neglect, and little thought given to furnishing them a liberal supply of palatable cut feeds that will keep up a constant growth and maintain them in a reasonably good condition.

Argentina's Blooded Stock.

That the number of blooded animals in Argentina is increasing is shown by the new herdbook forwarded from Buenos Aires. On February 28, 1910, there were registered 29,077 bulls (22,117 being Shorthorn), 34,191 cows (25,146) Shorthorn), and 22,058 sheep (20,178 Lincoln). Most of the 12,037 blooded horses are Clydesdale, Percheron, and sire.

Value of Dairy Cow.

The dairy cow co-operates with every other part of the equipment on the mixed farm. She consumes many feeds that can be grown to advantage in cleaning the land of weeds or in restoring its condition by the increase of grass or clover roots; she furnishes skim milk for pigs, poultry and young live stock of other sorts; she produces a product which is high in price but which robs the land of practically no fertility; she assists in the problem of manuring the soil.

Good Work for Hen.

It is the consensus of opinion among the best and most successful poultry breeders that an average of twelve dozen eggs per hen for a flock is a smashing good record; that when it goes above this figure, the results are exceptional, and apply only to individual specimens and not to a flock as a whole.

Co-Operative Creameries.

The Massachusetts milk war has made many dairymen feel that there is more profit and comfort in the co-operative creamery than it has been usually given credit for.

IN THE MASTER'S STEPS

By REV. JOHN H. KERR
Pastor Arlington Presbyterian Church
New York

Text: For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow his steps.—Peter II., 21.

When the apostle Paul wrote those words he referred specifically to the example of our Lord under suffering. Furthermore, it is worthy to note that his words were primarily addressed to those who were slaves.

It is not at all my purpose to use only this one side of the Master's example. I want rather to gather together from a wider range than this one text some of the leading characteristics of the example set us by our Lord. His is an ideal character of the ages, and we cannot too often bring before our minds its salient features.

The word "example" here is the translation of a word which is used only in this place in the New Testament. It means a "writing copy," such as might be found in a child's exercise book and designated as an aid in learning how to write correctly. The word "follow" is emphatic and implies close and diligent following. If we catch the full meaning of the text, it is necessary to bear in mind these facts with reference to the two most important words in it.

"In the Master's steps." He has left us an example that we should follow his steps. The Master himself on several occasions cited his own acts as the only ones to be imitated by his followers. Thus he said concerning an act he had just performed: "I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." Or, again: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you." So the apostle Paul cites our Lord's example, saying: "Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." And in another place we read: "Let each one of us please his neighbor for that which is good, unto edifying. For Christ also pleased not himself." The apostle's aim in life was to reproduce as far as he could the life of his Lord. "For to me to live is Christ."

One of the reasons why "it behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren" was that he might show us the possibilities of which our natures are capable. Men needed to see how an ideal person acts. In addition to that which our Redeemer must do to make atonement for our sins, he must also set us an example in his own life, so that we might have a model after which we should attempt to conform our lives.

Of course there were many things about our Lord's life that we could not imitate, but there are other aspects of it which we must imitate, if we are to be able successfully to lay claim to his discipleship. We must walk in the Master's steps.

In obeying the Father's will. The psalmist has said: "Lo, I am come; in the roll of the book it is written of me; I delight to do thy will, O my God." The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews applies those words to Jesus, whilst he himself said: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to accomplish his will." Later in his ministry in the presence of a great multitude, Jesus affirmed: "I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." And in his last prayer with his disciples he said: "I glorified thee on the earth, having accomplished the work which thou hast given me to do." "Though he was a Son, yet learned his obedience by the things which he suffered.

Obedience is about the first thing the follower of Christ has to learn. Obedience is the Master's test. "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." No amount of protestation that we are his followers will take the place of obedience.

We should follow in the Master's steps in resisting temptation. Our Lord hath been in all points tempted like we are, yet without sin." Nor were the temptations of our Lord matters of little moment. He "suffered being tempted." The conflict with Satan at the beginning of our Lord's ministry was a tremendous reality. Temptation once came to him in the words of Peter, so that Jesus said to him: "Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art a stumbling block unto me." So again and again our Lord was tempted. It is to be wondered at that he should say so solemnly to his disciples, just as he was about to leave them: "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." We follow in the Master's steps when we resist temptation. What an encouragement it is to be assured that "the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation."

In prayer is another way to follow in his steps. Our Lord repeatedly prayer. And this was not merely for its effect on his disciples. The Master prayed because he needed thus to hold communion with the Father. Remember the transfiguration scene on Mount Herman, when, as he prayed, his countenance was changed, and his whole person became radiant with glory. Our Lord said: "Watch and pray." If he needed to pray, much more do we.

If we follow in his steps, we will be regular attendants on divine worship. The record tells us that it was his custom to go to the synagogue on the Sabbath day. That simply means that he was himself an habitual attendant on divine worship.

Unfulfilled Prophecy.

Life holds no disappointments like the breaking of plans. At best the most fruitful life and the most prosperous career represents an unfulfilled prophecy. No matter what your victories in retrospect, you have achieved only one thing, where you planned a thousand.—Rev. N. D. Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

The Cost of Crime.

The cost of crime to the United States is enough, if our people were righteous for two years, to pay the whole national debt.—Rev. John Flagg, Presbyterian, New York city.

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

"I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address. Mrs. Altia Etson, 93 Inn Road, Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16, 1909."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.

Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."

Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.

"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."

Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.

"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."

Yours truly
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.

Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910

"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."

A Committee of the ladies of the city gathered a large quantity of supplies and secured liberal cash contributions to aid the fire suffrers. The Legislature

General Session 1909.

St. Paul, Minn., May 1, 1910.

Hon. Julius A. Schmahl, Secretary of State—

Sir: As required by Section 25 of the Revised Laws as amended, I have the honor to furnish you herewith a statement of the purposes and effects of the respective amendments proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota by the Legislature of 1909 and which are to be submitted to the electors in said state at the general election in 1910.

FIRST PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The first proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 501 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to authorize the payment by the State from the State Road and Bridge Fund of one-half of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein, and is an amendment of Section 16 of Article 9 of the Constitution, which now reads as follows:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund.' Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing in its discretion for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year, and provided further, that in no case shall more than one-third (⅓) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund," and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund, to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund.' Said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that in no case shall more than one-half (½) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund."

EFFECT. The present Constitution authorizes the payment by the State, out of such fund so created of ONE-THIRD (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein. If this amendment is adopted the State could then pay ONE-HALF (½) of the cost of constructing any such road or bridge, and the effect of the amendment is thus to increase the amount which the State may lawfully pay toward such purpose.

SECOND PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The second proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 507 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to repeal the provisions of Section 11 of Article IX of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 11. There shall be published by the treasurer, in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, during the first week in January of each year, and in the next volume of the acts of the legislature, detailed statements of all moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, for what purposes and to whom paid, and by what law authorized; and also of all moneys received, and by what authority and from whom."

EFFECT. The Constitution requires the treasurer to publish yearly a detailed statement of the moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, giving the names of the persons to whom paid and the purposes for which it was expended. It also requires a like statement of the names of the persons, and the sources, as to money received, and in both cases a statement of the law under which payments were made, or money paid into the treasury. The effect of this Amendment, if the same be adopted, will be to repeal the section of the Constitution mentioned and insofar relieve the treasurer from such publication. This change in the Constitution, however, would not prevent the legislature from hereafter directing by law that such, or a different publication, of the same or other information should be made by the Treasurer.

THIRD PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The third proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 508 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 17, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment, by the State of Minnesota, of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, including the necessary expenses of giving effect to this act, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the State to become a trustee in the collection and disbursement of a fund for the payment of damages to growing crops by hail or wind, or either. This fund is to be created and maintained by a specific tax imposed by the legislature upon the lands of such persons, ONLY, as shall voluntarily list the same with their respective county auditors for that purpose. Under it there could be no tax for such purpose imposed on the lands of any owner who does not consent thereto. The legislature is also authorized to include in such fund the necessary expenses of administration of the law. The adoption of the amendment will authorize the legislature to direct that the taxing machinery of the state be used to levy and collect the tax necessary to raise such fund and to provide for the disbursement of same by the officers of the State; but any payments to be made by the State, by reason of damage by hail or wind will have to be made from such fund and from no other. In the settlement of any such damages the State would assume no liability beyond the amount of such fund, and could not further be rendered liable. A similar amendment was offered at the general election of 1908, but not adopted. The amendment then offered read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment by the State of Minnesota of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

The main difference between the amendment now offered, and the one last quoted, being that the legislature is now to be authorized, in addition to providing a fund for the purpose of paying damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, to further provide an additional tax upon the lands of the persons so listing the same, to meet the necessary expenses incurred in the administration of the law and thus relieve the State therefrom. This last provision was not included in the amendment offered in 1908.

FOURTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fourth proposed Amendment is contained in Chapter 509, General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to repeal Section 23 of Article IV of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and every tenth year thereafter. At their first session after each enumeration so made, and also at their first session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section second of this article."

and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year 1915, and every ten (10) years thereafter. At any session after any enumeration of the inhabitants of this state made pursuant to law and also at any session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or any of the same, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section 2 of this article."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment will be to direct the legislature to provide for a census of the inhabitants of the State in the year 1915, and every tenth year thereafter, and will also authorize the legislature to change the boundaries of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or of any one of such districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts, at any session after any State or Federal census. If adopted, the legislature might therefore, if it deems best, change at any session the boundaries of such districts and apportion anew the senators and representatives and thus redistrict the State every two years.

FIFTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fifth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 510, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 18, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 18. To secure a sustained yield of timber for the use of the people of this state, the proper officials shall annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property within this state, the proceeds of which shall be used for the purchase of land better adapted for forestry purposes than for agriculture for the state at not over $3.00 per acre, and for the production and maintenance thereon of forest according to forestry principles.

"Unexpended balances shall not lapse but constitute a fund for forestry purposes.

"The timber produced thereon shall be sold at a fair valuation and the revenue therefrom or from other source shall be paid into the state treasury, except that one-quarter of the net revenue shall be paid to the town, or if unorganized, to the county, in which the land is situated, in aid of public schools and roads.

"Should any tract acquired be found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, it may be sold and the proceeds used for acquiring or developing forestry land.

"Until otherwise directed by the legislature, which may supplement these provisions with necessary enactments, the state forestry board shall draw and disburse the money hereby provided and purchase, manage and control the lands and forests.

"No money shall be paid for any tract until the attorney general shall certify to the validity of the title.

"It shall be competent for two successive regular legislatures, by a two-thirds vote of each house, to repeal any of these provisions."

EFFECT. This proposed amendment, and the proposed amendment hereafter mentioned should be read together. They constitute the foundation for a plan of State reforestration. As the constitution stands today, while the legislature might pass laws providing funds to be used for the purchase of lands, and the cultivation of the same for reforestration purposes, yet it is not directed to do so. The effect then of this amendment is to COMPEL the taxing officers of the state to annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property in the state, to be used as the legislature shall direct, for the purchase for the state of land adapted to forestry purposes, but at a price not to exceed $3 per acre. All unexpired balances in the fund at the end of each fiscal year shall not lapse, but shall be carried over into the fund thus raised for the succeeding year and shall be an addition thereto. It also directs the sale, at a fair valuation, of the timber produced on such land so purchased, the payment of three-fourths of the money received therefrom into the state treasury, and the payment of the remaining one-fourth to the town, if organized, or otherwise to the county in which the land is situated, and that the same shall there be credited to the public school funds. If after the land is purchased it is found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, authority is contained in this amendment to sell it, but the proceeds must be used for acquiring or developing forestry land. Until the legislature provides otherwise, all purchases shall be under the direction of the State Forestry Board. The title to all lands purchased must be approved by the Attorney General before purchase is made. It is further provided that two successive regular legislatures shall have power by a two-thirds vote of each house to repeal any of the foregoing provisions. That is to say, if after a trial, such plan for any reason is found to be impracticable or undesirable, and it so appears to two successive legislatures, any or all of the foregoing provisions of the amendment may be repealed. The legislature does not now possess such power and the same is a distinct change in the methods heretofore in vogue in Minnesota, in the making and revising of the Constitution. Heretofore an amendment might only be made to the Constitution or a provision of that instrument eliminated by direct vote of the electors. Under this amendment, if it be adopted, that power is not taken away and also exists. But a new power, that of repeal by the legislature, as to this amendment, is created. Such power, however, would extend to no other provision of the Constitution and affords an easy method of change in case of necessity or advisability.

SIXTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The sixth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 511, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution to be known as Section 17a, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17a. Laws may be enacted exempting lands from taxation for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon."

EFFECT. The effect of this amendment is to authorize the legislature to enact laws exempting from taxation lands of private persons to be used in the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon, and thus supplement where the lands of such private persons are devoted to reforestration, the purposes contemplated as to public lands by the fifth proposed amendment. The authority so granted is part of a general plan for the reforestration of land within the state. If the legislature does not pass such laws, such lands will not be exempt and the power to repeal such a law, when enacted, remains with the legislature. Power to pass a law to exempt such lands from taxation the legislature does not now possess, and it is, therefore, an additional grant of power.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE T. SIMPSON,
Attorney General.

St. Paul, May 1, 1910.

Mr. Julius A. Schmahl,
Secretary of State.

Dear Sir:—Referring to proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 2 would say: As state expert printer I have given the publications involved in this proposed amendment special thought, and am of opinion both these publications are entirely superfluous. The extensive annual publication "in a daily newspaper published at the capital city" attracts absolutely no attention. The annual report of the state treasurer is published in book form, and to an extent that makes it easy for every person specially concerned to secure a copy. To conform strictly with the law as it is at present, means the expenditure, under reasonably favorable printing contracts, of approximately $8,000, a sum which can be used to excellent advantage under conditions which ordinarily suggest the greatest care and economy upon the part of those under whose direction the printing fund is expended.

Yours respectfully,
J. T. MANNIX,
State Expert Printer.

The Shoe Which Stands the Test

If you have a business deal with a man, you do not rely on his appearance or his manner alone. Thieves often look as well and talk as fair as trustworthy men. What you need to know is his reputation. If that is good, either from your experience with him or from what others tell you, you feel safe.

It is even more so with shoes. A poor shoe does not disclose its weakness at a glance. It may be made of paper but look better than if made of leather. You cannot tell until you have worn it. And then it is too late.

The only safe course is to buy a shoe with a reputation. Our shoes have been made in St. Paul since 1855—for more than half a century. Their name stands for honesty and square dealings with merchants and wearers.

Hunting a Live "Prehistoric Monster"

ENORMOUS FOOT OF "GAZEKA" RECONSTRUCTED FROM RECENT TRACKS

THE GIGANTIC SKULL OF THE DIPROTODON IN COMPARISON WITH A MAN'S SKULL

ONE of the most remarkable scientific discoveries ever made has just been reported by an expedition of British scientists.

In the wilds of New Guinea, the great unexplored island just north of Australia, these scientists have run across a marvelous race of pigmies whose average height is about four feet three inches, and a monster mammal, considerably larger than an elephant, which they have named the gazeka, and which has seemingly wrought great havoc amongst the pigmies.

Just what species the gazeka belongs to has not yet been determined, but in the description given by the explorers, Dr. W. D. Matthew, of the American Museum of Natural History, sees a strong resemblance to a prehistoric monster known as the diprodont, fossil remains of which have been found at different times throughout Australia.

The expedition was sent out by a committee appointed by the British Ornithologist's union to explore the great Snow mountains in Dutch New Guinea, and consists of several famous scientists, headed by Walter Goodfellow, the naturalist.

The expedition landed at the mouth of the Mimika river, on the south coast of Dutch New Guinea, in the early part of the year, and at once pushed into the interior. While ascending the Snow mountains, at an elevation of about 2,000 feet, the explorers came upon the tribe of pigmies, which are said to belong to that division of the human race known as the Negritos.

The importance of this discovery to anthropologists can hardly be overestimated, because it has always been a subject of controversy among the scientists as to whether Negritos existed in the Papuan islands.

The New Guinea savages, or Papuans, as they are called, are comparatively well known, but they are a very different kind of men to the pigmies just discovered. The typical Papuan is much taller than the average European, often attaining a height of seven feet, and is strongly built. The color of the skin varies from deep chocolate to nearly black. The nose is large and prominent, and a nose bar of shell, bone or wood is usually thrust through it. Both men and women go about entirely naked. Their houses are generally built on piles, and, as in Borneo, are often communal and of very large size, many families occupying one building, which may be as much as 700 feet long. Then there are remarkable houses built in trees and known as "dobbos," but these are used only to escape their enemies. Cannibalism prevails among the Papuans, although it is by no means universal.

The Negritos, on the other hand, which heretofore have been thought to occupy only the Andaman islands, in the Bay of Bengal, the northern portion of the Malay peninsula and the Philippine islands, are characteristically short, no adult standing over four feet six inches, while the women rarely exceed four feet. The average height is about four feet three inches.

The main features of this peculiar human type, apart from their diminutiveness, are the extraordinarily dark color of their skin, which approaches the color of a newly blackleaded stove, the extremely broad nose, the breadth of which is about equal to the height, and the frizzy hair, which grows in isolated peppercorn tufts all over the scalp. Their arms are unusually long, like those of the man-ape, and their mental qualities are sadly undeveloped, not one of them being able to express a higher numerical idea than three.

How these little people have been able to protect themselves against the many dangerous animals that infest the section, particularly the gigantic gazeka, which has just been discovered, is still a mystery, although they have shown remarkable ingenuity in the invention of weapons. One, for instance, is a variety of "spring gun" which might prove effective against almost any living enemy. It is made by setting a flattened bamboo spear attached to a bent sapling which is fastened to a trigger in such a way that it is released by the passerby stumbling against an invisible string stretched across the track. The spears are poisoned, either with the famous "upas" or some other similar vegetable poison, and a wound from one of them means almost instant death.

Whether such primitive defensive methods avail them against the huge gazeka is not known, but the chances are that they find safety in retreat.

According to the official reports, the gazeka is of gigantic size and fearsome aspect. It is black and white striped, has the nose of a tapir and "a face like the devil." Among the English inhabitants of the island, the animal is known as Monckton's gazeka, in honor of Mr. C. A. W. Monckton, a former explorer in New Guinea, who first reported its presence in the mountains.

Mr. Monckton, during his ascent of Mount Albert Edward, in the west of British New Guinea, discovered the huge footprints and other indications of the very recent presence of some tremendous monster that had evidently been prowling on the grassy plains surrounding the lakes on the summit at an elevation of about 12,500 feet. He followed the trail all day, and came upon the monster at dusk, just as it was devastating a settlement of the pigmies. The little natives were screaming and running for their lives, although they turned every now and again to aim their poisoned arrows at the brute.

Monckton let fire as soon as he was able to get in a proper position, and the huge gazeka at once turned upon him. As it reared upon its hind legs and pawed the air it looked to the hunter as big as a house, standing fully 25 feet high. Two of Monckton's bullets seemed to take effect, as a stream of blood flowed freely from the animal's shoulder, but before Monckton was able to reload the animal turned and fled. By that time it was too dark to follow him, and Monckton never had another opportunity to renew his pursuit.

None of the inhabitants was brave enough to repeat Monckton's attempt to capture the brute, and until the British expedition reached New Guinea he has prowled around with impunity, occasionally descending upon the rudimentary huts of the pigmies and destroying those who failed to fly in time.

The British explorers were aware of Monckton's experience, and in fact, it is believed that one of the principal objects of the expedition was to secure a specimen of the strange monster. It has long been known that there were many mammals in New Guinea still to be discovered, but just what they expected to find the scientists themselves could not tell.

New Guinea lies to the east of what is known as Wallace's line, an imaginary line defined by A. R. Wallace, on one side of which only placenta animals are found, while on the other only marsupials exist. No tapirs or rhinoceroses exist to the east of Wallace's line, which includes Australia and New Guinea, but about the period when the mastodon and the mammoth flourished in America a huge marsupial known as the diprodont is known to have existed in Australia. Fossil remains recently discovered leave no doubt as to its gigantic size, and, although there is, of course, no means of ascertaining its appearance in life, as it has been extinct for several thousands of years, the gazeka appears to bear a marked resemblance in form to this ancient monster.

That a few diprodonts could have survived to this day despite the extinction of the main part of the type, is not considered unlikely by the scientists, who point out that nature does not usually blot out a whole class of animals suddenly, but that, on the contrary, it is sometimes thousands of years before the last individual member of the type succumbs to the conditions which destroyed his fellows.

The British explorers are enduring many hardships in their scientific expedition. In New Guinea the temperature is never less than 114 degrees in the shade, and water is not always accessible. But if these ardent explorers really capture a living diprodont they will consider their labors well rewarded.

ONCE HOME OF FAMOUS SCHOOL

Ascending the hill slope of Indian Queen lane, one passes over a winding roadway through what was once a thickly wooded grove overlooking the Ridge road and the Schuylkill river, a quaint cluster of three houses now joined as one homestead. A tablet swings from the arch in one of its ancient doorways, stating that this was the home of Dr. Smith, the first provost of the college—afterward the University of Pennsylvania.

Although the structure known in these days as Dr. Smith's home now has the appearance of being one large building, it comprises what was originally three distinct houses, with quaint spring houses and outbuildings, the Philadelphia Inquirer says. The old records show that Dr. Smith built these three clusters of strange buildings on the hill nearly opposite the Old Falls tavern, among which was the octagon building and the vault in which his remains and others of his family were deposited immediately on the brow of the hill. The old "octagon building," which created much comment when first built because of its unusual construction, was called "Smith's Folly" in the early days, but its many-windowed recesses were the special delight of the celebrated university provost.

The residents of the Falls of Schuylkill find peculiar satisfaction today in the preservation of this old landmark because of its important association with the early education of this section. Not only was it the home of Dr. Smith, and made famous for its connection with the beginnings of the University of Pennsylvania, but because from this historic building there was introduced the famous Pestalozzi system of education which made its influence felt throughout the country.

Early historians state that it was about the year 1809 that there came to the falls a very singular character, Joseph Neef, a pupil of the celebrated Pestalozzi of Switzerland. He was induced to come to this country for the purpose of establishing Pestalozzi's system of education by William McClure, the philosopher, who endowed the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. Mr. Neef's school occupied the Smith property for many years; the octagon and connecting building were occupied as the schoolhouse and the adjoining buildings were used as dwellings. The school soon became large and flourishing, boys coming from all parts of the country to attend.

There are still among the residents of the Falls of Schuylkill those whose fathers or grandfathers attended the famous Neef school, and they delight in relating the stories handed down to them of the methods of study in the fine old groves surrounding the school building.

Plan to Beat High Prices

A commercial traveler who lives in Indianapolis has a plan for beating the high price for food charges in the city markets. He brings in each week from the country, where prices are low, such produce and meat as he can carry, thereby saving much money, says the Saturday Evening Post. Not long ago he was in Morgantown and asked for the best meat shop. He went as directed, but did not find the cut of meat he wanted. So he asked the butcher if there wasn't another meat market in town, and, if so, what kind of a market it was. "Well," said the butcher, leaning on his hook, "I always argue if you can't say something good about a fellow you better keep your mouth shut, and besides, I wouldn't say nothin' about a competitor, nohow. If he's got any fresh beef that just come in you're safe in buyin'; but he's got one trouble and oughtn't to be selling meat—he's not a good smeller."

A Jinriksha With One Wheel.

According to Consul General James T. Du Bois of Singapore, a one-wheeled jinriksha, on the monocycle principle, is being introduced among the Chinese of the Malay states. It is said to be safe and to have many advantages over the old-fashioned vehicle. There is no jarring drag in rounding corners, the wear and tear is reduced to a minimum, the work on the pullers greatly reduced, and a 20 per cent. increased speed obtained. It is reported that a company is forming at Penang for the furtherance of this jinriksha trade with China.

Troubled.

"It isn't what I don't know that troubles me," said the home-grown philosopher.

"Then what is it?" we asked.

"It's what I know that I don't know," he replied.

It is one of the healthful signs of present day building that the interior arrangement of a house is given more attention and is considered more important than is its exterior appearance. Home builders have outgrown that period when matters of design were regulated by what the neighbors would think.

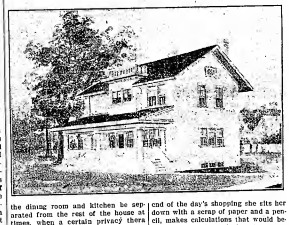
A generation ago every house had to have its front and back parlor; the former preferably garnished with a round tower bay window arrangement on the corner and the exterior elaborately supplied with fancy ornaments, if the building was to command any distinction at all in the community; and all of this was to the general detriment of the home interior.

A modern house, on the other hand, is designed to meet the needs of the family life, providing rooms that are well lighted, well ventilated, of proper size and so arranged that the work of house keeping may be reduced to its lowest terms.

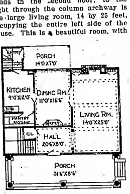
The architect draws his floor plans and lets the exterior appearance largely take care of itself. Yet, in spite of this, the modern houses planned in this way are more attractive in their general exterior appearance than were the pretentious, over-ornamented dwellings of old.

Simplicity and directness are the two first requirements for successful design—elements which come strongly into play in this present-day idea of home planning.

In the accompanying design the most important consideration was to have the first floor so planned that an impression of spaciousness be gained upon entering the front door; at the same time it was desired that the dining room and kitchen be separated from the rest of the house at times, when a certain privacy there is desired. This is a very frequent requirement; yet, it is surprising how often our houses as they are built fulfil but part of this requirement.



A glance at the first-floor plan will show an arrangement which accomplishes the purpose very successfully in this case. Entrance is had at the center in front into a spacious square hall; to the left the stairway ascends to the second floor; to the right through the column archway is the large living room, 14 by 25 feet, occupying the entire left side of the house. This is a beautiful room, with beamed ceiling and having a large brick fireplace at the further end. The dining room is in the center at the rear, directly back of the entrance hall. This room is reached by way of a broad doorway from the side of the living room, double doors separating the two when desired.

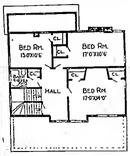


First Floor Plan.

Both the living room and dining room are exceptionally well lighted, the three window groups being both attractive in appearance and efficient for lighting and ventilation. It is seldom that one finds so good an arrangement as this in a house of square outline, which, of course, is the most economical to build. It is usually necessary, in order to secure the desirable features mentioned, to arrange part of the room in an ell or otherwise complicate the design.

The arrangement of the kitchen and pantry will be seen to be very convenient for the preparation of meals.

On the second floor three large bedrooms and a bathroom are provided. Each room has cross ventilation. There are five clothes closets; also a nice space for a sewing room in the well-lighted upper hall. The exterior of this house is very simple, yet it is highly attractive. It is a modern adaptation of the Dutch colonial style. Cement plaster on metal lath is employed for the walls. A number of attractive color schemes are feasible for its use; cream color for the cement plaster and brown for the wood trim around the doors and windows being perhaps as good as any. The roof is of slate.



Second Floor Plan.

The cost of this house is estimated at $4,000.

FUSSY ABOUT THE CHANGE

Man, Unlike Woman, Does Not Like the Way It Usually Is Given to Him.

To be sure, the change we receive in these days of the high cost of most things does not burden our minds or our pockets overmuch, yet we should like to receive the little that is coming to us in a more orderly arrangement than is customary in the smaller business transactions of daily life, says the New York Tribune. Usually our change is shot back in a little metal box via a miniature overhead railroad.

The clerk pulls the crumpled wad hastily apart to verify the amount, and stuffs it into our hand. That is the system.

If the customer be a woman, well and good, for she stuffs the ball into her bag or pocketbook in very much the same way, and departs. At the end of the day's shopping she sits her down with a scrap of paper and a pencil, makes calculations that would bewilder a mathematical astronomer, talking to herself the while, pulls the wads apart, counts the bills, then, her account made up, stuffs them back again in very much the same disorderly condition.

But with man it is different. He is methodical, fussy even, about the money he carries around with him. He carries his bills neatly folded, usually once lengthwise and once across. He has a finicky way of arranging them face upward, with the denominant in the upper right hand corner, and he keeps the bills of the same denomination together. The cashier in the wire cage of the retail business is not so particular. She—it usually is a she—can handle money upside down and face downward without discomfort or confusion. She apparently puts it away as it happens to come out of the carrier; she certainly takes no cognizance of these male peculiarities in the way in which she makes change. So bewildered man halts in the aisle, intent on bringing order from chaos, blocks up the passage, and is jostled. We know that the bulk of the retail trade of the country is carried on by women with women, who understand each other even in this, but has mere man no rights in the matter? Since society is so busy reforming everything it happens to think of, can it not start a movement for the orderly arrangement of our change?

Preserving Time.

All of the members of the family are being pressed into service to help make preserves. No matter how many servants are employed in a household, the preserves that mother makes always takes the prize and are the most delicious which can be manufactured.

The preserve season has its drawbacks, but it is refreshing to think that during the cold days of next winter (cold days, what a pleasant thought) the family will be amply repaid for its trouble. The debutante could not go to a party if any one would give one, they are so busy stoning cherries and assorting raspberries, currants, etc. It is not a job of which they are particularly fond, but it's a case of everybody lending his assistance, and of helping the good cause.

Cooks are grand institutions and are fine to have about, but once a year mother puts on her biggest apron or borrows one, rolls up her sleeves, is "not at home to anyone," goes into the kitchen and remains until rows of glasses of jelly and jars of fruit are placed on the shelves for future use.—Denver News.

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabattus, Maine.—"You told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills before child-birth, and we are all surprised to see how much good it did. My physician said 'Without doubt it was the Compound that helped you.' I thank you for your kindness in advising me and give you full permission to use my name in your testimonials."—Mrs. H. W. Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. Charles Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Queer Questions.

Queer questions come over the telephone to the newspaper offices. Here was one that the man who chanced to answer the phone had put up to him the other day:

"Say," began the unknown seeker after the truth, "do you—do you remember who it was that killed Abel?"

"Why, Cain, of course," replied the newspaper man, who put in several years at Sunday school. "Who'd ju suppose?"

"Well," observed the man at the other end in an annoyed tone, "doggon if I ain't gone and made a fool o' myself. Course it was Cain, now that you mention it, but I made a two to one bet with a fellow that 'twas Goliath, and now I'll have to go without a new overcoat, I reckon, this next winter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Childish Reasoning.

"Look at the brownies, papa!" exclaimed a little miss as she gazed upward at a Wall street skyscraper.

"They are not brownies, dearie," replied papa. "They are big men, like me, but they look so tiny because they are so high."

"If they were twice as high, would they look twice as small?" she asked, showing the mathematical turn not unnatural in the offspring of a successful broker.

Papa answered "Yes."

She made a quick calculation and remarked: "They won't amount to much when they get to heaven, will they?"

Simple Expedient.

An American student at a German university tells of a professor who was reading aloud in a classroom papers on a celebrated living German novelist, who had been written by the members of the class. After reading one he commented upon its excellence. "You show an exact comprehension of the matter," he said, addressing the student who had written the paper; "tell us what method you used."

"Oh," replied the student, "I just wrote to X—, stating what I wanted to know, and that was what he sent back."

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food Is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way.

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

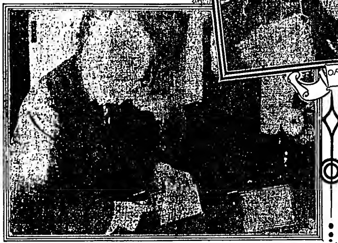
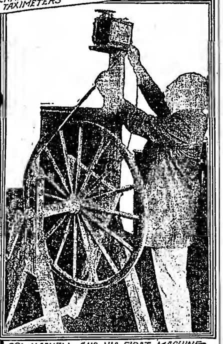
HOW THE GOVERNMENT TESTS TAXIMETERS

IN ALMOST every large city in the United States taxicabs are rapidly displacing horse-drawn cabs and carriages as public vehicles for transportation in those horseless vehicles are almost always based on the distance traveled as shown on the registering dials of the taximeters it obviously becomes of the gravest importance that these automatic records shall be honest and accurate in their chronicling. Indeed, in many cities there have been loud protests due to alleged overcharging of taxicab patrons—the alleged overcharging being attributed to the faulty operation of the taximeters. Whether such false accounting was due to a desire to cheat the traveling public or merely to faulty mechanism in the mechanical bookkeeper could seldom be determined, but in either event the outcome was the same—the public got the worst of it.

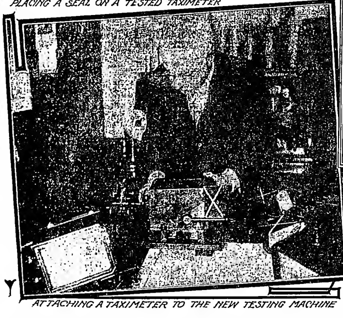
OPERATING NEW MACHINE FOR TESTING TAXIMETERS



PLACING A SEAL ON A TESTED TAXIMETER



COL. HASKELL AND HIS FIRST MACHINE FOR TESTING TAXIMETERS



ATTACHING A TAXIMETER TO THE NEW TESTING MACHINE

Various cities have made efforts to devise some means of testing taximeters, but to Uncle Sam belongs the credit of first solving the problem. The system is now in successful operation at the capital of the nation, where, by the way, there are probably more taxicabs in operation than in any other city of the size in the world. The matter of keeping tab on the taximeters was placed in the hands of Col. W. C. Haskell, the United States superintendent of weights and measures, and he invented the first machine specially designed for testing the accuracy of the "taxi."

The first apparatus was rather cumbersome and the most conspicuous feature was a large wooden wheel which was turned by hand. The principle of operation involved the insertion of a small wire through the shaft of the meter to be tested and turning the same a certain number of times to cover distance, verifying this test over an official mile and fraction thereof. The large machine when fitted with the same size eccentric, sprocket wheel and spiral shaft in use in taxicabs gave a correct test, but it was a time-consuming process, ten revolutions of the large wheel being required to show one-quarter mile of travel.

After much study of the subject Colonel Haskell perfected the small machine which has lately been introduced for this work. With it one revolution of the crank wheel—through the aid of a system of cogwheels—represents a quarter of a mile of travel. With this small machine attached direct to the shaft of the meter to be tested it is possible to test ten meters in the time formerly required for trying out one. Moreover, the system of cogwheels is so adjusted as to give an absolutely accurate test. The government now requires that all taximeters attached to cabs at the seat of government be tested at least twice a year, and when a meter upon test is found to be accurate a round blue seal is affixed to the face of the meter showing that it has been "approved." Incorrect meters are given a yellow seal with the word "Condemned" thereon and must be withdrawn from use under a penalty of $100 fine.

One of the latest ideas evolved for a safety attachment for automobiles is a "cow catcher." The "cow catcher," or man catcher, is attached to the front of the motor car and, when not in active use saving the life of some one who steps in front of the moving machine, it looks exactly like the pilot of a big locomotive. Used in this way, it was feared that pedestrians might be hurt, for the car would throw them to one side, hence an attachment was added, operated by a button fixed conveniently on the seat near the driver, which, when pressed in time of danger, drops the cow catcher so that it is similar to the fender of a street car, adapted to catching the unlucky person and carrying him with the machine until rescued by the driver of the automobile. According to the inventors of this contrivance, the "cow catcher" will prevent many serious accidents if placed on the front of the automobiles.

The frequency with which the claim is made that the automobile is largely an extravagance and that the people have grown motor-mad and are annexing themselves to power conveyances with a rapidity and lack of discretion that threatens the stability of the country, is largely borne out by the results of recent investigations.

An editorial in a recent issue of the World's Work, under the caption, "Burning Both Ends of the Candle," makes the startling statement that in the city of Minneapolis alone 1,500 homes have been mortgaged to enable their owners to purchase automobiles. It is stated that about $375,000,000 represents what the people of this country will spend for motor cars next year, and the editorial adds that "there are plenty of indications that it is time for the average American to stop and think."

Look out of your office window, no matter what city you are in, and you will see an automobile. Try to cross the street and one of them is more than likely to come along with sounding horn warning the pedestrian to get out of the way. If a man is deaf or a little slow in his footsteps he is too frequently run down and the chauffeur sets up as a defense that the accident was quite unavoidable. Every one knows that more than half the "unavoidable" accidents could be avoided if the cars were run slower and more attention was paid to the rights of others in their use of the public streets. The automobile almost monopolizes the country roads and has become a positive menace. It looms large in the annals of accidents as reported by accident insurance companies. The secretary of state of Indiana has recently found that the automobile is also a menace in a financial way. According to his report covering the months of April and May, he issued 3,564 licenses for automobiles for the two months. Assuming an average of $1,000 for each car, it would of course appear that $3,564,000 had been spent for automobiles in Indiana within a period of sixty days. The statement has been made that in Indianapolis alone more than 1,900 homes have been mortgaged during the past year in order that householders may buy cars.

Purchasers of automobiles have been deceived in the matter of cost and upkeep, the difference in the representations in this respect in comparison with actual experience, makes it unwise to take or own a car even as a gift.

The menace of the automobile now threatens the stability of the home, and the danger is by no means confined to any particular section. Even farmers are buying them. Perhaps you can hear or see one of these "devil wagons" while you read this paragraph about them. It would be worth while to think of them seriously, with the view of reducing the hazard they undoubtedly signify. The bankers of Kansas City and of the southwest who are dependent on the Kansas City banks have agreed to lend no money to any one who intends to use it with which to buy a motor car. The bankers of Kansas are alive to the menace of the automobile, as well they may be when it is understood that $32,000,000 were invested in motor cars in that state during the last twelve months.

Physiognomy of the Salesman

The nose of a traveling salesman generally bears the appearance of breadth just above the wings. This is the nose that indicates the ability to acquire property, make good sales, secure returns through bargains and fine talking, and get large orders even when persons have indicated that they did not wish to buy or make a bargain. The thickness of the nose above the wings is the true facial sign of acquisitiveness, and a traveling salesman and a good business man have generally this characteristic strongly developed. We find it large in George Peabody, Andrew Carnegie and the Rothschilds, all of whom have made large fortunes.

The lips of a good salesman are regular and fit appropriately together.

The chin and jaw of a successful salesman are indicated by their squareness and roundness combined. The roundness gives the power of appeal, and the squareness gives the capacity to clinch the bargain.

The voice of a successful salesman is bright, cheery, optimistic. Its inflections are hopeful and airy, not heavy and dull. The salesman possesses a silvery toned voice which is so oiled to its subject that it knows exactly what to say, and says it without hesitation.

The handwriting of a good salesman is neat, regular, connected, but shows firmness, force in the lines that cross the t's and ambition is manifested in the tails of the g's and in the height of the b's, l's, etc.

The eyes of the honest business man who is engaged as a salesman or a credit man are generally small, piercing and keen in expression.

The ears of a good salesman are broad, and give to the person vitality, strength, good digestive power and comradeship. Such a person generates life readily, and is social, genial and a good conversationalist.—Phrenological Journal.

What He Found Out

An Italian journalist, Sig. Tommaso Glioni, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he presented himself at the gates of the Cimarosa asylum and asked for an audience of the king of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran out of the police, and in the end found himself in the asylum.

The doctors examined him, and finding him far from tractable administered an emetic. Then they gave him a shower bath and next vaccinated the enterprising journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic"—whose bona fides they evidently suspected—and brutally but unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was trepanning for a cancer on the brain. By this time Sig. Tommaso Glioni thought the best he could do was to confess. This he did, and found himself at the police station. The magistrate, however, released him, observing that he thought the doctors had administered sufficient punishment.

Modern Strolling Players.

M. Gemier, manager of the Theater Antoine, Paris, France, is said to be nearly completing a motor-caravan playhouse of his own invention. This will enable him to go in for really up-to-date touring. The theater—house, seats, stage, wings, flies, scenery, properties, costumes, wigs and all—will be contained in a road train of several cars linked together. It will travel easily from town to town and there will be no more negotiating with local lessees or difficulties with railway transportation of dresses. M. Gemier and his company will be the strolling players of the twentieth century.

UNVEILING OF STATUE

WILL BE EVENT OF WOMEN'S FEDERATION MEETING.

Large Attendance Is Assured and Women Will Have Notable Session.

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 11.—The State Federation of Women's Clubs convened at the capital city this morning for its annual meeting. There are today between 150 and 200 delegates present and as there are about ninety local club women the federation meetings will be well attended. Many of the delegates arrived in the city last evening but a majority of them arrived on the trains this morning.

With the exception of the annual reception which will be held this evening at the governor's residence and the federation tea which will be at the Commercial club hall Thursday, all of the meetings will be open to the general public.

The crowning feature of the federation meeting this year is the dedication and unveiling of the statue of Sakakawea. The dedication ceremonies will be in the house chambers at the capitol building, and will occur at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Right Rev. Bishop Wehrle will deliver the invocation and addresses will be given by several prominent citizens of the state, in addition to a series of interesting five minute talks by the officers of the state historical society.

This morning at 10 o'clock the board of federation officers met at the home of Mrs. Marshall H. Jewell on upper Fourth street. They reviewed the events of the past year, as well as outlining in a general way the work of the present convention.

The first business session was held this afternoon at the Presbyterian church at 2 o'clock when the presentation of credentials was the order of business.

Lemmon Land Transferred.

Washington, D. C. Oct. 10.—By executive orders dated Oct. 4, 1910, the president has directed that certain lands in North Dakota, which were by act of May 29, 1908, made a part of the Lemmon, S. D., land district, retransferred to Bismarck and Dickinson, N. D., districts.

The lands retransferred to the Dickinson, N. D., district follows: Townships 129 to 132 north inclusive, ranges 91 to 107 west inclusive, in the state of North Dakota, with the exception of those parts of the Standing Rock Indian reservation as are located in townships 129 and 130 north, range 91 west.

D., district follows: All those parts of townships 129 and 130 north, ranges 87 to 130 west inclusive, in the state of North Dakota as are not embraced within the Standing Rock Indian reservation, and all of townships 131 and 132 north, ranges 87 to 90 west inclusive, in North Dakota.

Roosevelt Has Busy Day.

Atlanta, Oct. 8.—Roosevelt came into Georgia today and found awaiting him a welcome as warm as he has received during his recent travels. On his arrival in Atlanta he was greeted by crowds, which blocked the streets heedless of the pelting rain, and cheered him as he rode at the head of a parade through the business streets of the city. Roosevelt made three speeches in Atlanta. His first was in the Southern Conservation congress. He urged the people of the south to take care of their natural wealth and said that if the country's resources should fall into the hands of a monopoly, the people would revolt.

Thirty Per Cent Clause Invalid.

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 8.—By a three to two decision the North Dakota supreme court today declared the 30 per cent clause of the primary law unconstitutional.

This lets down the bars for every candidate on the primary ticket who secured a majority of the votes cast for his office and every one who did this will be on the ballot at the fall election.

The grounds on which the provision was knocked out were that it put an undue restriction upon the rights of the voters to run for office. The opinion has not yet been filed Probe About Finished.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The senate subcommittee on privileges and elections, after listening to the testimony of witnesses for twelve consecutive days, closed its inquiry into the election of Senator Lorimer today and adjourned subject to the call of Chairman Burrows.

The next session of the committee will be in Washington probably after congress, when briefs of counsel on both sides will be in the hands of the senators.

Prominent Mason Dead.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 12.—Samuel B. Sweet, general agent of the Lake Erie & Western railway, and thirty-third degree Mason, died suddenly at his home in this city today. Heart trouble is believed to have been the cause.

Mohall Wants Postal Bank.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—Charles Lano, the postmaster at Mohall, N. D., today filed an application at the postoffice department requesting authority to open a postal savings bank at his office.

Whole Family Indicted.

Winter, Wis., Oct. 10.—A jury assembled by Coroner W. H. Noyes to view the body of Oscar Harp, one of the sheriff's deputies who was shot and killed Saturday during the attack on John Dietz's cabin today brought in a verdict that Harp came to his death by a bullet shot from the roof of the Dietz barn, the shot having been fired by one of the Dietz family.

A charge of murder in the first degree will now be made by District Atty. J. C. Davis against John F. Dietz, Leslie Dietz and Mrs. John F. Dietz.

Dietz and his family surrendered late Saturday afternoon.

Unrest in Spain.

Barcelona, Oct. 10.—A state of increasing excitement reigns in Barcelona. The success of the revolution in Portugal appears to have fanned the fire of rebellion that has smoldered since the furious outbreak of a year ago. There was the greatest animation in the streets today.

People pretend not to notice the patrols and civil guard which are being strengthened gradually in preparation for eventualities on Oct. 13, the anniversary of the execution of Prof. Francisco Ferrer, the director of the modern school of Barcelona who was shot last year.

"Take it back, teacher," said Willie, sadly.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Managing a Husband.

Men are like children; they want managing although you must never let them dream that you think so. No child likes to be ordered about, no man will endure coercion. But managing! It is an art so subtle, so elusive, that few women understand even the rudiments of it. Sisters mine, let us reason together, says Woman's Life. SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Gertrude and her fiance, Jack Bailey, had conversed in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found unconscious at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halsey mysteriously disappeared. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halsey had an argument in the library with a woman before his disappearance. New cook disappears. Miss Innes learned Halsey was alive.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Wha Is Nina Carrington?

The four days, from Saturday to the following Tuesday, we lived, or existed, in a state of the most dreadful suspense. We ate oaly when Liddy brought in a tray, aad then very little. The papers, of course, had got hold of the story, and we were besieged by newspaper men. From all over the country false clews came pouring in and raised hopes that crumbled agnin to nothing. Every morgue within 100 miles, every hospital, had been visited, without result.

The inaction was deadly. Liddy cried all day, and, because she knew I objected to tears, sniffled audibly around the corner.

"For heaven's sake, smile!" I snapped at her. Aad her ghastly attempt at a grin, with her swollen nose and red eyes, made me hysterical. I laughed and cried together, and pretty soon, like the two old fools we were, wo were sitting together weeping into the same handkerchief.

On Tuesday, then, I sent for the car and prepared to go out. As I waited at the porte cochere I saw the undergardener, an inoffensive, grayish-haired man, trimming borders near the house. The day detective was watching him, sitting on the carriage block. When he saw me, he got up.

"Miss Innes," he said, taking off his hat, "do you know where Alex, the gardener, is?"

"Why, no. Isn't he here?" I asked.

"He has been gone since yesterday afternoon. Have you—employed him long?"

"Only a couple of weeks."

"Is he efficieat? A capable man?"

"I hardly know," I said vaguely. "The place looks all right, and I know very little about such things. I know much more about boxes of roses than bushes of them."

"This man," pointing to the assistant, "says Alex isn't a gardener. That he doesn't know anything about plants."

"That's very strange," I said, thinking hard. "Why, he came to me from the Brays, who are in Europe."

"Exactly." The detective smiled. "Every man who cuts grass isn't a gardener, Miss Innes, and just now it is our policy to believe every person around here a rascal until he proves to be the other thing."

Warner came up with the car then, and the conversation stopped. As he helped me in, however, the detective said something further.

"Not a word or sign to Alex, if he comes back," he said cautiously.

I went first to Dr. Walker's. I was tired of beating about the bush, and I felt that the key to Halsey's disappearance was here at Casanova, in spite of Mr. Jamieson's theories.

The doctor was in. He came at once to the door of his consulting room, and there was no mask of cordiality in his manner.

"Please come in," he said curtly.

"I shall stay here, I think, doctor." I did not like his face or his manner; there was a subtle change in both. He had thrown off the air of friendliness, and I thought, too, that he looked anxious and haggard.

"Dr. Walker," I said, "I have come to you to ask some questions. I hope you will answer them. As you know, my nephew has not yet been found."

"So I understand," stiffly.

"I believe, if you would, you could help us, and that leads to one of my questions. Will you tell me what was the nature of the conversation you held with him the night he was attacked and carried off?"

"Attacked! Carried off!" he said, with pretended surprise. "Really, Miss Innes, don't you think you exaggerate? I understand it is not the first time Mr. Innes has—disappeared."

"You are quibbling, doctor. This is a matter of life and death. Will you answer my question?"

"Certainly. He said his nerves were bad, and I gave him a prescription for them. I am violating professional ethics when I tell you even as much as that."

I could not tell him he lied. I think I looked it. But I hazarded a random shot.

"I thought perhaps," I said, watching him narrowly, "that it might be about—Nina Carrington."

For a moment I thought he was going to strike me. He grew livid, and a small crooked blood-vessel in his temple swelled and throbbed curiously. Then he forced a short laugh.

"Who is Nina Carrington?" he asked.

"I am about to discover that," I replied, and he was quiet at once. It was not difficult to divine that he feared Nina Carrington a good deal more than he did the devil. Our leave-taking was brief; in fact, we merely stared at each other over the waiting room table, with its litter of year-old magazines. Then I turned and went out.

"To Richfield," I told Warner, and on the way I thought, and thought hard.

"Nina Carrington, Nina Carrington," the roar and rush of the wheels seemed to sing the words. "Nina Carrington, N. C." And I then knew, knew as surely as if I had seen the whole thing. There had been an N. C. on the suit case belonging to the woman with the pitted face. How simple it all seemed. Mattie Bliss had been Nina Carrington. It was she Warner had heard in the library. It was something she had told Halsey that had taken him frantically to Dr. Walker's office, and from there perhaps to his death. If we could find the woman, we might find what had become of Halsey.

We were almost at Richfield now, so I kept on. My mind was not on my errand there now. It was back with Halsey on that memorable night. What was it he had said to Louise, that had sent her up to Sunnyside, half wild with fear for him? I made up my mind, as the car drew up before the Tate cottage, that I would see Louise if I had to break into the house at night.

Almost exactly the same scene as before greeted my eyes at the cottage. Mrs. Tate, the baby-carriage in the path, the children at the swing—all were the same.

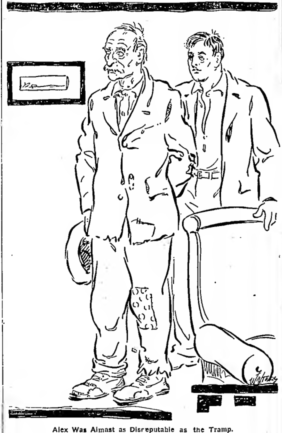
She came forward to meet me, and I noticed that some of the anxious lines had gone out of her face. She looked young, almost pretty.

"I am glad you have come back," she said. "I think I will have to be honest and give you back your money."

"Why?" I asked. "Has the mother come?"

"No, but some one came and paid the boy's board for a month. She talked to him for a long time, but when I asked him afterward he didn't know her name."

"A young woman?"



Alex Was Almast as Disreputable as the Tramp.

"Not very young. About 40, I suppose. She was small and fair-haired, just a little bit gray, and very sad. She was in deep mourning, and, I think, when she came, she expected to go at once. But the child, Lucien, interested her. She talked to him for a long time, and, indeed, she looked much happier when she left."

"You are sure this was not the real mother?"

"O mercy, no! Why, she didn't know which of the three was Lucien. I thought perhaps she was a friend of yours, but, of course, I didn't ask."

"She was not—pock-marked?" I asked at a venture.

"No, indeed. A skin like a baby's. But perhaps you will know the initials. She gave Lucien a handkerchief and forgot it. It was very fine, black-bordered, and it had three hand-worked letters in the corner—F. B. A."

"No," I said with truth enough, "she is not a friend of mine." F. B. A. was Fanny Armstrong, without a chance of doubt.

With another warning to Mrs. Tate as to silence, we started back to Sunnyside. So Fanny Armstrong knew of Lucien Wallace, and was sufficiently interested to visit him and pay for his support. Who was the child's mother and where was she? Who was Nina Carrington? Did either of them know where Halsey was, or what had happened to him?

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Tramp and the Toothache.

The bitterness toward the dead president of the Traders' bank seemed to grow with time. Never popular, his memory was execrated by people who had lost nothing, but who were filled with disgust by constantly hearing new stories of the man's grasping avarice.

But, like everything else those days, the bank failure was almost forgotten by Gertrude and myself. We did not mention Jack Bailey; I had found nothing to change my impression of his guilt, and Gertrude knew how I felt. As for the murder of the bank president's son, I was of two minds. One day I thought Gertrude knew or at least suspected that Jack had done it; the next I feared that it had been Gertrude herself, that night alone on the circular staircase. And then the mother of Lucien Wallace would obtrude herself, and an almost equally good case might be made against her. There were times, of course, when I was disposed to throw all those suspicions aside, and fix definitely on the unknown, whoever that might be.

I had my greatest disappointment when it came to tracing Nina Carrington. The woman had gone without leaving a trace. Marked as she was, it should have been easy to follow her, but she was not to be found. A description to one of the detectives, on my arrival at home, had started the ball rolling. But by night she had not been found. I told Gertrude, then, about the telegram to Louise when she had been ill before; about my visit to Dr. Walker, and my suspicions that Mattie Bliss and Nina Carrington were the same. She thought, as I did, that there was little doubt of it.

I said nothing to her, however, of the detective's suspicions about Alex. Little things that I had not noticed at the time now came back to me. I had an uncomfortable feeling that perhaps Alex was a spy, and that by taking him into the house I had played into the enemy's hands. But at eight o'clock that night Alex himself appeared, and with him a strange and repulsive individual. They made a queer pair, for Alex was almost as disreputable as the tramp, and he had a badly swollen eye.

Gertrude had been sitting listlessly waiting for the evening message from Mr. Jamieson, but when the singular pair came in, as they did, without ceremony, she jumped up and stood staring. Winters, the detective who watched the house at night, followed them, and kept his eyes sharply on Alex's prisoner. For that was the situation as it developed.

He was a tall lanky individual, ragged and dirty, and just now he looked both terrified and embarrassed. Alex was too much engrossed to be either, and to this day I don't think I ever asked him why he went off without permission the day before.

"Miss Innes," Alex began abruptly, "this man can tell us something very important about the disappearance of Mr. Innes. I found him trying to sell this watch."

He took a watch from his pocket and put it on the table. It was Halsey's watch. I had given it to him on the twenty-first birthday; I was dumb with apprehension.

"He says he had a pair of cuff-links also, but he sold them—"

"For a dollar'n half," put in the disreputable individual hoarsely, with an eye on the detective.

"He is not—dead?" I implored. The tramp cleared his throat.

"No'm," he said huskily. "He was used up pretty bad, but he weren't dead. He was comin' to hisself when I"—he stopped and looked at the detective. "I didn't steal it, Mr. Winters," he whined. "I found it in the road, honest to God, I did."

Mr. Winters paid no attention to him. He was watching Alex.

"I'd better tell what he told me," Alex broke in. "It will be quicker. When Jamieson—when Mr. Jamieson calls up we can start him right. Mr. Winters, I found this man trying to sell that watch on Fifth street. He offered it to me for $3."

"How did you know the watch?" Winters snapped at him.

"I had seen it before, many times. I used it at night when I was watching at the foot of the staircase." The detective was satisfied. "When he offered the watch to me, I knew it, and I pretended I was going to buy it. We went into an alley and I got the watch." The tramp shivered. It was plain how Alex had secured the watch. "Then—I got the story from this fellow. He claims to have seen the whole affair. He says he was in an empty car—in the car the automobile struck."

The tramp broke in here and told his story, with frequent interpretations by Alex and Mr. Winters. He used a strange medley, in which familiar words took unfamiliar meanings, but it was gradually made clear to us.

On the night in question the tramp had been "pounding his ear"—this struck me as being graphic—in an empty box-car along the siding at Casanova. The train was going west, and due to leave at dawn. The tramp and the "brakey" were friendly, and things going well. About ten o'clock, perhaps earlier, a terrific crash against the side of the car roused him. He tried to open the door, but could not move it. He got out of the other side, and just as he did so, he heard some one groan.

The habits of a lifetime made him cautious. He slipped on to the bumper of a car and peered through. An automobile had struck the car and stood there on two wheels. The tail lights were burning, but the head-lights were out. Two men were stooping over some one who lay on the ground. Then the taller of two started on a dog-trot along the train looking for an empty. He found one four cars away and ran back again. The two lifted the unconscious man into the empty box-car, and getting in themselves, stayed for three or four minutes. When they came out, after closing the sliding door, they cut up over the railroad embankment toward the town. One, the short one, seemed to limp.

The tramp was wary. He waited for ten minutes or so. Some women came down a path to the road and inspected the automobile. When they had gone, he crawled into the box-car and closed the door again. Then he lighted a match. The figure of a man, unconscious, gagged, and with his hands tied, lay far at the end. The tramp lost no time; he went through his pockets, found a little money and the cuff-links, and took them. Then he loosened the gag—it had been cruelly tight—and went his way, again closing the door of the box-car. Outside on the road he found the watch. He got on the fast freight east, some time after, and rode into the city. He had sold the cuff-links, but on offering the watch to Alex he had been "copped."

The story, with its cold recital of villainy, was done. I hardly knew if I were more anxious, or less. That it was Halsey, there could be no doubt. How badly he was hurt, how far he had been carried, were the questions that demanded immediate answer. But it was the first real information we had had; my boy had not been murdered outright. But instead of vague terrors there was now the real fear that he might be lying in some strange hospital receiving the casual attention commonly given to the charity cases. Even this, had we known it, would have been paradise to the terrible truth. I wake yet and feel myself cold and trembling with the horror of Halsey's situation for three days after his disappearance.

Froze Solid During Night

Rushing Mountain Torrent Silenced in a Few Hours by the Intense Cold.

Running water is usually the last thing to freeze solid, and when it does so, the cold must be extreme. J. Claude White, in the Wide World Magazine, gives the following description of this very rare occurrence—the freezing of a mountain torrent in a single night.

The phenomenon was one that I have never before experienced—a running river frozen solid in a night! When we arrived the waters of this stream, tumbling over the great boulders and rushing through the tortuous channels, made a deafening roar. Gradually, but almost perceptibly, the tumult decreased, while, worn out after a hard day, we fell asleep.

A few hours later, when we awoke, a deathly silence prevailed, and on looking out, to my intense surprise, I found that the rushing torrent of the previous night had been transformed into a solid mass of ice! In this region of extreme temperatures I had on other occasions seen torrents frozen, but never under such startling conditions. On looking round, we found that everything we possessed was also frozen solid, including our saddle of mutton, which was merely a block of ice. We were ravenous, but we got no satisfaction from gnawing at lumps of rock which ought to have been a succulent joint, and so, despite our hunger, we had to content ourselves with a little tea—to make which we melted ice—and a few biscuits.

Ants in Battle.

The pugnacity of ants leads them to amuse themselves during long intervals of peace by sham battles. They rise upon their back feet, wrestle, seize each other by the jaws or legs, mount on each other's backs, roll over and over and engage in other antics. Neighboring communities of ants are prone to engage in wars which continue through weeks and months, and usually end with the annihilation of the weaker community.

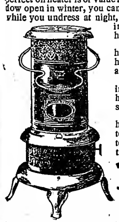
Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress.

Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off.

The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off.

The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The



PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. Apply a match and it is immediately at work. It will burn for nine hours without refilling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. It has a damper top and a cool handle. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font.

It has an automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be quickly unscrewed for rewicking. Finished in japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

Ambergris.

For many hundreds of years ambergris has been employed in sacerdotal rites of the church, and with fragrant gums it was formerly burned in the apartments of royalty. To some extent it was used as a medicine and as a flavoring for certain dishes. Nowadays ambergris is utilized almost exclusively by perfumers in the preparation of fine scents.

The Truth About Red Lake County Taxes

The city of Thief River Falls pays school taxes of 21.5 mills city taxes of [illegible] mills state taxes of [illegible] mills and county taxes of 12.4 mills, this last rate including the 4 mills "court house" tax.

The township of Highlanding and every other township pays a county tax of 12.4 mills as does the city of Thief River Falls. The rates of taxation for all purposes in the four school districts in Highlanding are 50 mills in Dist. 35, [illegible] mills in Dist. 38, 14.5 mills in Dist. 17, 43.3 mills in Dist. 50 the variation in the township being due to the difference in the taxes for school purposes.

One district in the town of Black River, Dist. [illegible] has a tax rate of only 27 mills and this is for all purposes, state taxes, county taxes, township taxes and school taxes. And the people of this district pay the same state and county rate as the people of Highlanding and the people of the city of Thief River Falls, the difference in rate being due to the fact that they have not levied much for local township and school purposes.

The city of Thief River Falls, the city of Red Lake Falls, the village of St. Hilaire and a number of townships of the county especially the reservation townships have high rates of taxation. The question is what has that to do with county taxes.

If the people of the city of Thief River Falls vote special city taxes and special school taxes, as the people of Red Lake Falls do, that is one thing that is their privilege and no one who is not a tax payer in either city has license to object. If the people of Highlanding wish to levy a 4.9 mills tax for road grade fund, as they have done, if they levy 3.2 mills for township revenue and 5 mills for township road and bridge fund, as they did do, and if they make a levy of 21.7 mills in School District 35 that is their business and it is an indication that they are progressive people and are ready to spend their money to build school houses and to develop the new country.

But the fact remains that no matter what the rate of taxation in any city, in any village, in any township or school district may be, the levy for county purposes is just 12.4 mills—no more and no less, and that includes the 4 mills levy for the building fund.

For the past three months the people of Thief River Falls have been talking about the 45 mills average rate of taxation in Red Lake county and blaming an extravagant county government for that average tax rate. They have used figures that are correct to induce people to believe what is not true—to create the impression that the county board levied a county tax of 45 mills.

The county tax levy for 1909 is 12.4 mills while the average rate of taxation in the county is 45.6 mills. The county commissioners have no control whatever over any except the 12.4 mills, the remainder is collected by county officers and transmitted to the township, school district, city and village officials.

All of the levy except the 12.4 mills has been levied by the people of the several cities, villages, townships and school districts of the county and all of the money goes for those local purposes for which the tax levy was made.

It has been claimed that the taxes have been going higher and higher for the past several years. The county taxes have not been going higher. If the rate of taxation has been going higher in your city or village, township or school district, it is because the people have voted taxes for local purposes. To prove that this statement is absolutely correct, the following table to show the county tax levies for the past nine years is offered:

Year	Jail	Revenue	[illegible]	Bond and Interest	[illegible]	Road and Bridge	Total
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

Except for the 4 mills "court house" levy, the rate for 1909 is just about the same as it has been for the past nine years. In fact the rate is a little lower than the average for the nine years. The court house levy cannot, under the law, be made again. The funds derived from that 4 mills tax are being spent in furnishing the new building. Aside from that 4 mills levy, and that has been made only once and can be made only once, the rate of taxation for county purposes has not been increasing.

The opening up of the reservation country to settlement has increased that average rate of taxation about which the Thief River people talk. Necessarily there have been heavy tax levies for building school houses, constructing roads and making other local improvements. While that raises the average rate of taxes in the county, as does the extravagances of cities and villages, it is a purely local matter, has no effect upon the taxes for county purposes and is a matter with which the county commissioners and county government have nothing to do.

It was locally believed that the Thief River people would carry the manufactured taxation story to the extreme they have, but it is the only argument they have so they have worked the bluff to the limit. That is why they refuse to debate the county division proposition with Red Lake Falls. They know that that story won't hold five minutes in an argument when the figures are produced to refute it. For example, if a meeting were held in Highlanding, in School District No. 50, the Thief River people would say that you people out there pay the awful rate of 43.3 mills. If the farmer who owns the S. W. ¼ of Sec. 12 were to ask if the $21.90 tax he pays is spent by the county he would be told—not by the Thief River Falls people but by the Red Lake Falls people that he pays $7.13 county tax, $6.96 township tax, $9.20 school tax. And $2.30 of the $7.13 county tax represents the 4 mills "court house tax," the remaining $4.83 being for all other county purposes. Any other farmer attending such a meeting could get just as valuable information—but the Thief River Falls people don't want them to get that kind of information.

Yes that's why the Thief River Falls people won't argue the county division proposition in open debate.

The members of the Red Lake Falls anti-division committee have prepared a complete outline showing the tax rate in every part of the county. Any person attending any of the meetings to be held by the anti-division people from now until election can find out just what proportion of his taxes are paid for county, state, school or township purposes and people attending the meetings are invited to ask for any information they may desire.

All of the figures used in this article are supplied by County Auditor Latendresse over his hand and seal and are absolutely correct. Not even the Thief River people will question that statement. They can't; and that's why they refuse to debate openly.

The figures that have been used by Thief River Falls were also secured from the county auditor. But the county auditor did not inform them that the county rate is 45.6 mills. The figures show that average rate for all purposes, city, village, school, township, state, and the up river people have for the past three months been trying to create the impression among the voters that the county commissioners have levied a 45.6 mills tax for county purposes and squandered the money.

The Thief River Falls people have been talking about that 45.6 mills average tax rate and the extravagant and corrupt county board that causes it, when they knew that the county board had nothing whatever to do with any except the county tax which is about one-fourth of the average rate. In their city the levy for city and school purposes is 32.7 mills, nearly three times as much as the county tax and about three fourths as much as the 45.6 mills average.

They say that the tax rate has grown and grown. It has, but the county taxes have not grown. It is the city, village, township and school taxes that have been increasing.

Now, is that any reason for dividing the county? Will dividing the county reduce city, village, township or school district taxes?

Anybody anywhere in the county may secure any information he may desire by addressing "Secretary, Anti-division Committee, Red Lake Falls." Send the description of your land and find out just what proportion of the money you pay in taxes goes to the county. Any other information you may desire is yours for the asking.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE TALKS OUT

St. Paul, Oct. 25.—The Anti-Saloon League's endorsement of Mr. Gray would in itself have occasioned great concern at republican headquarters. The league has wide influence throughout the state and it is generously supported both by individuals, temperance and religeous organizations. Its following is especially strong in Scandinavian communities where temperance reform has made perhaps greater progress than elsewhere. The league has been at great pains in recent years to strengthen its position. It has maintained a corps of efficient workers in missionary work and in almost every pulpit it has its agent. On this account its active opposition is a thing to be feared by anyone who depends on public sentiment.

Talking Right Out.

And the League was not satisfied to merely endorse Mr. Gray and let it go at that. It gave reasons for its action and in doing so recited again the harrowing details both of the governor's record and that of his campaign manager, and, so far as Senator Smith is concerned, it did not stop at his temperance record but branded him as a politician who in a representative body was the political agent of selfish interests with whose welfare he was more concerned than with that of the people who elected him. The statement was all the more effective because dispassionate, and as I say it has occasioned more serious concern at Republican headquarters than anything that has happened since the campaign began.

Gordon Now Looked to Help Out.

The evidence of this is shown in several things. When the campaign was first opened there was a disposition to sit down on Sam Gordon, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. For one thing Sam had broken the slate to get himself nominated. He had said what he thought of Ed. Smith. For years he had in his paper been kicking over the traces and saying unpleasant things about the influences which had weight in the republican party. So when he appeared as a candidate at the Republican convention with those with whom he was about to associate he was about as welcome as a bull in a china shop and there was talk for a time about sticking a knife into him. Indeed some of the governor's influential supporters were inclined that it should be done. They were after the senate more than the governorship, the brewers, and they weren't going to take any chances with its presiding officer. At all events they weren't going to contribute to a campaign fund which would be used to elect any crank of a prohibitionist like Sam Gordon, and much more to the same purpose.

Smoothing Things Over.

Ed. Smith, however, is quite a diplomat and smoothed things over by pointing out that the lieutenant governor couldn't do any thing any way unless he had the senate with him as if they didn't like his committees they could frame them up to suit themselves. Evidently Gordon was tolerated, though it was made plain to him that he was looked upon as a black sheep. When he wanted to have meetings arranged for him he was snubbed, and at first the only place he could get a chance to talk was to get invited to a church meeting or something of that sort as he did at Minneapolis some weeks ago. Indeed it is said that he owed his meeting at Anoka to the efforts of Mr. Caswell, the candidate for the clerk of the supreme court, who like Gordon has no use for Ed. Smith and his crowd.

Applying the Whitewash.

Now, however, it is different and Gordon is in danger of being made a pet of. For one thing he has shown a willing disposition. For another he is supposed to be with the Anti-Saloon League, although as a matter of fact, for some reason or other they have always been suspicious of him and have never been satisfied with his failure to make a squaretoed declaration in favor of county option. But because of Mr. Gordon's assumed favor with the county option people it is relied upon he is to square Eberhart,

The Cost of Running Two Counties

How much more will it cost to run both Pennington and Red Lake counties than to run the present Red Lake county? That is a matter of great importance to the tax payers. We know that if the county is divided, the same territory and the same tax payers who now support one set of officers, will have to support two sets, and all the necessary expenses that go to keeping up the court house and jail. The salaries of nearly all county officers are regulated and set by provisions of law, and are usually based upon either the population of the county or its assessed valuation. Knowing what these will be and consulting the law, we can easily determine in advance what it will cost to pay the officers of both Red Lake county and Pennington county.

The population of the present Red Lake county, according to the census of 1905, was 15,955. By the same census, the territory comprising the proposed Pennington county has a population of 9,231, and the remainder of Red Lake county of 6,724. The assessed valuation of Red Lake county for 1910, as equalized by the county board is $3,849,965. The assessed valuation of the proposed Pennington county is $2,139,658, and of the remainder of Red Lake county $1,710,807. The auditor of Red Lake county receives a salary of $1200 per year, and clerk hire. The county treasurer receives the same salary as the auditor and clerk hire. As the law provides (Revised Laws of Minnesota for 1905, Section 492,) that in counties where the assessed valuation does not exceed four million dollars, both the county auditor and county treasurer shall receive $1200 per year and clerk hire, it follows that in case of division, the auditor and treasurer of Red Lake and Pennington counties would receive $1200 each, thus doubling the present salary.

Under the law, the present county commissioners of Red Lake county receive a salary of $175 per year, each, amounting to $875 for the five. In case of division, under the law, the commissioners of Red Lake and Pennington counties would receive $125 per year each, amounting to $725 for each county, nearly double the present salaries. Besides their salary, the commissioners receive mileage and extra pay for ditch meetings, and two counties would have to pay ten men instead of five as at present.

Under the law (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 470,) Red Lake county must pay its sheriff at least one thousand dollars per year and as much more as the board sees fit, besides his expenses. Under the same law, in case of division Pennington and Red Lake counties must each pay its sheriff at least eight hundred dollars and expenses.

Under the law, (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 335,) Red Lake county pays its clerk of court $800 per year. In case of division, under the same law, Pennington would pay its clerk $750 per year and the remaining Red Lake county $950 per year.

Under the law, (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 341,) Red Lake county now pays its judge of probate $1850 per year and clerk hire. Under the same law, in case of division, Pennington would pay its judge of probate $1000 pear year and Red Lake $725 per year with clerk hire for each.

The present county attorney of Red Lake couty receives $1200 per year. In case of division, each county would undoubtedly pay its county attorney at least $1000 per year, as no attorney of any ability would work for less.

Under the law, the county superintendent of any county must be paid not less than ten dollars for each organized school district in the county and $250 for expenses. Red Lake county now contains 115 school districts and the county superintendent receives a salary of $1200. In case of division, each county would probably pay its superintendent at least $1000, as no teacher able to fill the place would take the office for less, and do all the work connected with it.

If we add up the salary given above and without counting the clerk hire, for any office, mileage or expenses or extra pay for the commissioners or sheriff, we find that Red Lake county now pays its officers $9075 per year, and in case of division, Pennington county, under the law would pay the same set of officers $7925 and diminished Red Lake county $7550, a total salary in the two counties of $15475—that is to say in case of division, it will cost the tax payers of what is now Red Lake county $6400 more in these officers salaries alone to run the two counties than it does to run the present Red Lake county. And this is a moderate statement. Besides this you will have to pay clerk hire for two auditors, two treasures, two judges of probate, and the mileage and expenses of two sheriffs and of ten county commissioners instead of five.

In the face of all this the Thief River Falls people tell you that if you want to economize, you must divide the county and run two counties to save money.

Now in addition to the above, here are some more expenses which will be doubled by the division of Red Lake county. The follwing figures are taken from the financial statement of Red Lake county, showing the amounts expended in 1909, and are correct in every particular, and certified to by the county auditor. By consulting the financial statement, which was published in the newspapers of the county last March, you may prove every figure given here. If the county is divided, two court houses instead of one must be maintained, heated, furnished, provided with janitor, telephones, blanks, books and stationery. In 1909 Red Lake county paid $171.12 for lights, $278.60 for fuel, $147.55 for telephone rent and use, $600 for janitor, $2109.36 for blank books, blanks, stationery and supplies for the county offices, total of $3301.61. These are only the ordinary expenses which must be paid every year.

The law provides that every county must have an auditing board to check up the auditor's and treasurer's books. In 1909 Red Lake county paid its auditing board $243. This will be doubled in the two counties. The law provides for certain official printing in each county. In 1909 Red Lake county paid $883.68 for its printing, and this was much less than it has been in many other years. This will be doubled in the two counties.

Each county will necessarily maintain a jail, and the law provides for the payment of a jailer's salary, and the board of prisoners. In 1909 Red Lake county paid for jailor's salary $552 and for board of prisoners $326.98. A total of $888.98. There is no reason to doubt that this would be doubled in maintaining two counties.

The law provides for holding two terms of the district court each year, in Red Lake county, and as it is customary through the state to hold at least two terms of court yearly in each county, it is safe to say that Pennington county would also demand two terms a year to take care of its court business. Terms of court are expensive. In 1909 Red Lake county paid grand jurors $387.10, to petit jurors $901.94, to court deputies $45, to clerk of court deputies $76.50, for witness fees $50.72; a total of $1461.26. These were only the ordinary expenses of the court and are in fact less than they have been in several other years. To hold four terms of court in the two counties, would cost twice as much.

All the above expenses added together make a total of $6778.48, and comprise the ordinary running expenses of the county for the year 1909, and they are the expenses which any county would ordinarily and necessarily incur and pay during the running year. If you divide Red Lake county, each of the counties left by the division must pay this amount as a necessary result of its existence and adding this amount to the $8400 in officers salaries, we find that by making two counties out of Red Lake, the tax payers must pay their extra $18178.48 every year as a penalty for the pleasure they experienced by creating Pennington county; that is to say, where you now pay $18178.48 for these expenses and salaries in Red Lake county, if you make two counties out of Red Lake, you will be paying $25,356.96 for the same things.

Can you see how you are going to save any money on that? Perhaps you will say, "Well I will live in Pennington County, and I won't have to pay the expenses of Red Lake county," but you must remember that the expenses of Pennington county will be practically the same as those of Red Lake county are before the division and you won't have the help of all the tax payers of Red Lake county to pay those expenses with. It will be just the same as if you are today supporting your family on one hundred sixty acres of land, and tomorrow you will lose half of your land, but you have the same family to support. Can you see how that is a benefit to you, or how you are going to save money by it?

Of Course They Declined.

At the Thief River Falls county division rally in St. Hilaire last week Attorney Grady of Red Lake Falls was present and invited the Thief River Falls men to meet him in debate on the question of county division, but the divisionists declined. Of course they had to as they have got only one old story that it took them six months to make up, and which they have told so often that some of them are beginning to believe it themselves.—Sunbeam.

FAVORITE BASE BURNERS

More Radiator surface than any other base burner made. Triple exposed flue.

Size 14, for 4 to 5 room house	$51.50
Size 15, for 5 to 6 room house	55.50
Size 16, for 6 to 7 room house	60.00
Size 17, for 7 to 8 room house	63.00

The heat passes from the fire pot into the two outside down flues, across the bottom of the stove, under the ash pan where it enters the central flue. It then passes back over the bottom and up the central flue to the chimney.

This great radiating surface is more than doubled because the flues are set out from the back of the stove. The flues therefore radiate from all sides, and the back of the stove radiates heat also. This feature alone makes the FAVORITE the best and most economical heating stove in existance.

The material from which the FAVORITE is made is all of the best grades—the doors, mica frames and joints being absolutely air tight.

The secretary of the interior has designated 167,000 acres of land in Wyoming as being subject to disposition under the provision of the enlarged homestead act. The land is in townships 45 to 51, north, range 100 to 102 west. Up to date a little over 17,000,000 acres of land in this state have been designated under this act.

By a coincidence which attracted attention, the third case to be argued before the supreme court of the United States after Justice Hughes became a member of that tribunal was one in which a high compliment was paid to him as governor of New York. It involves the validity of the Missouri 2-cent passenger rate law of 1907.

JONATHAN P. DOLLIVER.
United States Senator from Iowa.

SEN. DOLLIVER DIES SUDDENLY

SENATOR STRICKEN BY HEART FAILURE AT FORT DODGE, IOWA.

HELD HIGH PLACE AS STATESMAN

Campaign Is Upset.—Blow Dealt Insurgents by Death of Ardent Champion of Their Cause.

Fort Dodge, Oct. 17. — Jonathan Prentice Dolliver, senior United States senator from Iowa, died at his home here Saturday evening, while a physician stood over him making an examination of his heart with a stethoscope.

Death came without a moment's warning, and Dr. E. M. Vanlvetten, who was making the examination, when the instrument stopped, thought the stethoscope had been broken. He looked up into the face of the senator to find that, silently and with tragic suddenness, the death messenger had called the soul of the statesman.

Heart trouble was alone the cause of the death, and the minor ills which have been bothering the senator during the last three weeks had little effect on his passing. Although Senator Dolliver had been ill for three weeks or more, during the last few days he had been up and around, even as late as 2 p. m. today.

The colleagues of the dead senator were early to offer their condolence, and there were many words of sympathy from the statesmen and diplomats of Washington.

Mrs. Dolliver, her two daughters, Margaret and Frances, and her son George were in the room when Senator Dolliver died. A sister, Miss Gay Dolliver, is dean of women at Morningside college in Sioux City, Iowa; R. H. Dolliver, brother, is a minister in the Methodist church, but has not been in Fort Dodge during the illness of the senator.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 o'clock. The obsequies will be in charge of Rev. W. H. Spence, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Fort Dodge. Bishop Nawell Dwight Hillis of New York City Frank Ounsaulus of Chicago, Dr. Newel Dwight Hillis of New York City and Gov. B. F. Carroll of Iowa, were invited to make funeral orations. If the weather is good the services will be held on the lawn of the Dolliver home. If this is not feasible, the orations will be delivered in the First Methodist church. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery, Fort Dodge, by the side of Senator Dolliver's parents.

Politics in Chaos.

The political situation in Iowa is in chaos. The thought that death would end Mr. Dolliver's term had never been entertained. It had been expected that he would not only complete his term, but be given another term. The campaign had been carried on wholly without thought of the senatorship. If Dolliver had died a week ago it would have been possible to submit the senatorship to the voters as a primary proposition on the day of election. It is too late now. The governor has the power of appointment.

Governor Carroll is a candidate for re-election and is standing as favoring neither faction of the republican party, and, it is believed, he will not care to appoint anyone until after election. He may announce an appointment after election, but it is considered more likely that he will wait until the legislature meets in about three months and allow it to elect.

Among the available men among the progressives are former State Senator A. B. Funk, of Spirit Lake; Attorney General W. H. Byers, of Harlen; former Governor Warren Garst of Coon Rapids, and Congressmen Hubbard and Haugen. Among the standpatters former Congressmen Hepburn and Lacey and Congressman Walter I. Smith of Council Bluffs are considered.

An ability to talk—an oratorical ability which stamped him a leader wherever men congregated—made Senator J. P. Dolliver a central figure and brought him from the seclusion of Fort Dodge, where he was practicing law in 1889.

Blaine Hears of Dolliver.

Blaine heard of Dolliver when the former was running for president back in 1884, against Cleveland. Dolliver was then but 26 years old. Blaine made up his mind to secure the oratorical services of the young orator, sent for him and he and Dolliver stumped the east. Dolliver seemed to be destined to become a public figure and would have been heard from much sooner if Blaine had been elected. But although Cleveland won out, the young man from Iowa had accumulated some fame as an orator. Shortly after that memorable campaign and after Dolliver had gone back to his law practice at Fort Dodge, the "boys" began to run him for congress. He did not take the running seriously until 1890, when he got out and carried his district. From that time he grew in prominence and his oratorical powers carried him to leadership.

Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver was born near Kingwood, W. Va., Feb. 6, 1858. His ancestors were of good old New England stock, sailors and fishermen. Mr. Dolliver's father was a circuit riding preacher in the old dominion, a strong Methodist and a vigorous speaker.

Senator Dolliver was graduated from the University of West Virginia in 1875 and was admitted to the bar in 1878. Previous to this time he had already begun to interest himself in politics, and, as early as 1870, when he was but 18 years of age, he made a political speech at Clinton Furnace, W. Va., which was thought notable. During the Hayes-Tilden campaign he spoke at Morgantown and various other places and already began to be looked upon as a promising man. Shortly afterward he removed to Iowa, was elected to the fifty-first congress from the tenth Iowa district and was re-elected to the fifty-second, fifty-third, fifty-fourth, fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth congresses. He was appointed United States senator to fill a vacancy in 1900 and was elected to the same office in 1902. He was re-elected in 1907 and was chairman of the committee on education and labor.

"Well, can you in justice expect a doctor to wish others well?"

TROPICAL STORM

OF UNUSUAL SEVERITY VISITED GULF COAST AND ISLAND OF CUBA.

ATTAINED HIGH VELOCITY

Storm Is Either of Record Breaking Proportions or Has Two Centers Which Is a Rarity in Weather Observations.

Havana, Oct. 17.—Wire communication with the interior is cut off and the situation outside the city is in doubt. The town of Batabano is said to be under water to a depth of many feet. A large number of lives have been lost there, according to reports. A report from Regla, across the harbor, says that many persons have been killed there.

It is rumored that a great number of sailors and longshoremen have been drowned in the harbor. It is probable that most of the fatalities and the greatest monetary damage has been done in Pinar Del Rio, where the destruction of Thursday and Friday has been added to greatly since last night, it is believed.

The sea before noon had swept the custom house sheds for a distance of half a mile and was carrying off merchandise valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The barometer was at the low mark of 29.3 and still falling.

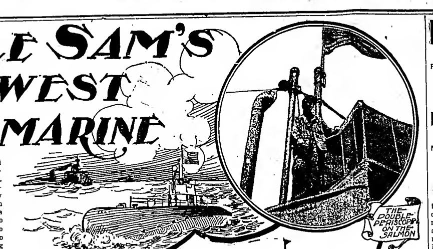
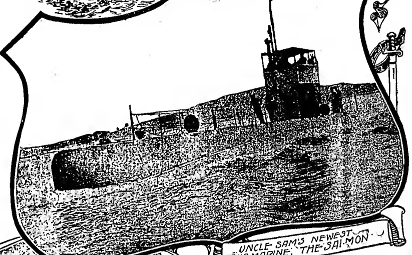
UNCLE SAM'S NEWEST SUBMARINE



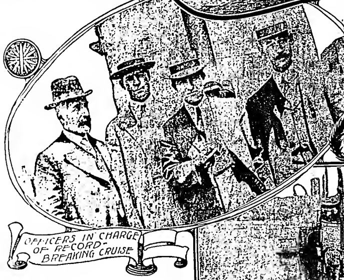
THE DOUBLE PERISCOPE ON THE SALMON



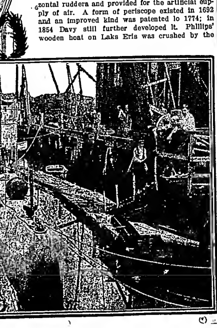
UNCLE SAM'S NEWEST SUBMARINE, THE SALMON

UNCLE SAM'S newest and most interesting submarine boat, the Salmon, is an object of international interest just now and is hailed on both sides of the Atlantic as the most remarkable submarine boat in the world. This fame is due to the Salmon's recent record-breaking cruise from the Atlantic coast to Bermuda and return—a deep-sea voyage such as has had no parallel in the history of under-water craft. The cruise to Bermuda was not only the first cruise by a submarine to a foreign port or out of sight of land, but it was the longest virtually continuous run ever attempted by such a vessel. The total distance covered aggregated nearly 1,700 miles and, as it happened, the little vessel encountered very rough weather during a considerable part of the trip.

Not only did this nautical excursion establish a new record for vessels of the American navy, but it surpassed all foreign achievements. The best performances previously recorded by American vessels of this type was found in the run of the submarine Viper from Cape Lookout to Annapolis, Md., a distance of about 483 knots, and the cruise of a flotilla of submarines from New York to Annapolis, a distance of 385 knots. Among the foreign performances of such vessels there stands out the record of



OFFICERS IN CHARGE OF RECORD-BREAKING CRUISE



THE U.S.S. SALMON AT HER DOCK

English submarines of about the same size as the Salmon, which made the coastwise run from Dover to Dundee, a distance of 512 miles, and the famous performance of the French submarine Papin, which on one occasion made a cruise of 1,2?? miles. However, this French achievement is overshadowed by the Salmon's cruise because not only was the distance of the latter much greater, but it was an open sea performance, whereas the Papin cruised along the coast, and, finally, the French vessel is much larger than the new American record-breaker, the Papin being of 550 tons displacement, whereas the Salmon is of but 320 tons displacement.

The Salmon, alike to most of the submarines which have lately been added to the United States navy, is a development of the original Holland type of submarine which first gave the Americans the lead in this class of shipbuilding. The Salmon is 135 feet in length by 14 feet beam and is a twin-screw boat, being driven on the surface by two gasoline engines of 300 horsepower each and propelled when submerged by electrical power supplied from storage batteries.

By way of fulfilling her mission of destruction the little vessel has four torpedo tubes equipped to fire the latest type of torpedo—that is, a torpedo 17 feet in length and 18 inches in diameter, having a radius of 4,000 yards and carrying an explosive charge of 200 pounds of guncotton. On her cruise to Bermuda the Salmon carried a crew of 21 men, but it was demonstrated on this cruise that under actual service conditions such a submarine can be operated, in so far as navigation is concerned, by five men—two on the bridge and three in the engine room.

The Salmon is capable of a speed of 14 knots per hour when running awash or on the surface of the water and 12 knots per hour when running wholly submerged. Only three minutes is required to change from surface running by gasoline engines to submerged running by electrical power. The vessel has, on trial, dived to a depth of more than 200 feet without any sign of strain or leakage being manifest anywhere on her steel cigar-shaped body. A unique feature of the equipment of an up-to-date submarine such as the Salmon, is a double periscope whereby, when the vessel is wholly submerged the officers on board can observe all that is going on at the surface of the water. Electrical ranges are provided for cooking the meals of those on board, and there is a reserve supply of 4,800 cubic feet of air, contained in 28 tanks, so that if need be the vessel could be "sealed up" tight and remain under the surface of the water for one or two days and nights without those on board having any communication with the outside world or coming to the surface for fresh air. On the Salmon's Bermuda cruise there were on board, in addition to the officers of the American navy, Capt. Arturo Cuevas of the Chilean navy, who went for the purpose of reporting to his government on the behavior of the vessel.

Modern submarine boats are of two types, the submerged and the submergible. The submerged when in light cruising condition moves with only a small percentage of the hull above the water; the submergible cruises on the surface much like an ordinary torpedo boat, which it resembles externally. The difference in principle between the two types is slight, but in construction details it is very marked. The submerged boats are usually nearly cylindrical with pointed ends, the general shape being much like that of a Whitehead torpedo. Submergence is effected by admitting water to the ballast tanks or by means of inclined rudders, or both. Submergible boats have two hulls, one inside the other. The outer hull resembles closely that of the ordinary torpedo boat, but has as few projections as possible rising from the general outline, in order to present a smooth surface when submerged. Inside this there is a second hull of nearly circular cross-section and as large as the shape of the outer boat permits. To effect submergence water first admitted to the space between the hulls, and this brings the boat to the "awash" condition. Further submergence is effected by permitting the ballast tanks to fill.

When or by whom was built the first submarine boat will probably never be known. It is said that Alexander the Great was interested in submarine navigation, while subaqueous attacks of vessels was studied at least as early as the thirteenth or fourteenth century. M. Delpench states that some English ships were destroyed in 1372 by fire carried under water. In the early part of the seventeenth century submarine boats were numerous, and in 1624 Cornelius Van Drobbel exhibited to King James I. on the Thames a submarine boat of his own design. By 1727 no less than fourteen types of submarines had been patented in England alone. In 1774 Day began experiments with a submarine boat at Plymouth, England, losing his life in the second submergence trial. In the following year David Bushnell built his first boat, with which Sergeant Lee attacked H. M. S. Eagle in New York harbor. Lee actually got under the ship, and the attack failed only because the screw by which the torpedo was to be attached to the Eagle's bottom was not sharp enough. Robert Fulton's experiments in France and America (1795-1812) demonstrated that a vessel could be built which could descend to any given depth and reascend at will. Plunging mechanism was devised about the middle of the eighteenth century, but Fulton developed the vertical and horizontal rudders and provided for the artificial supply of air. A form of periscope existed in 1692 and an improved kind was patented in 1774; in 1854 Davy still further developed it. Phillips' wooden boat on Lake Erie was crushed by the water pressure, and the same fate befell Bauer's iron boat Plongeur-Marin at Kiel in 1850. In 1863 McClintock and Howgate built a semi-submarine hand-propelled boat for the attack on the federal fleet, but it sank four times, each time drowning the entire crew of eight men. In the same year several larger boats propelled by engines were commenced in Europe, and these at intervals were followed by others designed by Hovgaard, Goobet, Zede, Nordenfeldt, Tuck, Holland and others. The French navy began experimenting with submarine boats about 1885. The Gymnote was built in 1888 and the Gustave Zede in 1893. The Morse was commenced in 1894, but remained uncompleted until 1899, pending additional experiments with the Gymnote and the Zede. In that year the construction of submarines was actively commenced, ten being launched in 1901.

All London is talking about the startling exhibitions of speed given by a little boat on the Thames and at Bournemouth. The boat was seen racing up and down the river at what seemed a terrific speed, darting along by leaps and bounds, just as a shark chases a fish scudding between wind and water. The impression she left was not so much that of power, for she was such a mite of a thing, only 26 feet long, as of vicious and desperate energy. Crowds of people gathered along the embankment to watch her, wondering whence in her tiny body this overpowering energy could come.

It has since been divulged that she is the Miranda IV., the latest experiment in skim boats, or, as they are called technically, hydroplanes, by the veteran English inventor, Sir John Thornycroft. Compared with anything near her size, the Miranda IV. is certainly the fastest craft afloat. Her exact speed is not known, but she has several times done well over 34 knots an hour, and has decisively beaten the Columbine at Bournemouth, the only other craft which could lay claim to a record in her class. But it is not only for this terrific speed that the Miranda IV. is remarkable. She is the most seaworthy craft of her size that has been constructed.

PRESBY. SYNOD

RUMORS OF ATTACKS ON PRESIDENT HODGMAN OF MACALESTER.

DR. SWEARINGEN SPEAKS

Ministers and Laymen Consider Religious Surroundings of Students in State Colleges.

St. Peter.—Not a ripple of discontent or dissension ruffled the fifty-second annual conference of the Presbyterian synod of Minnesota, and rumors of a clash which indicates that the opponents to the administration of Dr. T. M. Hodgman of Macalester, who were expected to carry the fight against Dr. Hodgman before the synod, decided that the interest of the school will be benefited by withholding action.

Sixty-three years of service in the pulpit forty years of which were spent at Sing Sing prison, is the record of Dr. Wilson Phroner, pastor of Minnesota Avenue Presbyterian church of Orange, N. J., who addressed the Minnesota synod. Dr Phraoer is the delegate to the board of home missions.

Rev. H. C. Swearingen of St. Paul, in speaking as representative of the board of education, told of the objects of the formation of the school board. "A fallacious impression is held as to the reason for the creation of the board," he said. "It is not intended as a provider of money for young men to enter the ministry. It occupies a broader field. It furnishes funds and provides a paternal influence that guides the student through his course and watches his moral as well as his financial welfare."

The board, the speaker said, maintains a bureau at Philadelphia where thousands of names of eligible young men are kept to whom literature is sent to draw to study of theology youths displaying strength of character and qualifications that show their adaptability.

Elder C. T. Thompson led a discussion on educational matters following the addresses on the university.

The failure of the churches to follow the students after entering college was deplored by the speaker and stress laid on the attempt of the national organization to increase the care of students by ministers.

Charles A. Clark of Seoul, Korea, and Stanley White and Warren H. Wilson, both of New York, are attending the synod.

The registration contains state representatives as follows: C. P. Bates Hibbing; J. A. Lagerstrom, Delhi; J. F. McLeod, Two Harbors; J. H. Seller, Buffalo; J. C. Robinson, White Bear; G. President, George W. Yorke, Chicago, and M. V. Facy, of Minnesota.

Vice president, W. R. Wright, Mississippi, and Thomas Chantey, California.

The convention next year will be held in Minneapolis.

Telephone Franchise Is Void.

East Grand Forks. — Judge Watts of the the Polk county district court handed down his final decision declaring the franchise granted by the East Grand Forks city council to the Tri-State Telephone company to be void. The company will immediately ask that a new franchise be given. Acting under the franchise that had been granted, a great deal of work had been done in the city and the company has a large investment in the city with no prospect of any return.

Young Man Drowned.

Albert Lea.—The waters of Fountain Lake have again taken its human toll, this time a young man named Eugene Peterson, whose body was taken from the lake. He had been missing for two days. He was 21 years of age.

Mitchell Pastor to St. Paul.

Mitchell, South Dakota.—Dr. T. J. McMurray, pastor of the Presbyterian church, has resigned his position and has accepted a call to the Ninth Presbyterian church in St. Paul.

NELSON SCORES TARIFF.

Senator Opens Campaign With Speech At Alexandria.

Alexandria.—The Alexandria theater was filled to hear Senator Nelson open the campaign in this county. Senator Nelson was greeted with hearty applause on his appearance before his audience. The senator covered national and state issues quite thoroughly, giving a history of republican legislation for more than twenty years. Mr. Nelson discussed railroad and anti-trust legislation very thoroughly, explaining the workings of the various acts pertaining to rates and combinations.

The senator voiced his objection to the tariff bill stating that it did not meet his wishes in that it failed to reduce the wool schedule, increased that on cotton and failed to give the people relief on the lumber tariff. Mr. Nelson commended Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft on their conservation policies as on other acts of their administrations. Especially did Mr. Nelson commend President Taft for his persistent effort to secure effective legislation.

Senator Nelson dealt thoroughly on state issues and the policies of the republican party in Minnesota. The senator spoke for more than two hours and was listened to with close attention by the large audience. Many persons were present from neighboring towns and the surrounding country.

RUSH TRAINING SCHOOL WORK.

Girls to be Moved from Red Wing to Sauk Center Soon.

Sauk Center.—Mrs. Fannie French Morse, whose Massachusetts methods of training the girls in the state school at Red Wing were recently so violently assailed, has made an inspection of the four cottages in course of erection here. She was greatly pleased with the rapidity of the contractor's work.

The contractors have been notified to rush the buildings, so that the desire of the board of control to move the girls as soon as possible to Sauk Center from Red Wing may be realized. In consequence of this rush order, the buildings will be completed before the scheduled time. The plasterers and electricians are already at work on one cottage and the other three are rapidly nearing completion of the external parts.

MR. LINDBERGH BECOMES EDITOR

Sixth District Congressman to Issue New Magazine.

Sauk Center.—Congressman Charles A. Lindbergh, of the Sixth district, has purchased a printing plant and will issue a progressive magazine, which will deal scientifically with the problems of labor interests, the relation of the government to daily life and farming interests.

Mr. Lindbergh will continue to send out his letters to the public press from Washington, but in addition he will make known through this new magazine the inner workings of the government and will deal with many phases of extraordinary conditions that he has come in contact with in his congressional work. He expects to supplement what he says in his letters to the press with a more full detail of the workings of congress in such a manner that would not find space in the daily newspapers.

MAKES MONEY IN CABBAGES.

Sherburne County Farmer Has 50,000 Head for Ready Market.

St. Cloud.—The small yield of wheat on his farm will not cause much worry to Joseph Teders, who lives five miles southeast of this city in Sherburne county, for Mr. Teders this summer raised a crop of cabbage which will put any wheat crop to shame. Mr. Teders planted eight acres of cabbage last spring and now has over 50,000 heads for sale. He is selling them at 6 cents each, which will bring him about $3,000. The cabbages were raised on low soil in which they stood the drouth well. The entire crop will be sent in carload lots to the Twin Cities.

Amendment to Constitution for Reforestation.

It requires a majority of all votes cast at the election, Nov 8, to adopt the proposed amendment to the constitution for an annual tax of 1/15 of a mill on the dollar (equal to seven cents on $1,000). If adopted it will raise about $72,000 annually, which will be used by the Forestry Board in buying, at not exceeding $3 per acre, forestry land and producing and maintaining forest thereon according to forestry principles. Constitutional amendments are liable to be neglected by the voter, and it will require much attention to secure a majority vote. Forty years ago patriotic men in this state laid the foundation of our present permanent school fund of $20,000,000. Now is a chance for this generation to show regard for the future.

OPERATOR'S CARELESSNESS.

Stock Escapes From Cars—Traffic Is Interrupted for Hours.

Montevideo. — One man was instantly killed, two were fatally injured and died shortly afterward and a fourth was seriously hurt in a head-on collision between an east-bound stock train and a west-going freight train on the H. and D. division of the Milwaukee road near Minnesota Falls.

UNCLE SAM SELLS MUCH TIMBER.

Washington, D. C.—A sale of 314,785,000 feet of timber for $20,709,330, on average price of $8.59 a thousand feet was effected by awards which the secretary of the interior made on the bids for the ceded Chippewa timber in Minnesota. The bids were submitted at Case Lake, Minn., September 15 last, and the average price this year is about $2 higher than in 1903 and 1940, when timber of a better quality was sold.

PERT YOUNG PRINCE

Small Son of Nicholas a Picturesque Youngster.

One of the Best Natured as Well as Best-Looking of the Royal Little Fellows of Europe—Seven Years of Age.

Vienna.—Among the numerous little princes in Europe, one of the best natured as well as the best looking little fellows is the small Prince Nicholas of Roumania, who is now seven years of age. The youngster is the fourth in the charming group of children whose father is Crown Prince Ferdinand of the picturesque kingdom of Roumania and whose mother was formerly Princess Marie, daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. The youthful prince is not a grandson of the present ruler, King Carol, and his wife, known world wide as "Carmen Sylva." They have no children.

King Carol was born a Hohenzollern and his consort a grand duchess of Vienna. After the deposition of Prince Couza-Alexander John I., which was a result of the military revolt of 1866, the Count of Flanders, younger brother of Leopold II. of Belgium, was unanimously chosen hospodar, but the perilous honor was declined with thanks. Then the Roumanians selected Prince Carol of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, and he has made an excellent ruler. In 1878 the Berlin congress acknowledged him king of the country, which at that time had just freed itself from the Turkish yoke and had to begin, as it were, from the beginning. He is exceedingly popular with his subjects, as is his consort, known among her own people as Elisaveta.

The constitution of Roumania settled the succession on the king's oldest brother, Leopold, but he renounced his rights in favor of his son, Wilhelm, and the latter, in turn, renounced his rights in favor of his brother Ferdinand. The crown prince of Roumania, therefore, is King Carol's nephew. The princess is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and is English by birth and training, though her mother was a Russian grand duchess. She was married to the crown prince when she was barely seventeen, and, though her eldest son, Carol, is fifteen, she is quite a young woman.

Prince Nicholas, of Roumania.

Princess Marie is very beautiful and her five children resemble her. She has fair hair, blue eyes and a brilliant complexion. She is very fond of appearing in the native Roumanian costume and does her best to popularize it. Her children, too, often are dressed in the old costumes of Wallachia and Moldavia, the principalities from which the country was formed. In this way the princess tries to promote native industries, the garments being made of hand-woven linen, embroidered with most delicate work.

Prince Ferdinand objects to being photographed. Not so his pretty wife. On the contrary, she rather likes to pose before the camera and has no objection to having her children photographed. Quite often the pictures show them in the national costume. The little lad whose likeness is shown is garbed most picturesquely.

Languages in British Isles.

London.—Has anybody ever reckoned how many languages are spoken in the British Isles? Few people would put the number as high as seven. But take a census thus: English, Welsh in Wales, Erse in Ireland, Manx in the Isle of Man (church services in Manx were discontinued there but recently), Gaelic in Scotland (six weeks ago at Oban this writer heard maid-servants gossiping in that tongue), French in the Channel islands, and Cornish was spoken in Cornwall far more recently than either historians or the public know. The total is seven languages for the British Isles—and yet the Englishman is the poorest linguist in the world.

Costly Playhouses.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Two small playhouses, each of which will cost as much as the average Pittsburg home, are being erected by E. P. Mellon, a millionaire banker.

They are replicas of the houses in which the parents of the children for whom they are being provided played when they were youngsters. Mr. Mellon gave the order for the playhouses to a contracting firm. Each will be 11 feet high and will contain two rooms. Mr. Mellon's grandchildren will use them.

One will be shipped to his daughter at San Antonio and the other will be placed on the Mellon lawn. The houses are complete in every detail. They will cost $1,500 each.

Lighthouse in the Desert

Among the extraordinary lighthouses of the world there is at least one not placed on any mariner's chart. It is far out on the Arizona desert, and marks the spot where a well supplies pure, fresh water to travelers. It is said to be the only spot where water may be had for 15 miles in any other direction.

The lighthouse is a tall cottonwood pole, to the top of which a lantern is hoisted every night. The light can be seen for miles across the plain in every direction. The water, sweet and cold, is raised in a large bucket made from a barrel. The revolving drum above is propelled by a mule that knows to an inch just how many rounds he must make before the bucket rises to the point where it tips itself into a trough. By this well, known as Cullen's well, passes the old Ehrenberg road, once the highway into Arizona, and at that point meet roads leading to the important mines of western Arizona.

The heat of the summer in that region is awful in its intensity. Foot travelers therein must provide themselves with gallons of water to each person, a fact that has been demonstrated by the number of lives lost when men were only a few miles from the point where the life-giving fluid is to be found. Some years ago two miners expired by the roadside when within actual sight of their goal. It was then that one Joe Drew, keeper of the well, in mercy determined to establish his lighthouse; and so now, far up on the cottonwood pole, every night there swings a lantern, to be seen many miles across the level plain, just as much of a life-saving beacon as any of the towers that rise above the waves of the Atlantic coast.

A watched pot may not boil, but it is not the same with people usually.

One Doctor—Only One

No sense in running from one doctor to another! Select the best one, then stand by him. No sense either in trying this thing, that thing, for your cough. Carefully, deliberately select the best cough medicine, then take it. Stick to it. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for throat and lung troubles. Sold for nearly seventy years. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Why try this thing, that thing, for your constipation? Why not stick to the good old reliable family laxative—Ayer's Pills? Ask your doctor if he approves this advice.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

"We've had enough of proxy governors" declares the Cass Lake Times. "Give us the straight goods for a change—all wool, a yard wide and well. Gray is a good wearing color."

James G. Gray is outspoken and square toed. The people know where he stands. Gov. Eberhart is shifty and wobbly and straddling. The people do not know where he stands, though there is every evidence that the big liquor interests have assurances that satisfy.

The Governor of Minneosta will never be impeached by the people of the state for taking his constituents into his confidence. If the governor is in favor of county option he ought to say so. If he is opposed to county option the people are entitled to know his views. The trouble seems to be the Governor is a "stradller" and this is a poor year for straddling.

It is only the confirmed standpatter this year who is found shouting that old slogan, "vote 'er straight." The spirit that is in the air is to "vote 'er intelligently," as the Perham Enterprise well says:

"It is the custom of voting the ticket straight, regardless of the character of the man, which has brought the republican party into disgrace, through such party leaders as Cannon, Aldrich, Payne, et al, who have permitted the special interests to rob the people."

CONSIDER THESE TWO MEN.

Minneapolis News: Governor Eberhart seems to be in favor of everything.

He promises to sign a county option bill "if it is pasod" and yet by some mysterious line of reasoning he is endorsed by the organizations to whom county option is poison.

He speaks the languae of conservation, but somehow the very persons who openly admit that they want to deborn and denaturize real conservation are active in his support. He professes to favor protecting individuals against the encroachments of corporations and yet evolves a tax-reduction scheme which would present the biggest corporation in the state with thousands of dollars more than any individual citizen would receive.

He seeks to conciliate the progressive element of the party with words while adopting every device which will make him solid with the most intolerant and greedy stand-patters.

He poses as favoring purity in politics and preserving the power of the individual voter and at the same time accepts as campaign manager the one politician who, above all others, is credited with being the servant of special interests and the foe of the popular primary.

Minnesota has yet to hear from Mr. Eberhart the first ringing, manly declaration for a good princiaal. It has yet to detect in his public utterances any sentiment which might offend any large interests. On all essential issues he has been weak; evasive and shifty.

On the other hand James Gray's campaign has shown him in marked contrast to Eberhart at every point. Where Eberhart has side-steped going on record, Gray has committed himself clear up to the eyelids. If elected, Eberhart can go as far as he likes in continuing the alliances for whish he has been reproached, while Gray has gone on record and would be bound by his campaign utterances.

Each candidate is opposed by many members of his party. There never was a state election where the result depended less on the party and more on the people. It will be interesting to see which they choose.

The Duluth Herald truly says: "There are concrete evidences of a new spirit in the American people—a spirit that cares little for party, and cares much for the country; that cares little for the old high-sounding platitudes that used to suffice, and much for the plain truth; a spirit that analyses and reasons and uses logic; a spirit that the old war cries and the old party slogans cannot penetrate, so that the old fashioned spellbinder and stump orators are left impotent and foolish."

Here is an extract from John Lind's speech which expresses the opinion of the great majority of the people of the state:

"I am not a prohibitionist. I am not out to advocate county option in any community. But I do insist that the people who have to bear the burden of the traffic have an inherent right to say whether or not it shall exist.

The principal objection comes from the brewers and liquor dealers. Are they the guardians of the people? Are they the conservators of our morals? This is what they are doing and that is why the people are up in arms on the question. As Mr. Gray has said, 'They are not only brawing beer, but they are brawing politics and politicians.' "

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Cannon Falls Beacon: J. Ogden Armour says he regrets the bringing of indictments against himself and his associates in the meat packing industry. No effidavit is necessary with this statement.

Little Falls Herald: Roosevelt said when in Kansas that directors of corporations should be held personally responsible when the corporation breaks the law. He has progressed since Paul Morton was in his cabinet.

Fairmont Sentinel: There is a much better chance for Democrats to win in Minnesota than there was for the Democrats to win in Maine.

Madison Independent-Press: Tawney was defeated at the primeries but the man the opposition used to turn the trick will probably get his at the general election.

Cambridge Star: Governor Eberhart thinks there ought to be a reform in the primary election law. As he was four years a member of the senate and four years presiding officer over the same body he might have accomplished something in the line of reform before the present campaign, so it seems to us. But a late reformer is better than one who never repents.

Carlton Vidette: The "regulars" are almost as certain that the next congress will be Democratic as though they had advance knowledge of where the regulars' vote was going to be placed.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Even iced virtue can spoil.

The trouble with duty is it's always in the way of what you really want to do.

A man's good opinion of himself makes him think other people have it for him too.

The reason a girl can laugh so appreciatively at men's jokes is she doesn't understand them.

A woman has to talk about her tailor if it's only somebody who comes to the house to sew by the day.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: The more a man gets left the more he talks about his rights.

A woman's chattering teeth never usurp the functions of her tongue.

Many a person with an eye for the beautiful has an ear for ugly gossip.

When the wise dog goes out to kill sheep he leaves his bark at home.

The world usually sides with the man who makes a noise like ready money.

And a woman can forgive a man almost anything except his failure to admire her.

Most of our troubles are silly troubles—that is, troubles that are unimportant.

If her husband isn't a paying proposition a woman is apt to consider marriage a failure.

A breach-of-promise suit is sure to demonstrate that some things are better left unwritten.

There may be such a thing as a man of very few words—but who ever heard of a woman like that?

A fussy old bachelor says that eating onions will often prevent a mustache from coming on a woman's lip.

Probably most of us would be more thankful for the things we have if there were not so many other things we want.

and he has been notified that if he will devote himself to that if he can have a meeting every day if he wants it. So that is what Gordon has set about doing as witness his Anoka speech. That is being made a campaign document of. According to it, it doesn't make any difference what kind of a backing a governor has, who he trains with, how the influence of patronage and his personal influence is exerted, if he will only sign measures after legislatures have passed them, that is all anyone can do. This of course is a new doctrine and consigns to oblivion the big stick or winks at the welding of it, but it evidently is the best that can be done and Mr. Gordon is quite willing at this time to father it and is much patted on the back in consequence.

Eberhart's County Option Vots.

Charley Staples has got out to help too. It is notorious that the railroad and warehouse commission is moribund and has practically abandoned any attempt to do the things for which it is credited. In his researches Mr. Staples has discovered that when the county option bill was up in the senate when Governor Eberhart was a member of of that body, it got Governor Eberhart's vote. From this he argues that Mr. Eberhart is a better friend to county option than Jim Gray.

Some History.

In connection with this there is a story. Eberhart, it will be remembered, was elected lieutenant governor the year A. L. Cole was defeated. He came out at the tail end of the ticket. I forgot how many votes he was behind the secretary of state and the rest of them, but my recollection is that it was over 10,000 votes. At the time I was inclined to attribute to this to railroad opposition, because Mr. Eberhart was active in the session in the enactment of legislation to regulate them. Mr. Eberhart was of a different opinion. It was the saloons, he said. The liquor interests had it in for him. In view of this county option vote he was probably correct.

Changing Front.

Now there are two ways for a politician to deal with liquor interests when he finds they are after him. One is to strike back. The other is to make terms with them. I don't say what Mr. Eberhart did, but I will give the facts. In making his committee assignments the Januarry after the saloon vote had batted him one, he put on the temperance committee one county option man and eight men who were opposed to county option. Four years after Governor Eberhart was again candidate for lieutenant governor. The liquor interests were active in the campaign. They refused to support Julius Reiter of Rochester who was the Democratic candidate for that office and threw their influence to Eberhart. The reason given for this was that the temperance committee appointed by Lieutenant Governor Eberhart made it impossible for them to go back on him This year they took an active part in nominating him for governor and the liquor people everywhere are supporting him.

Clapp and the Tonnage Tax

There is another thing that is worrying the people at Republican headquarters and that is Senator Clapp. At one of his meetings the other day he took a smash at the steel trust and said that today the United States steel corporation would be making a fair contribution to the revenues if it had not been for the fact that a Democratic governor vetoed the tonnage tax bill. Now the men who are running the Republican State Central committee don't care two straws about Clapp. They would ditch him if they dared but they have about abandoned hope of being able to sidetrack him as these reactionaries would in a minute if they had their way. Said the editor of a Republican range paper who was in town this week: "We don't think any too much of Eberhart up our way, and when people up there see this argument that Clapp is using for electing a Republican governor, there is going to be trouble. When it comes to tonnage tax there ain't any two parties on the range. Everybody is against it. Of course we realize we can't beat Clapp, but there is one thing we can do, we can take it out of Eberhart. There will have to be a whole lot of explaining of this speech of Clapp's before Eberhart will get the vote we had about made up our minds to give him."

Political Prospects

While the Republicans are making all sorts of claims the reports that come to the Democratic headquarters are of a very encouraging kind. Mr Gray is making friends wherever he goes If for nothing else the people are admiring his nerve and his courage. They like a man who talks straight out and isn't afraid to say where he stands and meet every issue that comes up. This is what Mr. Gray does everywhere. It doesn't make any difference what kind of an audience he has, he bits it out from the shoulder. Mr. Lind's thoughtful addresses, too, are having a great effect. The people are tired of party strife and are now looking for men with minds of their own who will get results. Mr. Lind puts these more or less vague thoughts and ideas into form and shape. He has the confidence of the people irrespective of party and there are many evidences of an intention on their part to take his advice.

Proposed Amendments

—TO THE—

Constitution

—OF—

Minnesota

-BY-

The Legislature

General Session 1909.

St. Paul, Minn., May 1, 1910.

Hon. Julius A. Schmahl, Secretary of State—

Sir: As required by section 25 of the Revised Laws as amended, I have the honor to furnish you herewith a statement of the purposes and effects of the respective amendments proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota by the Legislature of 1909 and which are to be submitted to the electors in said state at the general election in 1910.

FIRST PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The first proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 506 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to authorize the payment by the State from the State Road and Bridge Fund of one-half of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein, and is an amendment of Section 16 of Article 9 of the Constitution, which now reads as follows:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided further, that in no case shall more than one-third (⅓) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund." and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund, to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that in no case shall more than one-half (½) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund."

EFFECT. The present Constitution authorizes the payment by the state, out of such fund so created of ONE-THIRD (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein. If this amendment is adopted the State could then pay ONE-HALF (½) of the cost of constructing any such road or bridge, and the effect of the amendment is thus to increase the amount which the State may lawfully pay toward such purpose.

SECOND PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The second proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 507 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to repeal the provisions of Section 11 of Article IX of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 11. There shall be published by the treasurer, in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, during the first week in January of each year, and in the next volume of the acts of the legislature, detailed statements of all moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, for what purposes and to whom paid, and by what law authorised; and also of all moneys received, and by what authority and from whom."

EFFECT. The Constitution requires the treasurer to publish yearly a detailed statement of the moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, giving the names of the persons to whom paid and the purposes for which it was expended. It also requires a like statement of the names of the persons, and the sources, as to money received, and in both cases a statement of the law under which payments were made, or money paid into the treasury. The effect of this Amendment, if the same be adopted, will be to repeal the section of the Constitution mentioned and insofar relieve the treasurer from such publication. This change in the Constitution, however, would not prevent the legislature from hereafter directing by law that such, or a different publication, of the same or other information should be made by the Treasurer.

THIRD PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The third proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 508 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 17, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment, by the State of Minnesota, of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, including the necessary expenses of giving effect to this act, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the State to become a trustee in the collection and disbursement of a fund for the payment of damages to growing crops by hail or wind, or either. This fund is to be created and maintained by a specific tax imposed by the legislature upon the lands of such persons, ONLY, as shall voluntarily list the same with their respective county auditors for that purpose. Under it there could be no tax for such purpose imposed on the lands of any owner who does not consent thereto. The legislature is also authorized to include in such fund the necessary expenses of administration of the law. The adoption of the amendment will authorize the legislature to direct that the taxing machinery of the state be used to levy and collect the tax necessary to raise such fund and to provide for the disbursement of same by the officers of the State; but any payments to be made by the State, by reason of damage by hail or wind will have to be made from such fund and from no other. In the settlement of any such damages the State would assume no liability beyond the amount of such fund, and could not further be rendered liable. A similar amendment was offered at the general election of 1908, but not adopted. The amendment then offered read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment by the State of Minnesota of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

The main difference between the amendment now offered, and the one last quoted, being that the legislature is now to be authorized, in addition to providing a fund for the purpose of paying damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, to further provide an additional tax upon the lands of the persons so listing the same, to meet the necessary expenses incurred in the administration of the law and thus relieve the State therefrom. This last provision was not included in the amendment offered in 1908.

FOURTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fourth proposed Amendment is contained in Chapter 509, General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to repeal Section 23 of Article IV of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and every tenth year thereafter. At their first session after each enumeration so made, and also at their first session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional senatorial and representative districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section second of this article."

and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year 1915, and every ten (10) years thereafter. At any session after any enumeration of the inhabitants of this state made pursuant to law and also at any session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or any of the same, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section 2 of this article."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment will be to direct the legislature to provide for a census of the inhabitants of the State in the year 1915, and every tenth year thereafter, and will also authorize the legislature to change the boundaries of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or of any one of such districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts, at any session after any State or Federal census. If adopted, the legislature might therefore, if it deems best, change at any session the boundaries of such districts and apportion anew the senators and representatives and thus redistrict the State every two years.

FIFTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fifth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 510, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 18, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 18. To secure a sustained yield of timber for the use of the people of this state, the proper officials shall annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property within this state, the proceeds of which shall be used for the purchase of land better adapted for forestry purposes than for agriculture for the state at not over $3.00 per acre, and for the production and maintenance thereon of forest according to forestry principles.

"Unexpended balances shall not lapse but constitute a fund for forestry purposes.

"The timber produced thereon shall be sold at a fair valuation and the revenue therefrom or from other source shall be paid into the state treasury, except that one-quarter of the net revenue shall be paid to the towns, or if unorganized, to the county, in which the land is situated, in aid of public schools and roads.

"Should any tract acquired be found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, it may be sold and the proceeds used for acquiring or developing forestry land.

"Until otherwise directed by the legislature, which may supplement these provisions with necessary enactments, the state forestry board shall draw and disburse the money hereby provided and purchase, manage and control the lands and forests.

"No money shall be paid for any tract until the attorney general shall certify to the validity of the title.

"It shall be competent for two successive regular legislatures, by a two-thirds vote of each house, to repeal any of these provisions."

EFFECT. This proposed amendment, and the proposed amendment hereafter mentioned should be read together. They constitute the foundation for a plan of State reforestration. As the constitution stands today, while the legislature might pass laws providing funds to be used for the purchase of lands, and the cultivation of the same for reforestration purposes, yet it is not directed to do so. The effect then of this amendment is to COMPEL the taxing officers of the state to annually levy and collect a tax at one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property in the state, to be used as the legislature shall direct, for the purchase for the state of land adapted to forestry purposes, but at a price not to exceed $3 per acre. All unexpired balances in the fund at the end of each fiscal year shall not lapse, but shall be carried over into the fund thus raised for the succeeding year and shall be an addition thereto. It also directs the sale, at a fair valuation, of the timber produced on such land so purchased, the payment of three-fourths of the money received therefrom into the state treasury, and the payment of the remaining one-fourth to the town, if organized, or otherwise to the county in which the land is situated, and that the same shall there be credited to the public school funds. If after the land is purchased it is found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, authority is contained in this amendment to sell it, but the proceeds must be used for acquiring or developing forestry land. Until the legislature provides otherwise, all purchases shall be under the direction of the State Forestry Board. The title to all lands purchased must be approved by the Attorney General before purchase is made. It is further provided that two successive regular legislatures shall have power by a two-thirds vote of each house to repeal any of the foregoing provisions. That is to say, if after a trial, such plan for any reason is found to be impracticable or undesirable, and it so appears to two successive legislatures, any or all of the foregoing provisions of the amendment may be repealed. The legislature does not now possess such power and the same is a distinct change in the methods heretofore in vogue in Minnesota, in the making and revising of the Constitution. Heretofore an amendment might only be made to the Constitution or a provision of that instrument eliminated by direct vote of the electors. Under this amendment, if it be adopted, that power is not taken away and also exists. But a new power, that of repeal by the legislature, as to this amendment, is created. Such power, however, would extend to no other provision of the Constitution and affords an easy method of change in case of necessity or advisability.

SIXTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The sixth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 511, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution to be known as Section 17a, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17a. Laws may be enacted exempting lands from taxation for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon."

EFFECT. The effect of this amendment is to authorize the legislature to enact laws exempting from taxation lands of private persons to be used in the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon, and thus supplement where the lands of such private persons are devoted to reforestration, the purposes contemplated as to public lands by the fifth proposed amendment. The authority so granted is part of a general plan for the reforestration of land within the state. If the legislature does not pass such laws, such lands will not be exempt and the power to repeal such a law, when enacted, remains with the legislature. Power to pass a law to exempt such lands from taxation the legislature does not now possess, and it is, therefore, an additional grant of power.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE T. SIMPSON,
Attorney General.

St. Paul, May 1, 1910.

Mr. Julius A. Schmahl,
Secretary of State.

Dear Sir:—Referring to proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 2 would say: As state expert printer I have given the publications involved in this proposed amendment special thought, and am of opinion both these publications are entirely superfluous. The extensive annual publication "in a daily newspaper published at the capital city" attracts absolutely no attention. The annual report of the state treasurer is published in book form, and to an extent that makes it easy for every person specially concerned to secure a copy. To conform strictly with the law as it is at present, means the expenditure, under reasonably favorable printing contracts, of approximately $8,000, a sum which can be used to excellent advantage under conditions which ordinarily suggest the greatest care and economy upon the part of those under whose direction the printing fund is expended.

Yours respectfully,
J. T. MANNIX,
State Expert Printer.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—Continued.

Mr. Winters and Alex disposed of the tramp with a warning. It was evident he had told us all he knew. We had occasion within a day or two, to be doubly thankful that we had given him his freedom. When Mr. Jamieson telephoned that night we had news for him; he told me what I had not realized before—that it would not be possible to find Halsey at once, even with this clew. The cars by this time, three days, might be scattered over the region. But he said to keep on hoping, that it was the best news we had had. And in the meantime, consumed with anxiety as we were, things were happening at the house in rapid succession.

We had one peaceful day—then Liddy took sick in the night. I went in when I heard her groaning, and found her with a hot-water bottle to her face and her right cheek swollen until it was glassy.

"Toothache?" I asked, not too gently. "You deserve it. A woman of your age, who would rather go around with an exposed nerve in her head than have the tooth pulled! It would be over in a moment."

"So would I, hanging," Liddy protested, from behind the hot-water bottle.

I was hunting around for cotton and laudanum.

"You have a tooth just like it yourself, Miss Rachel," she whimpered. "And I'm sure Dr. Boyle's been trying to take it out for years."

There was no laudanum, and Liddy made a terrible fuss when I proposed carbolic acid, just because I had put too much on the cotton once and burned her mouth. I'm sure it never did her any permanent harm; indeed, the doctor said afterward that living on liquid diet had been a splendid rest for her stomach. But she would have none of the acid, and she kept me awake groaning, so at last I got up and went to Gertrude's door. To my surprise it was locked.

I went around by the hall and into her bedroom that way. The bed was turned down, and her dressing-gown and night dress lay ready in the little room next, but Gertrude was not there. She had not undressed.

I don't know what terrible thoughts came to me in the minute I stood there. Through the door I could hear Liddy grumbling, with a squeal now and then when the pain stabbed harder. Then, automatically, I got the laudanum and went back to her.

It was fully a half-hour before Liddy's groans subsided. At intervals I went to the door into the hall and looked out, but I saw and heard nothing suspicious. Finally, when Liddy had dropped into a doze, I even ventured as far as the head of the circular staircase, but there floated up to me only the even breathing of Winters, the night detective, sleeping just inside the entry. And then, far off, I heard the rapping noise that had lured Louise down the staircase that other night, two weeks before. It was over my head and very faint—three or four short muffled taps, a pause, and then again, stealthily repeated.

The sound of Mr. Winters' breathing was comforting; with the thought that there was help within call, something kept me from waking him. I did not move for a moment; ridiculous things Liddy had said about a ghost—I am not at all superstitious, except, perhaps, in the middle of the night, with everything dark—things like that came back to me. Almost beside me was the clothes chute. I could feel it, but I could see nothing. As I stood, listening intently, I heard a sound near me. It was vague, indefinite. Then it ceased, there was an uneasy movement and a grunt from the foot of the circular staircase, and silence again. I stood perfectly still, hardly daring to breathe.

Then I knew I had been right. Some one was stealthily passing the head of the staircase and coming toward me in the dark. I leaned against the wall for support—my knees were giving way. The steps were close now, and suddenly I thought of Gertrude. Of course it was Gertrude. I put out one hand in front of me, but I touched nothing. My voice almost refused me, but I managed to gasp out, "Gertrude!"

"Good Lord!" a man's voice exclaimed, just beside me. And then I collapsed. I felt myself going, felt some one catch me, a horrible nausea—that was all I remembered.

When I came to it was dawn. I was lying on the bed in Louise's room, with the cherub on the ceiling staring down at me, and there was a blanket from my own bed thrown over me. I felt weak and dizzy, but I managed to get up and totter to the door. At the foot of the circular staircase Mr. Winters was still asleep. Hardly able to stand, I crept back to my room. The door into Gertrude's room was no longer locked; she was sleeping like a tired child. And in my dressing room Liddy hugged a cold hot-water bottle and mumbled in her sleep.

"There's some things you can't hold with hand-cuffs," she was muttering thickly.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Scrap of Paper.

For the first time in 20 years I kept my bed that day. Liddy was alarmed to the point of hysteria, and sent for Dr. Stewart just after breakfast. Gertrude spent the morning with me, reading something—I forget what. I was too busy with my thought to listen. I had said nothing to the two detectives. If Mr. Jamieson had been there I should have told him everything, but I could not go to these strange men and tell them my niece had been missing in the middle of the night; that she had not gone to bed at all; that while I was searching for her through the house I had met a stranger who, when I fainted, had carried me into a room and left me there, to get better or not, as it might happen.

And there was something else: The man I had met in the darkness had been even more startled than I, and about his voice, when he muttered his muffled exclamation, there was something vaguely familiar. All that morning, while Gertrude read aloud, and Liddy watched for the doctor, I was puzzling over that voice, without result.

Dr. Walker came up, some time just after luncheon, and asked for me.

"Go down and see him," I instructed Gertrude. "Tell him I am out—for mercy's sake don't say I'm sick. Find out what he wants, and from this time on, instruct the servants that he is not to be admitted. I loathe that man."

Gertrude came back very soon, her face rather flushed.

"He came to ask us to get out," she said, picking up her book with a jerk. "He says Louise Armstrong wants to come here, now that she is recovering."

"And what did you say?"

"I said we were very sorry we could not leave, but we would be delighted to have Louise come up here with us. He looked daggers at me. And he wanted to know if we would recommend Eliza as a cook. He has brought a patient, a man, out from town, and is increasing his establishment—that's the way he put it."

"I wish him joy of Eliza," I said tartly. "Did he ask for Halsey?"

"Yes. I told him that we were on the track last night, and that it was only a question of time. He said he was glad, although he didn't appear to be, but he said not to be too sanguine."

"Do you know what I believe?" I asked. "I believe, as firmly as I believe anything, that Dr. Walker knows something about Halsey, and that he could put his finger on him, if he wanted to."

There were several things that day that bewildered me. About three o'clock Mr. Jamieson telephoned from the Casanova station and Warner went down to meet him. I got up and dressed hastily, and the detective was shown up to my sitting room.

"No news?" I asked, as he entered. He tried to look encouraging, without success.

"It won't be long now, Miss Innes," he said. "I have come out here on a peculiar errand, which I will tell you about later. First, I want to ask some questions. Did any one come out here yesterday to repair the telephone, and examine the wires on the roof?"

"Yes," I said promptly; "but it was not the telephone. He said the wiring might have caused the fire at the stable. I went up with him myself, but he only looked around."

Mr. Jamieson smiled.

"Good for you!" he applauded. "Don't allow any one in the house that you don't trust, and don't trust anybody. All are not electricians who wear rubber gloves."

He refused to explain further, but he got a slip of paper out of his pocket-book and opened it carefully.

"Listen," he said. "You heard this before and scoffed. In the light of recent developments I want you to read it again. You are a clever woman, Miss Innes. Just as surely as I sit here, there is something in this house that is wanted very anxiously by a number of people. The lines are closing up, Miss Innes."

The paper was the one he had found among Arnold Armstrong's effects, and I recall it again:

——by altering the plans for—— rooms, may be possible. The best way, in my opinion, would be to——the plan for——in one of the——rooms——chimney.

"I think I understand," I said slowly. "Some one is searching for the secret room, and the invaders—"

"And the holes in the plaster—"

"Have been in the progress of his—"

"Or her—investigations."

"Her?" I asked.

"Miss Innes," the detective said, getting up, "I believe that somewhere in the walls of this house is hidden some of the money, at least, from the Traders' bank. I believe, just as surely, that young Walker brought home from California the knowledge of something of the sort, and, failing in his effort to reinstall Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter here, he, or a confederate, has tried to break into the house. On two occasions I think he succeeded."

"On three, at least," I corrected. And then I told him about the night before. "I have been thinking hard," I concluded, "and I do not believe the man at the head of the circular staircase was Dr. Walker. I don't think he could have got in, and the voice was not his."

Mr. Jamieson got up and paced the floor, his hands behind him.

"There is something else that puzzles me," he said, stepping before me. "Who and what is the woman Nina Carrington? If it was she who came here as Mattie Bliss, what did she tell Halsey that sent him racing to Dr. Walker's, and then to Miss Armstrong? If we could find that woman we would have the whole thing."

"Mr. Jamieson, did you ever think that Paul Armstrong might not have died a natural death?"

"That is the thing we are going to try to find out," he replied. And then Gertrude came in, announcing a man below to see Mr. Jamieson.

"I want you present at this interview, Miss Innes," he said. "May Riggs come up? He has left Dr. Walker and has something he wants to tell us."

Riggs came into the room diffidently, but Mr. Jamieson put him at his ease. He kept a careful eye on me, however, and slid into a chair by the door when he was asked to sit down.

"Now, Riggs," began Mr. Jamieson kindly. "You are to say what you have to say before this lady."

"You promised you'd keep it quiet, Mr. Jamieson," Riggs plainly did not trust me. There was nothing friendly in the glance he turned on me.

"Yes, yes. You will be protected. But, first of all, did you bring what you promised?"

Riggs produced a roll of papers from under his coat, and handed them over. Mr. Jamieson examined them with lively satisfaction, and passed them to me. "The blue-prints of Sunnyside," he said. "What did I tell you? Now, Riggs, we are ready."

"I'd never have come to you, Mr. Jamieson," he began, "if it hadn't been for Miss Armstrong. When Mr. Innes was spirited away, like, and Miss Louise got sick because of it, I thought things had gone far enough. I'd done some things for the doctor before that wouldn't just bear looking into, but I turned a bit squeamish."

"Did you help with that?" I asked, leaning forward.

"No, ma'm. I didn't even know of it until the next day, when it came out in the Casanova Weekly Ledger. But I know who did it, all right. I'd better start at the beginning.

"When Dr. Walker went away to California with the Armstrong family, there was talk in the town that when he came back he would be married to Miss Armstrong, and we all expected it. First thing I knew, I got a letter from him in the west. He seemed to be excited, and he said Miss Armstrong had taken a sudden notion to go home and he sent me some money. I was to watch for her, to see if she went to Sunnyside, and wherever she was, not to lose sight of her until he got home. I traced her to the lodge, and I guess I scared you on the drive one night, Miss Innes."

"And Rosie!" I ejaculated.

Riggs grinned sheepishly.

"I only wanted to make sure Miss Louise was there. Rosie started to run, and I tried to stop her and tell her some sort of a story to account for my being there. But she wouldn't wait."

"And the broken china—in the basket?"

"Well, broken china's death to rubber tires," he said. "I hadn't any complaint against you people here, and the Dragon Fly was a good car."

So Rosie's highwayman was explained.

"Well, I telegraphed the doctor where Miss Louise was and I kept an eye on her. Just a day or so before they came home with the body I got another letter, telling me to watch for a woman who had been pitted with smallpox. Her name was Carrington, and the doctor made things pretty strong. If I found any such woman loafing around, I was not to lose sight of her for a minute until the doctor got back.

"Well, I would have had my hands full, but the other woman didn't show up for a good while, and when she did the doctor was home."

"Riggs," I asked suddenly, "did you get into this house a day or two after I took it, at night?"

"I did not, Miss Innes. I have never been in the house before. Well, the Carrington woman didn't show up until the night Mr. Halsey disappeared. She came to the office late, and the doctor was out. She waited around, walking the floor and working herself into a passion. When the doctor didn't come back, she was in an awful way. She wanted me to hunt him, and when he didn't appear, she called him names; said he couldn't fool her. There was murder being done, and she would see him swing for it.

Through Combat to Victory

Strong, Vigorous Character Arrives at Fruition by Wrestling With and Overcoming Obstacles.

It is the wrestling with obstacles and the overcoming of difficulties that have made man a giant of achievement.

If we could analyze a strong, vigorous character, we should find it made up largely of the conquering habit, the habit of overcoming, says Orison Swett Marden in Success.

On the other hand, if we should analyze a weak character we should find just the reverse—the habit of failure, the habit of letting things slide, of yielding instead of conquering—the lack of courage, of persistency or grit.

There is the same difference between a self-made young man, who has fought his way up to his own loaf, and the pampered youth who has never been confronted by great responsibilities that would exercise his powers and call out his reserves, that there is between the stalwart oak which has struggled for its existence with a thousand storms, with all the extremities of the elements, and the hothouse plant which has never been allowed to feel a breath of frost or a rough wind.

Every bit of the oak's fiber has registered a victory, so that when its timber is called upon to wrestle with storms and the fury of the sea, it says, "I am no stranger to storms; I have met them many a time before. I feel within me stamina and fiber to resist the fury of any sea, because I have fought and overcome its equal a thousand times."

The hothouse plant succumbs to the first adverse wind.

Dresden China.

Judging by your recent note, writes a correspondent, it seems that the geographical knowledge possessed by girl typists is about on a level with that possessed by the damsels who represent the postmaster general behind the counters of our suburban post offices. Having occasion recently to telegraph funds to a town in Germany, it became necessary for the clerk to consult the post office guide. After a long and fruitless search I ventured to suggest that she was not likely to find the town I wanted in the section devoted to the celestial empire, where she was looking. "Not under China" she retorted superciliously. "You said Dresden, didn't you?"

The Consoling Volume.

There was a backward student at Balliol who, for failure to pass an examination in Greek, was "sent down." His mother went to see the master, Dr. Jowett, and explained to him what an excellent lad her son was. "It is a hard experience for him, this disgrace," said the old lady; "but he will have the consolation of religion, and there is always one book to which he can turn." Jowett eyed her for a moment and then answered: "Yes, madam; the Greek grammar. Good morning."

"SILK HATS FOR HIRE"

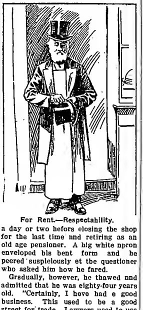
Sign in Old Dickens' Quarters, London, Forced to Go Under Modern Pressure.

London.—Among the landmarks of London that have disappeared of late are some old shops in Houghton street, Kingsway, a district that Dickens loved. The irruption of the housebreaker into this little thoroughfare has done more to disturb old buildings to make way for modern office blocks—it has displaced an old world little man, Christopher Clark, whose business for years has been one of the queerest in all London.

Till the London county council laid reforming hands on the dim little shop it bore in the window the notice:

Gentlemen's Silk Hats
Lent on Hire for Weddings and Funerals.

The old man seemed strangely out of place in the daylight that had been let into that hitherto dingy hypnath of the metropolis as he stood by the door a day or two before closing the shop for the last time and retiring as an old age pensioner. A big white apron enveloped his bent form and he peered suspiciously at the questioner who asked him how he fared.



For Rent.—Respectability.

Gradually, however, he thawed and admitted that he was eighty-four years old. "Certainly, I have had a good business. This used to be a good street for trade. Lawyers used to use it as a route to the courts, but all these changes are taking the life out of London. Folks now get underground like moles when they want to move about the city. And every messenger boy who wants to, sports a cheap tall hat.

"What sort of customers? Most respectable customers I have always had. If a silk hat was wanted for some special occasion I would supply a good one for a shilling a day—a hat no man could fail to be proud to go out in.

"A shilling a day, mark you" (the old man lovingly polished a shining specimen of his head gear with his sleeve), "and the hat to be returned to me in the condition in which it left the shop. Should a client require a hat for more than a day a reduction would be made. There was no fixed charge. There were times when a man positively had to have a silk hat, and—well, I was not too hard on the man whose fortune was small."

"No, trade latterly has not been always brisk. It has sometimes happened that more than a month has passed before a client has come in here to hire a hat, though sometimes I might have as many as four in a day. It used to be very different. Not even a funeral is conducted decently nowadays. Everything is rush and tear." And the old man sighed as he thought of the former days, when times were good and Londoners jogged comfortably along, with the silk hat as their badge of respectability on special occasions.

Latest Vice in France.

Paris.—Compared to the new vice which has broken out in France, that of taking ether, drinking absinthe and injecting morphine are virtues. This most modern vice has already assumed abnormal proportions, probably because the sale of ether is free.

Consumers of ether begin by breathing its vapor. Soon this pleasing effect wears off, then they drink it. The consumption of ether is not confined to any special class of society. It is asserted that 40 per cent. of the poorer classes who go to the dispensary of the prefect of police are ether fiends. Physicians say that a pint and three-quarters is as much as anyone can safely take in a day. However, druggists say that they have customers who use about four times that amount.

New Yorkers on the Move.

New York.—In the year ended June 30, 1909, the steam railways of the United States carried not quite 900,000,000 passengers, an increase over the preceding year of almost a million and a half.

In New York city in the same period the number of five-cent fare passengers carried—not including transfer passengers—was over 1,400,000,000, an increase over the preceding year of 44,000,000.

The New York traction lines therefore carried more than one and a half times as many paid passengers as all the railways of the country, and the number of traction passengers increased 20 times as rapidly as the number of railway passengers.

The World's Coal Output.

London.—According to an English parliamentary report the output of coal in Germany and in France in 1909 was greater than in any previous year. In the United Kingdom, Belgium and the United States the production in 1909, though greater than in 1908, fell short of the year 1907. The whole output in 1909 of the five countries named was 860,000,000 tons, or an increase of 23,000,000 tons on the output of 1908, but less by 36,000,000 tons than that of 1907. The total known coal output of the world in 1908 was 950,000,000 tons, of which the United Kingdom produced more than one-fourth. In 1908 the number of persons employed in coal mining in Great Britain was 966,300.

Twenty-five million Red Cross Christmas Seals have been printed and are being distributed by the American Red Cross, and arrangements have been made to print 100,000,000 if necessary. It is expected that this number will be needed. While the sticker is perforated like those used last year, it is intended for use only, as a seal on the back of letters. The seal is one inch square with the conventional Red Cross in the center and the words, "Merry Christmas. Happy New Year. American Red Cross" in a circle about it. The colors are red and green. The design is by Mrs. Guion Thompson, of Waterbury, Conn., who received $100 as a prize for her sketch.

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee.

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all?

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time.

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

OLD SOLDIER WISHES TO HELP SUFFERERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER AND BLADDER TROUBLES

I am frequently troubled with kidney and bladder trouble, especially in the Spring and Fall. Being an old veteran of the Civil War, a little exposure or cold settles on my kidneys, and then I am laid up with kidney or bladder trouble. Your Swamp-Root was recommended to me a number of years ago, and I took a number of bottles of it and was more than pleased with the results. I consider Swamp-Root the greatest and best kidney medicine on the market, and it never fails to give quick results in kidney trouble, bladder trouble and lame back.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has done me so much good that I feel if any words of mine will be the means of relieving any poor sufferers that you are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE W. ATCHLEY,

HIS HANDS CRACKED OPEN

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the insides for over a year with large sores. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could do but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on two doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do any good till I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have not been a mite sore since. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies.

"They also cured a bad sore on the hand of one of my neighbor's children, and they think very highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John W. Hasty, So. Effingham, N. H., Mar. 5, and Apr. 11, '09."

Slightly Mixed.

Two Englishmen were resting at the Red Horse Inn at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a low, tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise and called a waiter, who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"'Pon my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously. "I thought he was born in a manger!"

Tit for Tat.

Lloyd C. Griscom, in an interview in New York, said of party dissensions:

"They are animated by a nasty spirit, a tit-for-tat spirit; and they go from bad to worse.

"It's like the case of the engaged couple at the seaside dance. The young man, a little jealous, said coldly to his fiancee at supper:

"'Let me see—was it you I kissed in the conservatory?'

"'About what time?' the young girl answered, with a little laugh."

Poor Prospects.

"Yes," said Miss Passay, "I found a very nice boarding house today, but the only room they had to offer me had a folding bed in it, and I detest those things."

"Of course," remarked Miss Pert, "one can never hope to find a man under a folding bed."—Catholic Standard and Times.

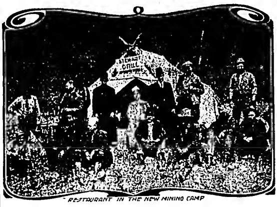
BRITISH COLUMBIA'S NEW ELDORADO



RESTAURANT IN THE NEW MINING CAMP

BITTER CREEK, 17 miles from Stewart City, British Columbia, is a new mining district that has been attracting great numbers of gold seekers, and though it has not fulfilled the high hopes raised by the first reports, a good many prospectors already have made their fortunes. There are now about 3,000 persons in the place, which is a typical western mining camp.

PENN, THE RAMBLER

Hobo Rounds Out 550,374th Mile in Beating It Into Chicago

Peregrinator, Who Never Pays Railroad Fare, Starts Southward—Astonished Harriman by Cross-Country Achievement.

Chicago.—Penn, the Rapid Rambler, blew into Chicago the other day and announced that he had just completed his 550,374th mile of travel. To see as much of the world as this mileage indicates has cost the Rambler just $12.77 in railroad fares. You see, the Rambler never got into the habit of paying his way when he could help it. Many a train has pulled out of Chicago since May 4, 1894, when Penn took to the road, with Penn as a passenger, but he has never appeared upon the bill of lading nor has any conductor ever collected fare from him.

Penn is a hobo de luxe. He has beaten his way over all the railroads in this country and he has ridden in and on every part of a train except the smokestack, the boilers and the bell.

He says he was born with itching feet. He is 27 years old and has been "on the bum" ever since that night in May when he jumped out of a window of his home in Pittsburg and boarded a west-bound freight. Since that time he has been around the world three times, he says, and has crossed the United States so many times he has lost count.

He was christened Frank C. Welch, but he is known as "Penn, the Rambler," to every trainman on the continent. His monaker appears on every water tank between New York and Frisco and Duluth and New Orleans. All along the line of the Mexican Central, clear down into Yucatan, one may see that same nom de road, "Penn the Rambler," with an arrow drawn through and the direction of his wanderings below.

Penn was in the railroad yards at Grand Island, Neb., one day, carving his monaker on the side of a boxcar. A short man walked up to him, eyed his artistic efforts for a moment, and then snapped: "Hey, you! What are you trying to do to my cars?"

Penn told him.

The man laughed. "Why, I've seen that same signature all over my system."

"Your system?" exclaimed the Rambler.

Then the little man introduced himself as E. H. Harriman. He questioned the Rambler for a few moments as to the time a man "on the bum" can make. Penn told him he would undertake to ride from Boston to San Francisco in ten days without paying a cent for fare.

A crowd of railroad officials, who had overheard the boast, quickly made up a purse of $1,000 to be given to the Rambler should he make good. Penn beat it to Boston, got one of the officials to call the time—and showed up at the Frisco offices of the Southern Pacific just eight days, one hour and fifty minutes later, to claim the money, he says.

"I'm not a panhandler," said the Rambler yesterday. "I work at anything I can find for money to eat and sleep on. But I don't pay railroad fares."

The Rambler got into Chicago from the Northwest via Milwaukee. He pulled out the other night for Indianapolis, on the Big Four road, bound south.

BURGLAR WAS LITTLE PUPPY

Little Animal Stole Clothing, Shoes and $180 and Then Hid Them Under House.

Long Beach, Cal.—A young burglar, whose thefts during the last few months have included a pair of eelskin shoes, a silver backed clothes brush, a small silk coat and other articles of value, including a draft for $180, was not punished when caught, but was taken into arms by Mrs. Horace Rapley, of East Nelson street, whose harshest reproof was merely, "Now, wasn't that cute!"

The thief was a little curly haired puppy. He made a cache under the house, reaching the chosen spot through a hole too small for a large dog to enter. The mystery of the disappearance of the draft was solved by following the clew given by a neighbor's child, which led to the apprehension of the thief.

Many articles, whose disappearance Mrs. Ripley had reported to the police some weeks ago, were found under the house. The draft, recovered intact, fell into the pup's possession through a gust of wind, blowing it from a table to the floor.

Students Bar Hobble Skirts.

St. Paul, Minn.—The first pronounced hobble skirt made its appearance on the University of Minnesota campus the other day. It was bound just above the ankles by a band of velvet ribbon drawn so tight that the wearer could scarcely move. In addition to stares from every one she received plenty of advice, mainly intimating that she go home and put the dress out of existence. With a red face and angry tears she made for the car line after remarking that "The students were the rudest things" and that she would never wear the dress again.

WHAT MAINE OWES TO SPRUCE

Tree Long Displaced by Pine, Now Building Cities Where Once Forests Stood.

Bangor, Me.—The swarms of visitors who come to Maine in summer and the thousands of sportsmen who come in autumn bring a great deal of money into the state, and some statisticians have declared that from these two classes is derived a greater revenue than from any one of the state's great industries. But while the summer visitors and the sportsmen are a great financial help to Maine, their presence is of small importance compared with the spruce tree.

While it was the pine that made possible the once prosperous West India trade and built up Maine's shipping in the days before the Civil war, it never in all the years of its pre-eminence accomplished half so much for the land of its birth as the coarse-grained spruce. For while the pine built ships and individual fortunes had made West India rum as cheap as cider all along the seaboard, the spruce has built towns in the midst of the wilderness, like Rumford Falls and Millinocket; brought outside millions of capital to Maine and given popular literature an amazing boom.

Millinocket, on the west branch of the Penobscot, is one of the spruce towns. A few years ago it consisted of a flag station and one Indian hut. The Indian murdered a Spaniard and was sent to state's prison, and the hut was burned, leaving only the flag station and the man who tended it. Then a big paper corporation looked the ground over, saw a fine chance to make pulp, and built an immense mill. Then came the town. It is called "the magic city," because it came into existence so suddenly.

The pulp and paper mill, which eats up about 60,000,000 feet of logs yearly, employs in one capacity or another about 1,000 men, and there are in the town 2,500 people. Where bears and moose roamed a dozen years ago, there are now streets lined with stores, dwellings, schoolhouses, hotels and churches, and lighted with electricity.

When the original settler, the Indian, murdered his chance guest, the Spaniard, reporters who went up from Bangor to see about it had to make a meal on salted pig's shoulder and saleratus biscuit at the flag station of the railroad. Now they have at Millinocket a hotel where the English language is considered inadequate to describe all the dishes on the dinner bill.

Today they have at Millinocket about everything in the way of conveniences that can be found in any small city, and are shipping 275 tons of paper daily, the brass band plays almost every night, prohibition has as hard luck as it has everywhere, and the spruce trees did it all.

IDEAS FROM SWISS FARMERS

American Agriculturists May Get Much Valuable Information at Coming Exhibition.

Berne.—Switzerland has just perfected plans for an exhibition that will interest Americans, particularly those who are feeling the stress of the high cost of living in the cities, and the listening to the call of "back to the farm." Especially will the exhibition appeal to those who are considering the reoccupation of the abandoned farms of New England; for if there is a country anywhere on earth that could teach the hill and mountain valley farmer of any other country how to wrest a living from their holdings to the best advantage it is Switzerland.

In Switzerland farming has been conducted on the intensive principle for centuries; all sorts and conditions of soils, locations, and even climates had to be dealt with to provide a hardy people with a livelihood. This experience has been wrought into the very marrow of the peasants, and they have evolved methods and processes by means of which they have been able to get the most out of their industry.

The results of these methods and processes will be shown at the fair, in the exhibits, so the announcement that has just been made of the holding of this general exhibition of Swiss rural industries at Lausanne should interest thoughtful people in America, including even the government. It will afford a unique opportunity for obtaining knowledge that will be of great value.

Lausanne's national exhibition will present a complete review of the processes of cultivating and fertilizing of the soil, of the raising of cattle, the utilizing of the products and the agricultural tools in use. It will illustrate the progress made in all these directions and will be particularly valuable as a demonstration of the possibilities of Swiss rural industry.

LAW TO SAVE BIRDS

Audubon Society Enlisting Many for Federal Legislation.

Prediction by Ornithologists and Conservation Congress Action Stirs Efforts to Save Feathered Tribe.

New York.—Following the recent recommendation for federal protection of migratory birds by the National Conservation congress at St. Paul, farmers, sportsmen and land owners throughout the country are today joining in a general movement to urge Uncle Sam to conserve his valuable feathered resources. Under the leadership of the National Association of Audubon Societies it is planned to enlist every man who tills an acre or carries a gun, as well as every bird lover, in this campaign for the preservation of the insect and rodent eating and game birds of the nation. Unless migratory bird life is soon made safe from one end of the country to the other by a uniform protective statute leading ornithologists predict the speedy extermination of many species.

From delegates in every section of the continent reports are being received at headquarters of the Audubon organization here which show strong sentiment for the federal bird guardianship that was unanimously made a plank in the platform of the St. Paul congress. Irrespective of party politics, it is declared that the people of every locality now stand ready to urge Congress for legislation to protect the birds now being destroyed through lack of uniformity in state laws.

The recent action of the National Conservation congress is a practical indorsement of the principles contained in the Weeks bill, now pending at Washington, which gives the federal government authority to regulate the killing of migratory game and non-game birds.

No interference with state laws for strictly resident birds would be involved in federal protection, according to authorities consulted by leaders of the movement, when the interests of the people of every section of the country would be served by proper protection of the migratory flocks upon which depend the nation's agricultural prosperity.

The National Association of Audubon Societies has succeeded in urging 37 states to protect their insect-eating birds by fairly adequate laws, but these may be changed on the impulse of any succeeding legislature. William Dutcher, president of the organization, declared that in federal protection alone lay the hope for America in preserving her commercially valuable bird species.

Recover Valuable Book.

Paw Paw, Mich.—A copy of the Weems "Life of Washington," which Abraham Lincoln read by the light of a tallow candle, has been recovered from a paper mill at Kalamazoo by E. Salesburg of this place. Salesburg loaned the volume, worth $2,000, to Prof. J. O'Leary of the local schools and in some way it was placed among a pile of discarded books and papers and sold to a ragman. In the paper mill it was discovered by an employe sorting rags, who sold it to a Kalamazoo man for almost nothing. Salesburg recovered it from this man, paying him $50.

SHEEP LIKE TOBACCO STEMS

Pennsylvania Farmer Believes That Weed Keeps His Flock Free From Infection.

Montrose, Pa.—Pennsylvania has sheep that chew tobacco. This does not mean that the source of all mutton calmly enters the crossroads store and calls for a plug or wants a package of finecut. These sheep take theirs in a more primitive form, but are said to look upon it as being a luxury as much as the veriest tobacco user in the land.

These unusual animals are the property of a farmer of Montrose, who is reported to have taken home a whole wagonload of tobacco stems to feed his sheep and lambs.

He says that in the spring he always gives them some of the weed, that it keeps away certain infections to which they are subject in the springtime, and that the animals become very fond of the stems, taking a full-sized chew every day.

Farmer Hodge was of the good, old-fashioned school, and he always gave a feast to his hands at harvest time.

"Come," said the hostess, "don't be bashful, Mr. Giles"—he was just Giles on ordinary occasions—"you've a right to the place of honor, you know."

Giles deliberated a moment, then spoke.

"Thank you kindly, Mrs. Hodge," he said, "but if it's all the same to you, I'd rather sit opposite this pudden'!"

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others."—Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

WARREN'S BAD FIRE

Department Store Burned—Loss About $100,000.

Warren had a big fire Monday. The K Tarlaseth companys' store, the oldest and largest store in the city, burned to the ground, the loss on the building and contents was $80,000, with insurance of $35,000.

Tom Keefe, a fireman, was badly hurt by a falling wall. The fire was discovered in the basement at 5 a. m. but the origin is not known. For a time a general conflagration was threatened but by the arrival of the Argyle fire department the fire was confined to one biliding. Thief River Falls also sent its fire engine but the fire was then under control.

The fire was checked in the building of Stromsted & Co. K. J. Tarlseth & Co: the Odd fellows lodge and the K. of P. lodge sustained losses estimated at $100,000 with about $50,000 insurance.

Buy A MONARCH

MALLEABLE RANGE!

It Pays For Itself.

BUYING a Monarch Range is like investing a little money at such a splendid interest that it pays back the principal in a year or so, and then for unlimited years brings a return of from 25 to 50 per cent.

Because—

A Monarch requires but little more than one-half the fuel burned up by a "steel range" of the common type. Moreover, it does away with the usual repair bills—saves much time—eliminates the hard part of kitchen work—and in addition it does its work so well it satisfies as no other can.

You don't have to take our word for these things

Investigate for yourself the way the Monarch is built. Let us show you how the Malleable Iron and steel plates are riveted together, making air-tight joints without the use of STOVE PUTTY. See the brightly polished top and body, which will retain their fine appearance forever without the use of stove blacking. Also notice the duplex draft and other exclusive features. These things PROVE our statements.

Monarch MALLEABLE
"The Stay Satisfactory Range"

Steel Ranges built in the ordinary way are wasteful—extravagant

They are not made in the right way nor even of the right kind of material. It is not wise to buy one, nor even to use one, though you may have had it only a few years. Its seams have already opened up—the stove bolts worked loose, the putty has fallen out and these "air leaks" into the flues and firebox cause a waste of fuel every year equal to a large part of the cost of a Monarch.

More Than $90,000: That would be the size of the proposed Pennington County's indebtedness before any tax money would come in.

How Pennington Would Start Out

If you live in the proposed Pennington County you are interested in knowing just how Pennington County would start. Here are the figures and they show that Pennington County would begin its existence with 48000 Dollars, less than nothing, that is, $8000 Dollars in debt and no property, and at the end of the first year would have [illegible].

The law provides that upon the organization of a new county, the county buildings (only the grounds, furniture, etc., except buildings) of the old county shall be appraised and the amount of their value deducted from the total debt of the old county and the balance of such debt shall be divided between the old and the new county in proportion to their respective valuation. The total bonded debt of Red Lake County as certified by the county auditor in the last financial statement, is $93,339.13, and the floating debt was $12,07.94, a total of $106,347.07. Beside this amount, the general fund had borrowed from the ditch fund $20,000.00, which has not been paid back, and which makes a total outstanding debt of Red Lake County $126,347.07. From this amount, upon the division of the county, the appraised valuation of the county buildings would have to be subtracted. The contract price of the court house is $37,000.00, so that we may fairly assume that the appraised value of the court house, jail and sheriff's residence would be $40,000.00. Taking this $40,000.00 from the amount of the debt it leaves a balance of $86,347.00 in round numbers to be divided between the two counties. According to the assessment of 1910, as equalized by the board, Pennington County will have an assessed valuation of $2,139,658.00 and

Who Will Control Pennington County?

If you vote for Pennington County it means that you will vote to become the slave of Thief River Falls. If Pennington County is established Thief River Falls will absolutely control it, will elect its officers, levy its taxes, spend its money, and run it into debts to help build up Thief River Falls. This is a strong statement, but you can prove it to your own satisfaction. At the general election of 1908, 1851 votes were cast in the territory comprised in the proposed Pennington County, 778 of those votes were cast in the city of Thief River Falls and 80 more were cast in the Town of North, which surrounds and adjoins Thief River Falls. Since 1908, the city of Thief River Falls has grown steadily larger and now claims to have 1100 votes, but it is well known that the rest of the county has not increased in population to any noticeable extent. People have come and gone, but the townships have about the same number of votes that they had two years ago, consequently, Thief River Falls alone, or least with

INDEPENDENT VOTERS ARE THINKING

St Paul, Nov. 1.—I gather, not from reports in the Republican papers, which are generally in this respect unreliable, but from reports at first hand that with few exceptions the attendance at the republican meetings are this year disappointing; also that, while Mr. Gray has always had an attentive hearing, there have not always been as many people out to hear him as could be wished. So far as I have been able to learn the only man who has no occasion to complain either of the size or the enthusiasm of his audience is Mr. Youngdahl of the anti-saloon league.

The Reticense of the Voters.

Another significant thing about the campaign is the apparent disinclination of the voters to give expression to their views. I was talking the other day to Senator Wies of Le Sueur county, and he said he never saw a campaign in which men, whether Democrats or Republicans, found it so hard to get even their friends to talk openly and candidly about the candidates whom they intend to support. "There is no way," he said, "you can get a line on the situation."

Getting Ready to Bolt.

Now my experience has taught me this, namely, that when voters are reticent it is not so much a sign of apathy as an indication that the voters interviewed are making up their minds or have already made up their minds to adopt some new course, generally to break away from their party affiliations and vote for the candidates of the party to which they were generally opposed. There is no getting away from the fact that, because of the course Mr. Gray has taken on county option, he is going to lose Democratic votes. There is no getting away from the fact either that, because of the alliance the Republican organization has made with the liquor interests, its candidate for governor is going to lose Republican votes. As to the extent of these defections that is to be judged by other things.

The Republican Party the Big Loser.

Now there is one thing that the experience of recent years as well as the force of logic demonstrates, and that is that the ties which bind the members of the minority together are stronger than the ties which bind the members of the majority party. Men who have gone down to defeat together for years and who have grown accustomed to sit in the cool shades of opposition lose in time from their membership those who like to bask in the sunlight of victory. The remnant

COST OF RUNNING TWO COUNTIES

How much more will it cost to run both Pennington and Red Lake counties than to run the present Red Lake county? That is a matter of great importance to the tax payers. We know that if the county is divided, the same territory and the same tax payers who now support one set of officers, will have to support two sets, and all the necessary expenses that go to keeping up the court house and jail. The salaries of nearly all county officers are regulated and set by provisions of law, and are usually based upon either the population of the county or its assessed valuation. Knowing what these will be and consulting the law, we can easily determine in advance what it will cost to pay the officers of both Red Lake county and Pennington county.

The population of the present Red Lake county, according to the census of 1905, was 15,955. By the same census, the territory comprising the proposed Pennington county has a population of 9,231, and the remainder of Red Lake county of 6,724. The assessed valuation of Red Lake county for 1910, as equalized by the county board is $3,849,965. The assessed valuation of the proposed Pennington county is $2,139,658, and of the reand 4 mills building fund for 1909.

The above table shows that the tax rate has not increased for county purposes for the past nine years. Except for the 4 mill court house levy the rate for 1909 is as low as the average and even with the 4 mill court house levy it is lower that that of 1901 when there was no dispute.

If the average rate for all taxes in all of the county is 45.6 mills and higher than some counties, we must remember that the county commissioners have nothing to do with any but that shown in the above table. All other taxes are levied by the state, townships, villages, cities and school districts. And, except the state and county taxes, vary in almost every locality in the county. For example, the tax rate of the state and county is the same all over the county, yet one quarter section of land in one locality will pay $10.00 more than a quarter section in some other locality, and still another quarter section of land within the limits of a village or city will pay as much taxes as the other two together. This is shown by the following three cases:

N. E. ¼ Sec. 25-152-44. In school district No. 103 pays a total tax of $13.62, divided as follows: State $1.88, county $5.64, township 2.75, school .67 and court house fund $2.68. The total rate being 20.3 mills.

S. E. ¼ Sec. 10-154-39 in school district No. 70 pays a total of $33.38 divided as follows: State $1.28, county $3.83, township $4.56, school $21.89 and court house fund $1.82. The total rate being 73.3 mills.

N. E. ¼ Sec. 14-151-44 in school district No. 15 pays a total tax of $82.19 divided as follows: State $2.66, County $7.96, City $20.67, School $31.28, Ditch No. 28, $15.83, and Court House fund $3.79. The total rate being 51.2 mills.

As shown above the county tax is a very small part of the total, therefore the county government cannot be blamed for a condition which is due to the local government where the farms are situated.

Cost of Division.

Below is given a short detailed resume of what it will cost Pennington county, if set off, to organize and run one year, or until taxes begin to be paid in:

The total bonded indebtedness of Red Lake county is		93,339.13
The floating indebtedness, (no cash on hand) is		13,007.94
The amount borrowed from the Ditch Fond by the General Fund is		20,000.00
The total outstanding debt of Red Lake County is therefore,		$126,347.07
In case of division the law requires the deduction of cash on hand, if any, and the value of the County buildings only (no grounds or fixtures.)
Then deduct value of new court house at cost	37,000.00
Deduct value of Jail and Sheriff's residence	3,000.00
Total amount to deduct from indebtedness		40,000.00
Balance left to be divided between the two counties		$86,347.07

The division of this remaining debt between the two counties is made in proportion to the total assessed valuation of each. The valuation of the proposed Pennington County is $2,139,658.00. The valuation of diminished Red Lake County is $1,710,307.00.

Therefore, the proposed Pennington County's share of the $86,347.07 debt is		$48,354.00
Interest on this bonded debt for one year (or until taxes are paid in) is about		2,400.00
There are 66000 instruments to be transcribed in the Register of Deeds office of which Pennington gets 2-3 or 44000, and which will cost, according to law, an average of 25c each or		11,000.00
It will take about 100 books and indexes to transcribe the records in the Register of Deeds office at an average price of $22.00 each or		2,200.00
It will cost to transcribe the judgements and records in the Clerk of Court's office		500.00
Cost of 25 printed form books in the Clerk of Court's office at $25.00 each		625.00
Cost of transcribing tax books and records, road and ditch records, transfer plats, etc., in the Auditor's office		2,000.00
Cost of 40 form and record books in Auditor's office at $25.00 each		1,000.00
Cost of record books and blanks for Judge of Probate, Treasurer, Sheriff, Surveyor, County Attorney, Coroner, County Superintendent of Schools, Court Commissioner, etc.,		1,000.00
Thief River Falls speakers say their city will give the old city hall and jail for court house purposes if the proposed Pennington county is set off. But as it is not fit in its present form, it will have to be remodeled and fitted with office rooms at a cost which any contractor will tell you to be not far from		3,000.00
Then it must be furnished with vaults or safes, desks, counters, files, stationary, tax-tables, adding machines, etc., etc., at a cost approximating		5,000.00
Then again, this court house and jail must be maintained and run. Heat, light, janitor service, telephones, auditing the accounts and books, printing, jail expenses, jailor's salary, board for prisoners, two terms of court, court deputies, grand and petit jurors, etc., all of which, based on the last financial statement, will cost Pennington county each year about		6,700.00
The salaries of the officers in a new county are based by law partly on population, according to the last state or national census, and partly on assessed valuation.
The 1905 state census gives Red Lake county a population of	15,955
By the same census the proposed Pennington county would have a population of	9,231
And diminished Red Lake county would have a population of	6,724
The laws of 1905, Sec. 492 would give the Auditor of the new county a yearly salary of		1,200.00
The same law would give the treasurer a yearly salary of		1,200.00
Under the law the County Commissioners in the new county would get $125.00 each per year or		625.00
The law would give the Sheriff a yearly salary of		800.00
The law would give the Clerk of Court a yearly salary of		750.00
The law would give the Judge of Probate a yearly salary of		1,000.00
The Superintendent of Schools would be paid a yearly salary of about		1,000.00
and would also be allowed his traveling expenses as now		250.00
The County Attorney would be paid a yearly salary of about		1,000.00
Adding up the above, we find that at the end of the first year the total indebtedness and expenditures of the proposed Pennington county would be		$91,604.00

As there will be no money to start the county with, and no taxes can come in before Jan., 1912, the law allows the county commissioners of a new county to float a bond issue (without the people's vote) to the amount of $10,000. Totaling the expenses for one year, above enumerated, we have the sum of $43,250.00. As the only cash it can get for the first year is the $10,000, from the bond issue, Pennington county will have over $33,000 floating indebtedness at the end of the first year of its existence. This means paying a large interest on county warrants until relieved by another bond issue.

In the second year of its existance Pennington county will begin to get tax money, but how much?

Pennington County's Revenue.

You will note above that the valuation of Pennington county for the first year of its existence will be $2,139,658.00.

Under the law the greatest amount the county commissioners can levy for county revenue purposes (out of which fund all salaries and running expenses are paid) is 5 mills. This levy will bring in $10,698.00, (provided all taxes are paid.)

Now note that the salaries paid foot up a total of	$7,825.00
And the average running expenses could not be less than	5,000.00
Making a total yearly average expense of	$12,825.00
Deducting the total county revenue tax levy	10,698.00
Leaves a deficit or an amount deeper in debt every year of	$2,127.00

And this is presuming that the taxes are all paid in, which we know are not.

So you see that even if $10,000.00 were cut off from the organization expenses above outlined, Pennington county would still have over $80,000.00 bonded and floating indebtedness and would "RUN IN THE HOLE" every year to the extent of over $2,000.00.

With such plain facts and figures laid before them can the tax payers be blamed for doing some hard thinking and coming to the conclusion that county division is NOT a good thing, and that they are making up their minds all over the county to VOTE AGAINST DIVISION and that they ARE NOT GOING TO HELP Thief River Falls to get a county seat that way.

Read the articles in this issue for proof of these statements.

WHO PAYS THE FREIGHT

The campaign for county division is about over, and Prof. Hay in the guise of editor of the Thief River Falls papers has labored long and furiously to prejudice the farmers of Red Lake county against the people at the county seat with but one object in view—to benefit a few real estate boomers of Thief River Falls, at the expense of themselves, the farmers. What little tax Hay pays, he claimed exemption on, and when he got it had little left to pay, so of course he cares not what expenses he helps saddle on to Red Lake county, as he can pack his few books and move at any time. He is also grieved that the county is paying such men as Joseph Perrault and S. L. Lewis, who put in nine hours of hard work a day in the auditor's office, $75.00 per month, but he draws $2000 from the tax payers of the city of Thief River Falls for nine months residence there, the most of which he devotes to telling the farmer how he ought to vote, which would be bad enough if he confined himself to the truth which he does not. When a

HANS CHRISTIAN HANSON

The funeral of the late Hans Christian Hansen, one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Red Lake Falls, took place Tuesday, Nov. 1, at the Presbyterian church, the Rev. Hughes officiating. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. The deceased had been ailing for two years, but since his return to this city, last month, from St. Hilaire, he failed rapidly, and death came last Thursday evening. He was a man of good Christian character, a model husband and father, so that his presence in the home, and neighborhood, will be greatly missed. He was born in Denmark, March 7, 1862, and came to America in May, 1883, came to Red Lake Falls in 1887, was married in November 1888. There are seven daughters, Olga, Eleanor, Edith, Inez, Myrtle, Alice and Ellen, besides Mrs. Hansen, to mourn his loss. Let all the neighbors and friends know, that their kindness to the bereaved is very much appreciated, and they wish through the columns of this paper to express their sincere thanks, especially do they thank the Odd Fellow, Rebekah and Woodmen lodges and the pupils and the teachers of the Washington school for the beautiful wreaths of flowers. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their present sorrow.

Road and Bridge Appropriations

Eleven Reservation Towns Have Drawn Out More Than They've Paid In.

More than half of the argument used by the Thief River Falls people in the reservation towns to inflame the good people living there against Red Lake County, has been the statement that the reservation towns did not receive their share of the road and bridge money of the county. This statement is untrue. Here is a table compiled directly from the county record books, showing in dollars and cents exactly how much road and bridge tax has been levied in the past five years, in the eleven towns.

County Road and Bridge tax levy as extended in the Townships above as appears from the Abstract of Tax, for the years as shown on file in the County Auditor's office.

So it appears from these records the Eleven Reservation Towns have paid into the county treasurer in road and bridge taxes $2239.46. Now how much have they drawn out in the same time? The records of the auditor's office show that during the same time these eleven towns have received road and bridge appropriation to the amount of $2999.00, that is $759.54 more than they paid in. This means that the rest of the county has helped to pay for roads and bridges on the reservation to the extent of over $759.00.

Now what have the reservation people to complain of in that?

Who Wastes County Money?

For several years Thief River Falls has been accusing the Red Lake Falls people and the county government of graft and crookedness and wasting county money. Finally they filed written charges with the Public Examiner and Governor at St. Paul, and were given a chance last spring to prove what they had been claiming. The public examiner sent a deputy to Red Lake Falls and he spent several days in going over the public records of the auditor's and treasurer's offices to find out whether the charges made by Thief River Falls people were true or not. He had authority to examine every book and paper and record in these offices and he did make a thorough examination. Then the governor appointed as referee to hear the testimony, the Hon. Judge Matson of Norman county, who was entirely disinterested, and ordered the attorney general to accompany Judge Matson to Red Lake Falls and to hold a public hearing and trial upon the charges filed, and determine whether or not there was graft or wrong doing in the

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE FOR HIGH TAXES?

(By mistake, the make-up man put the first of this article on page 4. Read page 4, then the following.)

objected to was that levied for the court house.

And the highest tax levy for county purposes during the last six years (except the four mill levy for court house last year,) was levied on motion of Dan Shaw, the Theif River Falls commissioner, that of 1907, the rate being 8.82 mills.

For all other county taxes levied during the last nine years, every member of the county board is responsible, and if they were too high, Thief River Falls should ask its own county commissioners about it.

Now as you know the county tax is levied by a resolution, drawn and offered by some member of the board stating what the tax will be, adopted by the board. If you will examine the county records, you will find that for five of these nine years the resolution stating the amount of tax was drawn and offered by the county commissioner from Thief River Falls, and who favored Thief River Falls. So they were first responsible for five of the nine tax levies, and the resolution which provided for the high rate of tax levy of county taxes in the last six years (except the four mill court house levy), was drawn and offered by Commissioner Dan Shaw of Thief River Falls, in 1907, and provided for a levy of 8.82 mills.

The Thief River Falls papers are asking what was meant by those "Other Special Taxes."

Hadn't they better ask Dan Shaw? He knows, for he drew the resolution to levy the taxes.

Now when you have read these figures, who will you blame for the taxes? If you have any doubts as to the truth of any statement in this article, write to the county auditor or to the secretary of the anti-division committee at Red Lake Falls, and a certified copy of the records will be sent to you.

Talking about high taxes, does Thief River Falls ever tell you how high their own taxes are, and how much their city run in debt from poor management? The people who are running Thief River Falls have run their city so badly in debt, that their taxes are enormous, and their credit so poor that they have been trying nearly a year to sell an issue of city bonds without success.

THE SPECTATOR TURNS TURTLE

Before the primary election the St. Hilaire Spectator was neutral on the county division proposition and had published interviews showing that St. Hilaire people are very much opposed to county division. Since the primary election the paper has in its editorial expressions shown an inclination to be somewhat tippy and last week made a compelte flop. All people seem to be of the same opinion as to what the Spectator expects will be the reward in case the county is divided.

COST OF RUNNING TWO COUNTIES

mainder of Red Lake county $1,710,807. The auditor of Red Lake county receives a salary of $1200 per year, and clerk hire. The county treasurer receives the same salary as the auditor and clerk hire. As the law provides (Revised Laws of Minnesota for 1905, Section 492,) that in counties where the assessed valuation does not exceed four million dollars, both the county auditor and county treasurer shall receive $1200 per year and clerk hire, it follows that in case of division, the auditor and treasurer of Red Lake and Pennington counties would receive $1200 each, thus doubling the present salary.

Under the law, the present county commissioners of Red Lake county receive a salary of $175 per year, each, amounting to $875 for the five. In case of division, under the law, the commissioners of Red Lake and Pennington counties would receive $125 per year each, amounting to $725 for each county, nearly double the present salaries. Besides their salary, the commissioners receive mileage and extra pay for ditch meetings, and two counties would have to pay ten men instead of five as at present.

Under the law (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 470,) Red Lake county must pay its sheriff at least one thousand dollars per year and as much more as the board sees fit, besides his expenses. Under the same law, in case of division Pennington and Red Lake counties must each pay its sheriff at least eight hundred dollars and expenses.

Under the law, (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 335,) Red Lake county pays its clerk of court $800 per year. In case of division, under the same law, Pennington would pay its clerk $750 per year and the remaining Red Lake county $650 per year.

Under the law, (General Laws of 1909, Chapter 311,) Red Lake county now pays its judge of probate $1350 per year and clerk hire. Under the same law, in case of division, Pennington would pay its judge of probate $1000 pear year and Red Lake $725 per year with clerk hire for each.

The present county attorney of Red Lake county receives $1200 per year. In case of division, each county would undoubtedly pay its county attorney at least $1000 per year, as no attorney of any ability would work for less.

Under the law, the county superintendent of any county must be paid not less than ten dollars for each organized school district in the county and $250 for expenses. Red Lake county now contains 115 school districts and the county superintendent receives a salary of $1200. In case of division, each county would probably pay its superintendent at least $1000, as no teacher able to fill the place would take the office for less, and do all the work connected with it.

If we add up the salary given above and without counting the clerk hire, for any office, mileage or expenses or extra pay for the commissioners or sheriff, we find that Red Lake county now pays its officers $9075 per year, and in case of division, Pennington county, under the law would pay the same set of officers $7925 and diminished Red Lake county $7550, a total salary in the two counties of $15475—that is to say in case of division, it will cost the tax payers of what is now Red Lake county $6400 more in these officers salaries alone to run the two counties than it does to run the present Red Lake county. And this is a moderate statement. Besides this you will have to pay clerk hire for two auditors, two treasurers, two judges of probate, and the mileage and expenses of two sheriffs and of ten county commissioners instead of five.

In the face of all this the Thief River Falls people tell you that if you want to economize, you must divide the county and run two counties to save money.

Now in addition to the above, here are some more expenses which will be doubled by the division of Red Lake county. The following figures are taken from the financial statement of Red Lake county, showing the amounts expended in 1909, and are correct in every particular, and certified to by the county auditor. By consulting the financial statement, which was published in the newspapers of the county last March, you may prove every figure given here. If the county is divided, two court houses instead of one must be maintained, heated, furnished, provided with janitor, telephones, blanks, books and stationery. In 1909 Red Lake county paid $171.12 for lights, $278.60 for fuel, $147.55 for telephone rent and use, $600 for janitor, $2100.36 for blank books, blanks, stationery and supplies for the county offices, total of $3301.61. These are only the ordinary expenses which must be paid every year.

The law provides that every county must have an auditing board to check up the auditor's and treasurer's books.

In 1909 Red Lake county paid its auditing board $243. This will be doubled in the two counties. The law provides for certain official printing in each county. In 1909 Red Lake county paid $883.63 for its printing, and this was much less than it has been in many other years. This will be doubled in the two counties.

Each county will necessarily maintain a jail, and the law provides for the payment of a jailor's salary, and the board of prisoners. In 1909 Red Lake county paid for jailor's salary $562 and for board of prisoners $326.98. A total of $888.98. There is no reason to doubt that this would be doubled in maintaining two counties.

The law provides for holding two terms of the district court each year, in Red Lake county, and as it is customary through the state to hold at least two terms of court yearly in each county, it is safe to say that Pennington county would also demand two terms a year to take care of its court business. Terms of court are expensive. In 1909 Red Lake county paid grand jurors $387.10, to petit jurors $901.94, to court deputies $45, to clerk of court deputies $76.50, for witness fees $50.72; a total of $1461.20. These were only the ordinary expenses of the court and are in fact less than they have been in several other years. To hold four terms of court in the two counties, would cost twice as much.

All the above expenses added together make a total of $6778.48, and comprise the ordinary running expenses of the county for the year 1909, and they are the expenses which any county would ordinarily and necessarily incur and pay during the running year. If you divide Red Lake county, each of the counties left by the division must pay this amount as a necessary result of its existence and adding this amount to the $6400 in officers salaries, we find that by making two counties out of Red Lake, the tax payers must pay their extra $13178.48 every year as a penalty for the pleasure they experienced by creating Pennington county; that is to say, where you now pay $13178.48 for these expenses and salaries in Red Lake county, if you make two counties out of Red Lake, you will be paying $26,356.96 for the same things.

Can you see how you are going to save any money on that? Perhaps you will say, "Well I will live in Pennington County, and I won't have to pay the expenses of Red Lake county," but you must remember that the expenses of Pennington county will be practically the same as those of Red Lake county are before the division and you won't have the help of all the tax payers of Red Lake county to pay those expenses with. It will be just the same as if you are today supporting your family on one hundred sixty acres of land, and tomorrow you will lose half of your land, but you have the same family to support. Can you see how that is a benefit to you, or how you are going to save money by it?

is always that which is inspired with the spirit of loyalty. At the same time in the party which long holds office the spirit of insurgency is sure to prevail. Thus in this state it is notorious that for years the Republican party has been split up into contending and antagonistic factions. Many Republicans have for years supported the candidates of their party under protest and of course the support has been half hearted. When as a result of the Dunn-Collins imbrolio Governor Johnson became the candidate of the Democratic party and a large faction formerly Republicans eagerly embraced the opportunity it offered to discipline the faction to which they were opposed. Governor Johnson's subsequent popularity added to his strength. People who never before voted the Democratic ticket got the habit. At each subsequent election it was easier for Republican malcontents to act independently and according to their judgement. The nucleus of an increasing independent vote was thus formed, and it was formed almost of men exclusively who had been accustomed to vote the Republican ticket. Except in Governor Johnson's first campaign the old Democratic party remained to the end practically a unit in his support.

Another Indication of the Popular Trend.

Then we must take in this connection the nature of the appeal made this year to the independent vote. It emanates from quarters to which people naturally look for guidance. The appeal is a moral one. It finds its most fertile friends in the home and in the church. Good women are praying daily that in the interest of the children to whom they have given birth the temptation of the open saloon may be removed from their path. From hundreds of pulpits the plea will this week be made to voters for the cause of righteousness. If the effectiveness of those appeals the nature of the meetings addressed by Mr. Youngdahl and his associates furnishes convincing evidence. He at least is not talking to deaf ears. Where ever he goes; men, women and children crowd the halls or churches in which he speaks to the doors. That voters are being influenced by him and his fellow workers to break away from their accustomed political affiliations there can be no kind of question.

Gray and Eberhart's Methods Contrasted

The attitude of the candidates on the question of temperance regulation is in marked contrast. Mr. Gray leaves no doubt in the minds of the friends of reform as to where he stands. He appeals to the advocates of county option by telling them point blank that he is for county option. If elected he will recommend to the legislature the county option law and as far as he properly may, he will exercise the influence of the executive office to secure its enactment. Mr. Eberhart on the other hand approaches the electors of the state with the brewers, the distillers and the saloons behind him to tell them if they insist on it he will sign a county option law. In the meantime the organization behind him and the force with which he is affiliated are bending every energy to bring about the defeat of county option on the state books.

A Case in Point.

Take a case in point. In Polk county with the aid of the brewers and the saloon vote and the unscrupulous use of money, Senator A. D. Stephens managed to secure the nomination at the primaries and the defeat of John Sangstad by a narrow margin. The temperance Republicans of the district feeling that Mr. Stephens won the contest by unfair means, and consequently disinclined to submit to its result, decided to have Mr. Sangstad make the race again in the general election and by the use of stickers try to elect him. Now John Sangstad is as good a Republican as A. D. Stephens, indeed a more progressive one as his legislative record indicates. One would think in such a case that if it wanted to be fair Governor Eberhart's organization would keep its hands off and allow the people to make their own choice. The Republican organization is supporting Stephens. It sent Senator Nelson into the district, and while there Senator Nelson took occasion to make one of his vitriolic attacks upon Mr. Saugstad and the methods adopted by Mr. Sangtad's friends on the ground that they were flying in the face of the party nomination and that their course was subversive of party dicipline. Senator Nelson's own action in opposing as characteristic a party measure as the tariff bill and in denouncing a railroad bill prepared by the attorney general and bearing the endorsement of President Taft as being submitted at corporation dictation to attain corporation ends is worth considering in this connection.

Cavils of Eberhart.

The governor complains of being misrepresented by Mr. Gray and makes an argument whose design is to induce those who favor county option to believe that he is as good a friend to county option as Mr. Gray. But when it is put up to him point blank whether he is in favor of or opposed to county option he dodges. Why does he not say squarely if he favors county option that he does? It is the one question at issue in the campaign. It is the subject of discussion at every fireside and wherever men meet. The governor must have considered it. There could be no danger of misrepresenting him if for once he would say just what he thinks about it.

Governor Johnson Misrepresented

Within the past week Governor Eberhart has given it out that in his straddle of the county option issue he is following the example of Governor Johnson. Now the facts in the case which lead to Mr. Johnsons' addressing a communication to the house on this subject are these. Governor Johnson had recently closed the Cole campaign. In that campaign no reference was made in either the Republican or the Democratic convention to county option. In the entire campaign no voter ever put the question up to either Mr. Cole or Mr. Johnson. It was not even remotely referred to in any way in their campaign speeches. Other issues absorbed public attention in both the state and local campaigns of that year. Governor Johnson had already laid his message before the legislature and as the question of county option never cocurred to him he never mentioned it. When at a meeting of the legislature subsequent to the delivering of the message a few Republican leaders were casting about for some means of embarrassing the governor and it occurred to Dr. Gates that the way to do it was to ask the governor to make a recommendation on this subject, and a Republican legislature was induced on the plea that it would give the party an advantage to take the unprecedented course of passing a resolution asking the governor to give his views on this subject. Naturally the governor resented this attempt at dictation and the interference with executive prerogaties it involed. There is no parallel at all between his course and that of a candidate for office who refuse to define his attitude on a question at issue in the campaign before the people whom he is making a plea for support.

The Injection of Dan Lawler.

A peculiar phase of the campaign was presented when the services of Dan Lawler were retained on behalf of the democratic candidate. Mr. Lawler, then mayor of St. Paul, took an active part in the meeting in which Mr. Gray was chosen as the Democratic nominee. In fact he seconded his nomination. In doing so, refering to Mr. Gray's attitude and the fact that the brewers and distillers had signified an intention of givng their support to Governor Eberhart, "we hold," he said, "no brief for the liquor interests." Whether Mr. Lawler has since received a retainer does not appear, but it is at least certain that the argument he makes is an argument of which the liquor interests approve that he is now associated with their agents and that his appeals meet with the applause of their partisans. How effective the work Mr. Lawler is doing is no one can say. But this at least can be said, that the fact that his services and the services of others like him have been enlisted makes the issue as between the liquor interests and the people of the state every day clearer. Whatever may be said of Mr. Gray's support the fact that the brewers and distillers are exhausting every effort to secure the election of Eberhart and the control of the Republican organization and the Republican legislature is apparent to everyone who is not wilfully blind. The election of Mr. Eberhart will cinch the hold these interests have on the representation of the people. It is no longer a contest between Republicans and Democrats. It is a contest between the brewers and the friends of a government of the people free from dictation.

—PAUL PRY.

THE OLEO-MARGARINE LAW

Why did the Congress of the United States enact the present oleomargarine law which provides for an internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound on artificially colored oleomargarine? Was it to permit the butter producers of the country to exact a high price for butter as has been claimed? To make such a claim is a pretty serious indictment of our federal law making body. Of course butter is higher in price than it was ten years ago but so are other necessities of life. The percentage of oleomargarine now being put upon the market bear a higher ratio to the amount of butter consumed than it did ten years ago. This coupled with the fact that less than three per cent of the oleomargarine sold is taxed at ten cents per pound proves that the oleomargarine law has absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter.

Congress enacted this law to prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. The law was never intended to prevent the honest sale of oleomargarine or to enhance the interests of the butter producers of the country, but rather protect the one against fraud in the purchase of butter or oleomargarine and the other against fraudulent competition.

Congress intended to compel the sale of oleomargarine in its natural color (which is white or nearly so) instead of in the natural color of butter (which is yellow.) Congress at the same time reduced the former tax of two cents per pound on oleomagarine to one-fourth of a cent per pound when the product is not artificially colored to look like butter.

Congress used its taxing power to prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine because it had no other effective means of accomplishing that result. When oleomargarine is put upon the market in its natural color, thus making it impossible to commit fraud, the tax is one and three fourths cents less per pound than under any previous oleomargarine law.

The butter producers of the country are benefited by oleomargarine legislation only in so far as the integrity of the dairy industry is sustained, a benefit which is shared by every other citizen. It is a most important branch of agriculture and it is quite as essential to prevent the destruction of an agricultural industry by fraud as it is to prevent the destruction of our banking industry or any of the other industries in which every citizen is interested.

Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acrid formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.
I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S.S.S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S.S.S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.
THOS. POTTS.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S.S.S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. Clothcraft Stands the Acid Test

YOU always find in your Clothcraft suit a regularly signed, legal, binding guaranty that the suit is pure wool.

That guaranty could not be given if the makers and we ourselves did not absolutely know the goods to be pure wool.

This is the test: Pure wool boiled in caustic potash completely dissolves. If there is any cotton in the mixture, it remains.

Every piece of cloth coming from the mills must be able to stand this test before it is accepted for Clothcraft.

Wool lasts. Wool keeps its stylish shape and color. When you can have all-wool guaranteed at $10 to $25 it is foolish to take anything less. Then come in today and pick out your Clothcraft suit or overcoat.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death. In the hall Gertrude and her fiance, Jack Bailey, had conversed in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found unconscious at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodge-keeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halsey mysteriously disappeared. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halsey had a talk in the library with a woman before he disappeared. New cook disappears. Miss Innes learned Halsey was alive. Dr. Walker's face becomes livid at mention of the name of Nina Carrington. Evidence was secured from a tramp that a man, supposedly Halsey, had been bound and gagged and thrown into an empty box car. Gertrude was missing. Hunting for her, Miss Innes ran into a man and fainted. A confederate of Dr. Walker confessed his part in the mystery.

CHAPTER XXIX.—Continued.

"She struck me as being an ugly customer, and when she left, about 11 o'clock, and went across to the Armstrong place, I was not far behind her. She walked all around the house first, looking up at the windows. Then she rang the bell, and the minute the door was opened she was through it, and into the hall."

"How long did she stay?"

"That's the queer part of it," Riggs said eagerly. "She didn't come out that night at all. I went to bed at daylight, and that was the last I heard of her until the next day, when I saw her on a truck at the station, covered with a sheet. She'd been struck by the express and you would hardly have known her—dead, of course. I think she stayed all night in the Armstrong house, and the agent said she was crossing the track to take the up train to town when the express struck her."

"Another circle!" I exclaimed. "Then we are just where we started."

"Not so bad as that, Miss Innes," Riggs said eagerly. "Nina Carrington came from the town in California where Mr. Armstrong died. Why was the doctor so afraid of her? The Carrington woman knew something. I lived with Dr. Walker seven years, and I know him well. There are few things he is afraid of. I think he killed Mr. Armstrong out in the west somewhere, that's what I think. What else he did I don't know—but he dismissed me and pretty nearly throttled me—for telling Mr. Jamieson here about Mr. Innes' having been at his office the night he disappeared and about my hearing them quarreling."

"What was it Warner overheard the woman say to Mr. Innes in the library?" the detective asked me.

"She said 'I knew there was something wrong from the start. A man isn't well one day and dead the next without some reason.'"

How perfectly it all seemed to fit!

CHAPTER XXX.

When Churchyards Yawn.

It was on Wednesday Riggs told us the story of his connection with some incidents that had been previously unexplained. Halsey had been gone since the Friday night before, and with the passage of each day I felt that he might be carried thousands of miles in the box-car, locked in, perhaps, without water or food. I had read of cases where bodies had been found locked in cars on isolated sidings in the west, and my spirits went down with every hour.

"But the Face That Showed in the Light—"

His recovery was destined to be almost as sudden as his disappearance, and was due directly to the tramp Alex had brought to Sunnyside. It seems the man was grateful for his release, and when he learned something of Halsey's whereabouts from another member of his fraternity—for it is a fraternity—he was prompt in letting us know.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Jamieson, who had been down at the Armstrong house trying to see Louise—and failing—was met near the gate at Sunnyside by an individual precisely as repulsive and unkempt as the one Alex had captured. The man knew the detective, and he gave him a piece of dirty paper, on which was scrawled the words: "He's at City hospital, Johnsville." The tramp who brought the paper pretended to know nothing, except this: The paper had been passed along from a "hobo" in Johnsville, who seemed to know the information would be valuable to us.

Again the long-distance telephone came into requisition. Mr. Jamieson called the hospital, while we crowded around him. And when there was no longer any doubt that it was Halsey, and that he would probably recover, we all laughed and cried together. I am sure I kissed Liddy, and I have had terrible moments since when I seem to remember kissing Mr. Jamieson, too, in the excitement.

Anyhow, by 11 o'clock that night Gertrude was on her way to Johnsville, 380 miles away, accompanied by Rosie. The domestic force was now down to Mary Anne and Liddy, with the under-gardener's wife coming every day to help out. Fortunately, Warner and the detectives were keeping bachelor hall in the lodge. Out of deference to Liddy they washed their dishes once a day, and they concocted queer messes, according to their several abilities. They had one triumph that they ate regularly for breakfast, and that clung to their clothes and their hair the rest of the day. It was bacon, hardtack and onions, fried together. They were almost pathetically grateful, however, I noticed, for an occasional broiled tenderloin.

It was not until Gertrude and Rosie had gone and Sunnyside had settled down for the night, with Winters at the foot of the staircase, that Mr. Jamieson broached a subject he had evidently planned before he came.

"She Walked All Around the House First, Looking Up at the Windows."

"Miss Innes," he said, stopping me as I was about to go to my room upstairs, "how are your nerves tonight?"

"I have none," I said happily. "With Halsey found, my troubles have gone."

"I mean," he persisted, "do you feel as though you could go through with something rather unusual?"

"The most unusual thing I can think of would be a peaceful night. But if anything is going to occur, don't dare to let me miss it."

"Something is going to occur," he said. "And you're the only woman I can think of that I can take along." He looked at his watch. "Don't ask me any questions, Miss Innes. Put on heavy shoes, and some old dark clothes, and make up your mind not to be surprised at anything."

Liddy was sleeping the sleep of the just when I went upstairs, and I hunted out my things cautiously. The detective was waiting in the hall, and I was astonished to see Dr. Stewart with him. They were talking confidentially together, but when I came down they ceased. There were a few preparations to be made: the locks to be gone over, Winters to be instructed as to renewed vigilance, and then, after extinguishing the hall light, we crept, in the darkness, through the front door, and into the night.

I asked no questions. I felt that they were doing me honor in making me one of the party, and I would show them I could be as silent as they. We went across the fields, passing through the woods that reached almost to the ruins of the stable, going over stiles now and then, and sometimes stepping over low fences. Once only somebody spoke, and then it was an emphatic bit of profanity from Dr. Stewart when he ran into a wire fence.

We were joined at the end of five minutes by another man, who fell into step with the doctor silently. He carried something over his shoulder which I could not make out. In this way we walked for perhaps 20 minues.

The doctor was puffing somewhat when we finally came to a halt. I confess that just at that minute even Sunnyside seemed a cheerful spot. We had paused at the edge of a level cleared place, bordered all around with primly trimmed evergreen trees. Between them I caught a glimpse of starlight shining down on rows of white headstones and an occasional more imposing monument or towering shaft. In spite of myself, I drew my breath in sharply. We were on the edge of the Casanova churchyard.

I saw now both the man who had joined the party and the implements he carried. It was Alex, armed with two long-handled spades. After the first shock of surprise, I flatter myself I was both cool and quiet. We went in single file between the rows of headstones, and although, when I found myself last, I had an instinctive desire to keep looking back over my shoulder, I found that, the first uneasiness past, a cemetery at night is much the same as any other country place, filled with vague shadows and unexpected noises. Once, indeed—but Mr. Jamieson said it was an owl, and I tried to believe him.

In the shadow of the Armstrong granite shaft we stopped. I think the doctor wanted to send me back.

"It's no place for a woman," I heard him protesting angrily. But the detective said something about witnesses, and the doctor only came over and felt my pulse.

"Anyhow, I don't believe you're any worse off here than you would be in that nightmare of a house," he said finally, and put his coat on the steps of the shaft for me to sit on.

There is a sense of desecration, of a reversal of the everlasting fitness of things, in resurrecting a body from its mother clay. And yet that night, in the Casanova churchyard, I sat quietly by, and watched Alex and Mr. Jamieson steaming over their work, without a single qualm, except the fear of detection.

The doctor kept a keen lookout, but no one appeared. Once in a while he came over to me and gave me a reassuring pat on the shoulder.

"I never expected to come this," he said once. "There's one thing sure—I'll not be suspected of complicity. A doctor is generally supposed to be handier at burying folks than at digging them up."

The uncanny moment came when Alex and Jamieson tossed the spades on the grass, and I confess I hid my face. There was a period of stress, I think, while the heavy coffin was being raised. I felt that my composure was going, and, for fear I would shriek, I tried to think of something else—what time Gertrude would reach Halsey—anything but the grisly reality that lay just beyond me on the grass.

And then I heard a low exclamation from the detective and I felt the pressure of the doctor's fingers on my arm.

"Now, Miss Innes," he said gently. "If you will come over—"

I held on to him frantically, and somehow I got there and looked down. The lid of the casket had been raised and a silver plate on it proved we had made no mistake. But the face that showed in the light of the lantern was a face I had never seen before. The man who lay before us was not Paul Armstrong!

CHAPTER XXXI.

Between Two Fireplaces.

What with the excitement of the discovery, the walk home under the stars in wet shoes and draggled skirts, and getting upstairs and undressed without rousing Liddy, I was completely used up. What to do with my boots was the greatest puzzle of all, there being no place in the house safe from Liddy, until I decided to slip upstairs the next morning and drop them into the hole the "ghost" had made in the trunkroom wall.

I went asleep as soon as I reached this decision, and in my dreams I lived over again the events of the night. Again I saw the group around the silent figure on the grass, and again, as had happened at the grave, I heard Alex's voice, tense and triumphant:

"Then we've got them," he said. Only, in my dreams, he said it over and over until he seemed to shriek it in my ears.

I wakened early, in spite of my fatigue, and lay there thinking. Who was Alex? I no longer believed that he was a gardener. Who was the man whose body we had resurrected? And where was Paul Armstrong? Probably living safely in some extraditionless country on the fortune he had stolen. Did Louise and her mother know of the shameful and wicked deception? What had Thomas known, and Mrs. Watson? Who was Nina Carrington?

This last question, it seemed to me, was answered. In some way the woman had learned of the substitution, and had tried to use her knowledge for blackmail. Nina Carrington's own story died with her, but, however it happened, it was clear that she had carried her knowledge to Halsey the afternoon Gertrude and I were looking for clews to the man I had shot on the east veranda. Halsey had been half crazed by what he heard; it was evident that Louise was marrying Dr. Walker to keep the shameful secret, for her mother's sake. Halsey, always reckless, had gone at once to Dr. Walker and denounced him. There had been a scene, and he left on his way to the station to meet and notify Mr. Jamieson of what he had learned. The doctor was active mentally and physically. Accompanied perhaps by Riggs, who had shown himself not overscrupulous until he quarreled with his employer, he had gone across to the railroad embankment, and, by jumping in front of the car, had caused Halsey to swerve. The rest of the story we knew.

That was my reconstructed theory of that afternoon and evening; it was almost correct—not quite.

There was a telegram that morning from Gertrude.

Halsey conscious and improving. Probably home in day or so.

GERTRUDE.

With Halsey found and improving in health, and with at last something to work on, I began that day, Thursday, with fresh courage. As Mr. Jamieson had said, the lines were closing up. That I was to be caught and almost finished in the closing was happily unknown to us all.

It was late when I got up. I lay in my bed, looking around the four walls of the room, and trying to imagine behind what one of them a secret chamber might lie. Certainly, in daylight, Sunnyside deserved its name; never was a house more cheery and open, less sinister in general appearance. There was not a corner apparently that was not open and above-board, and yet, somewhere behind its handsomely papered walls I believed firmly that there lay a hidden room, with all the possibilities it would involve.

I made a mental note to have the house measured during the day to discover any discrepancy between the outer and inner walls, and I tried to recall again the exact wording of the paper Jamieson had found.

Takes In Circuitous Routes

Letter Journeys Long Distance to Reach Destination Ten Feet from the Starting Point.

One of the most remarkable mail routes in the world is that in which a letter journeys in going from Beebe Plain, Vt., to Beebe Plain, Quebec, Canada. While the two offices are within ten feet of each other—are located in the same room, in fact—a letter mailed from one office to the other must make a trip of 294 miles—67 miles in Canada and the remainder in the United States.

The plain, old-fashioned store building which is situated on the international boundary line contains both the United States and the Canadian offices. There are separate entrances to each, but both are in the same room, have the same lobby and there are no partitions to mark the division between the domain of Uncle Sam and the possession of King Edward.

"If you mail a letter from the Vermont side addressed to the Quebec side," says the postmaster, "it goes from here to the junction, then to Newport, then to White River Junction, and back to Lennoxville, Quebec, over the Boston and Maine. There it is transferred to the Grand Trunk and goes to a south-bound mail pouch and comes to Stanstead Junction and then back to this same building, a distance of 294 miles.

"If we wish to mail a letter from the American side to Derby Line, it must go to White River Junction and then come back over the official route."

At the Half-Century Mark.

Youth is eternal to him who believes in eternity. To me youth means anywhere from eight onward. I was an exceedingly old person at eight and I trust I violate no confidence when I confess a youthful exuberance now that I have bumped against the half-way post. Fifty is a splendid time for youthful expansion; one's fancy still retains all its ingenuity while one's judgment is bettered by experience. When sitting on the 50 milestone the vane of man's vision points southward to the past and northward to the future with a minimum of oscillation. Rancorous thought and splenetic expression give way to quieter nerves and calmer view, and the mellow lighted vista of the years that have gone soften the heart of the youth of a half century of years.—John Philip Sousa in the Circle.

Was Getting Monotonous.

A handsome woman who had been so unfortunate as to find occasion to divorce not one but several husbands was returning from Nevada. In Chicago she happens to meet her first husband, for whom, by the way, she always has entertained a real affection.

"Upon my soul, if it isn't Charlie!" exclaimed the ex-wife, cordially shaking hands with the gentleman whose name she formerly had borne. "I'm awfully glad to see you, Charlie!" Then, after a wistful expression had come to and been banished from her countenance, she added:

"Old chap, I've often wondered where you were and what you were doing. It was too bad we didn't get on better together. I hope your experience hasn't been as unpleasant as mine. I'm just sick and tired of marrying strangers!"

Will you elect a governor who is advised and controlled by Senator Ed Smith

---

A vote for Gray is a vote for the continuance of John A Johnson's administration

---

The whole Democratic ticket is a good one this year and every Democrat can vote for it with good conscience

---

The Democratic party has an exceptionally strong state ticket this year, and the people would be efficently served if every man on it was elected

---

Why was Senator Ed Smith selected by Governor Eberhart as his campaign manager over the protests of most of the other candidates on the Republican ticket?

Why didn't Governor Eberhart mention the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill in his keynote speech after pronouncing it at Omaha as one of the best ever passed by congress?

Whether a man is in favor of prohibition or opposed to it, there is no reason why he should not be in favor of county option, which will simply give the people of each county an opportunity to decide for themselves whether they want license or no license

Thos D O'Brien should be elected as a judge of the supreme court. Judge O'Brien was appointed to this position by the late Governor Johnson, and has filled the office with credit and distinction The Red Lake county voters should remember Judge O'Brien on election day.

The Gazette hopes that its Democratic readers will bear in mind that this is a year when the Republicans want to help them out because they are Democrats, but because they are right. While the Republican is doing his part in his own way, it behooves the Democrats to see that every one of their voters is gotten to the polls next Tuesday. The Freeborn County Standard, published at Albert Lea, states a fact which will be recalled regarding Democratic votes for Dunn in the first Johnson campaign The Standard says: "While it is true that the brewers will control many votes, Democratic as well as Republican, for Eberhart, it may be recalled that 20,000 or more Democrats voted for Bob Dunn in Gov. Johnson's first campaign, and that the prospect is, now as then that James Gray will get three Republicans votes for every Democratic vote lost on Eberhart "

"The county option issue is vital to the interests of the farmers of Minnesota because it affects them, directly and indirectly, in every phase of life," says Farm, Stock and Home of Minneapolis "It is idle to argue that the saloon problem is one which affects only the towns, and should be regulated by them. County option is, moreover, democratic in the broad sense of that term It allows all the people to vote upon a question that affects all It denies to none a chance to express their views." It recognizes the simple fact that all are affected by the saloon and that it is quite as much the business of the voter; farmer living seven miles from town to decide whether or not his trading point shall be a saloon or dry town as it is the privilege of the man living next door to the postoffice."

YOUR DUTY NEXT TUESDAY

A remarkable feature of the campaign just closing is the spirit of independence shown by the individual voter. We have heard less of the party cry than ever before, while in every direction men are declaring their purpose to vote in accordance with their convictions—for men and measures, rather than for party labels.

Years ago President Garfield wrote in one of his messages that "he serves his party best who serves his country best," and the voters have learned that this year they can serve their country best by breaking away from party ties.

What the result will be when the votes are counted next Tuesday night, no one can say, but indications are plentiful that there is to be one of those great silent revolutions that occasionally take place in this country—one of those revolutions that give us confidence in popular government.

There is every sign that this revolution, which began in the state of Maine two months ago and has been gaining headway at every opportunity since, will be felt in Minnesota. The people are arcused over national issues and they are going to "swat" everybody in sight whom they suspect of being responsible for Aldrichism and Cannonism.

A Democratic congress is predicted by every independent newspaper in the country, and practically every Democratic candidate for governor in the northern states will be elected, more as a vote of protest against the Taft administration and the Aldrich tariff than because of a desire to give power to the Democratic party.

In Minnesota the Republicans have nominated a candidate for governor who has "straddled" every important issue. He has allied himself with the reactionary and corporation influences which have always sought to dominate the politics of the state. The Republican admirers of Roosevelt, Dolliver and LaFollette fail to find in Eberhart any of the qualities of political honesty or progressiveness which characterize the acts and utterances of the leaders of the newer order.

Eberhart has shown himself to be notoriously weak in evrey instance where executive strength and vigor was needed. The very fact that he chose as manager of his campaign the odious Ed. Smith, the recognized leader of the corporation forces in the legislature, is conclusive evidence of the kind of men he would select to manager the business of the state.

An open letter to the people of Minnesota, issued Tuesday over the signatures of John Lind. David C. Bell. S. A. Stockwell and A. W. Rankin, four of the leading citizens of Minneapolis, makes this charge:

"As lieutenant governor Mr. Eberhart not only did nothing to oppose the operations of the Smith machine, but he gave direct assistance to their schemes by placing Smith and other reactionaries in charge of the important committees. The signers of this are a self-constituted committee whose interest in the campaign is that of nonpartisan citizens who desire that politicians like Smith shall be driven out of the control of the governorship as they have been driven out of the legislature."

We believe the people of Red Lake county will take the judgement of such men as Governor Lind, David Bell, Senator Stockwell, and Professor Rankin. These men have no interest in the governorship save the interest that good citizens should have.

This is the issue. James Gray stands for good government. Eberhart stands for Ed. Smith, and bad government.

Millions Against Gray.

The Sleepy Eye Herald-Dispatch says the big brewery interests of the United States, the Anhauser Busch Schlitz-Pabst-Hamm, and other great interests, representing hundreds of millions of dollars, will place a million dollars in Minnesota to defeat Gray. Well, maybe they will succeed, but the whole people will not lay down this fight until brewery domination in American politics is crushed. This paper is not advocating the principles of so called county option, but we do protest in the most vigorous manner all forms of corporate influence in politics in this state, together with Billy Hamm and his emissaries in their effort to beat Gray.

HOW PENNINGTON COUNTY WOULD START

diminished Red Lake will have an assessed valuation of $1,710,307.00, so that Pennington County's share of debt will be about 56 per cent. 56 per cent of $86,347.00, the amount to be divided equals $48,354.00.

From these figures it appears beyond dispute that Pennington County will start out with a debt of a little more than $48,000.00, and no property of any kind to begin to do business with, and as no taxes have been levied for the new county, nothing will be paid for its treasurer for the whole of its first year of existence, nor until the first of March of the following year, when its personal taxes becomes payable.

Now what expenses will the new county have to start out with?

In the first place, they will have to transcribe all records in the register, auditor's and clerk of court's office of the old county which pertain to lands, roads, ditches, judgments, or business in and of the new county. In the register of deeds office of Red Lake County about sixty-six thousand different instruments are on record. As the territory of Pennington County is nearly two-third of the present Red Lake County, about forty-four thousand of these instruments will have to be copied and transcribed into the records of Pennington County. At the rate allowed by law for trasncribing, it will cost an average of twenty-five cents for each of these instruments, (one R. R trust deed; reception No. 2994 cost 22.00 alone to record) which makes $11,000 for this transcribing alone. This is proven by the fact that at the time of the organization of Red Lake County, S. A. Swanson, the register of deeds, copied from the records of Polk County twenty-four thousand instruments, for which, Red Lake County paid him $6,760.00 as appears from the records, certified by the auditor. Pennington will have to buy about one hundred record books, into which to copy these forty-four thousand instruments. These kind of books are very expensive and average a cost of about $22.00 each, so that makes $2,200.00 to be added to the $11,000.00 for transcribing. It will cost about five-hundred dollars to transcribe the necessary records in the clerk of court's office to Pennington County and the new clerk of Pennington County will require about twenty-five record books with printed forms, which will average twenty-five dollars each in cost or $625.00 in all.

It will cost at least two thousand dollars to transcribe to Pennington County the necessary tax books and records, roads and ditch records transfer plats and other records of the auditor's office of Red Lake County, and the new auditor of Pennington County will require at least forty record books, averaging in cost to twenty-five dollars each, making another thousand dollars of expenses. In addition to these, these Judge of Probate, the Treasurer, the Sheriff, the Surveyor, the County Attorney, the Coroner, the County Superintendent and Court Commissioner of Pennington County must each be supplied with costly record books for his office, which will amount at least to one thousand dollars or more.

The new county must be supplied with a court house, and if we admit for the purpose of argument, that Thief River Falls will give it the old city hall and engine house, still it is a fact that this old building is in such condition that the city could not use it for its own purpose, but had to build a better one recently. This means that if Pennington County wanted to use the building it must practicebly repair and remodel it. At the present time, it contains but two offices fit to use, a large unfinished room on the ground floor where the fire engine was kept and a hall in the upper story. It will cost at least three thousand dollars to put it in shape for county purposes. Next each office must be furnished with vault, or safe, desks, files and other necessaries, and a low estimate of the cost of these is five thousand dollars. All these expenses named above, and which must be paid out almost as soon as Pennington County is organized foots up to $26,325.00.

Now in addition to this, we have shown in another article that the actual expense of running the county the first year in county officer's salary, fuel, light, janitor, court and jail expenses amounts to at least $12,978.48.

Also their share of the old Red Lake County debt, $48,000.00 will bear interest at five per cent or more, which they will have to pay during the first year. At five per cent, this interest will be $2,400.00, so that to organize and run Pennington County the first year will cost $40,000.00, in addition to the $48,000.00 of debt which they must assume and as no tax will be collected the first year. At the end of that time Pennington will be $88,000.00 in debt, with very little to show for it except a name and a set of county officers. These figures look big, but you can go over everything for yourself, and see that they represent the actual facts.

The law provides, "Revised Laws of Minnesota for 1909, Section 394," that the new county in order to help furnish money for its organization may issue ten thousand dollars of ten years bonds. This is the only way Pennington County can get, any money during its first year and of course the issue of the bonds will increase its debt by that amount. Are you tax payers so much in love with the name Pennington, that you will vote yourself $98,000.00 in debt with nothing to show for it?

WHO WILL CONTROL PENNINGTON COUNTY?

its adjoining township of North added, will at all times from now on have more votes than all the rest of Pennington County together.

You people who live in the townships are scattered all over the county. You live too far apart to get together on any proposition. Except in your immediate neighborhood, you are strangers to each other. But the great mass of people in Thief River Falls know each other, meet every day to talk over common enterprises. Their 1100 votes cast for one purpose or for the election of one set of officers will overcome your scattered opposition, because you out-siders will not be united. For five years they have voted together, not for the benefit of you farmers, or of Red Lake County, but for the benefit of the city of Thief River Falls, and they are now like a well trained army, with but one object in view, to boost Thief River Falls. If Pennington County is organized, they can elect a full set of county officers from the city of Thief River Falls, men who will do the bidding of their home town, and who will levy taxes on you to build it up. They can divide Pennington County into commissioners districts so that Thief River Falls will absolutely control the board of county commissioners, and indeed, so that three men living in the three different wards of Thief River Falls can be elected members of the county board.

Do you want this proven to you? Here is the proof. Section 420 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota for 1905 reads as follows, "Commissioner Districts —Redistricting —Each county shall be divided into as many districts, numbered consecutively, as it has members of the board. In counties divided into towns, such district shall be bounded by TOWN or WARD lines, but composed of contiguous territories and contains as nearly as practicable an equal population." That is the law. Now Thief River Falls borders on the town of North and the town of Rocksbury, so that Pennington County could be legally divided into commissioner districts, one of which comprise the big first ward alone of Thief River Falls; another, the second ward and the town of North and adjoining towns; and a third, the third ward and the town of Rocksbury and adjoining towns and by controlling the votes as the people of Thief River Falls have shown in the past, they can control it, a commissioner could be elected in each of these three districts, residing in the three respective wards of Thief River Falls and controlling the board of county commissioners.

But they will tell you that the board of Pennington is already named, and only one member of it lives in Thief River Falls, the rest being farmers, and consequently Thief River Falls can not control the board. But in the same breath, they tell you that Red Lake Falls runs and controls the present board of County commissioners of Red Lake County. Yet not one member of the board of Red Lake County lives in Red Lake Falls, and everyone is a farmer. How can you reconcile the two arguments? If Red Lake Falls can and does run the present board, so will Thief River Falls control the board of Pennington.

In every county in this state which contains a large city, it is a fact that that city controls all county elections. In Hennepin County only one county officer, the Superintendent of Schools was elected outside of Minneapolis, and he was so elected only because he has no control over the city schools of Minneapolis.

Why not let well enough alone? You farmers now hold the balance of power in Red Lake County. With two cities opposed to each other, neither one has votes enough to control the county. Each one must call on you for help. You hold the balance of power, and they must do as you say, because they need your votes. That is why Thief River Falls is appealing to you now. That is why they have spent thousands of dollars in the past five years to persuade you to help them out. They need your votes. But if Pennington County is once organized, and Thief River Falls gets what it wants, they won't need your votes any more. They will only need your taxes. They can run things to suit themselves.

ROAD AND BRIDGE APPROPRIATIONS

Thief River Falls people have just as little foundation on truth as the above. They say the town of Black River has received nothing from the road and bridge fund since 1905. The county records show that Black River received $100.00 in 1907, $250.00 in 1908, $300.00 in 1909, and $100.00 in 1910. A total of $850.00 from the road and bridge fund.

They say that Wyandottee has received nothing from the road and bridge fund. The county records show that on July 12, 1910, the county board made an appropriation to Wyandotte of $150.00 from the road and bridge fund, on the condition that Wyandotte should spend an equal amount, but Wyandotte has never drawn this money from the County Treasury.

Another argument of theirs is that the town of Hickory has never received anything from the road and bridge fund since 1905. As a matter of fact, Hickory has never asked the county commissioners for any appropriation, and since the town of Hickory became subject to taxation in Red Lake County, it has only paid into the county treasury in Road and Bridge tax $64.10.

Their whole argument on road and bridge appropriation is based on spite and prejudice, and the juggling of figures, which do not exist. They tell you how much road and bridge money the city of Red Lake Falls received, but they have never told you how much money the city of Thief River Falls has received. Do you know that in the year 1908 Thief River Falls received $3500.00 of road and bridge money from the county, which was more than one-third of all the road and bridge money paid out that year by the county, and the city of Red Lake Falls in the same time only received $779.80 of the road and bridge money. You can verify these statements at the county auditor's office. So you see there are two sides to every story, and Thief River Falls is only telling you their side of it.

Red Lake County has two large rivers and many streams and whenever in the past a bridge has become a necessity in any locality, aid has been given by the county board when asked, regardless where the bridge was to be. If one town has received more than the others, it was because it was proven to the county board that this town needed a bridge. Now don't you think that is good common sense? If each township was to receive back from the county only the money which it actually paid in in road and bridge taxes, the reservation towns would have received $759.00 less than they did receive and if your town had a river running through it which needed to be bridged, you would have to wade the river for many years to come, because you couldn't raise enough money for the bridge yourself and the county could not help you.

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE FOR HIGH TAXES?

For some time Thief River Falls has been trying to convince the people that the county taxes are entirely too high and that Red Lake Falls, or the three county commissioners said to be favorable to Red Lake Falls, are responsible for this state of affairs.

Now let us see who is to blame for these taxes if anybody. An examination of the county records certified by the county auditor shows that the county rate of taxation for the last nine years commencing with 1901 is as follows:

1901	14.17 mills
1902	8.47 mills
1903	8.77 mills
1904	8.07 mills
1905	7.67 mills
1906	7.82 mills
1907	8.82 mills
1908	8.47 mills
1909	8.40 mills and 4 mills for court house.

These taxes were levied each year by the county board. On this board Thief River Falls always had a member of its own and one from the St. Hilaire district favorable to Thief River Falls, and as these two members were always present at the board meetings when taxes were levied, they had the opportunity to object if they considered the taxes too high. But if you will consult the County Records where each commissioner's vote was written down you will find that in the years 1901, 1902, 1904, 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909, (except the four mill court house levy in 1909), the board of commissioners voted UNANIMOUSLY in favor of each tax levy, that is SEVEN out of NINE levies. The board voted unanimously in 1901 when the tax levy was over fourteen mills, the highest rate it has ever been. In 1903 and in 1905, one member of the board voted no because he objected to one item of one thousand dollars for court house purposes, and in 1909, Commissioners Shaw and Anhol voted for each other item of the tax levy for county purposes, so you see the only part of the tax ever man writes anything for the public press or talking from a public platform, he should know the facts before stating them as facts. If he does not know and still conveys the impression that he does, he is misleading the people. If he quotes figures which are incorrect he is guilty of falsehood. This he has done in more than one instance, the greatest of which is where he told the people at a public meeting at Highlanding he could transcribe the records for proposed Pennington county or $2000 when in fact it will cost over $15000. The books for the regsiter's office cost about $22 each and it will require about one hundred making $2200 for the blank books, and it will cost at the legal rate of transcribing, about $110 per book, making $11000 for the work in that office alone, and from $3000 to $5000 for the other offices. (These figures are based on facts, not on guesses.) Now do you think Mr. Hay was stating what he thought to be the truth in that speech, or was he deliberately trying to deceive the voters. Many of his articles and speeches about the unjust tax levies are as badly distorted, and the old adage applies—False in one thing false is all. If he actually wants the public to know the whole truth about the cost of organizing a new county, why does he refuse to debate in public and why have the Thief River Falls papers remained silent on the cost of transcribing, issuing of organization bonds, the expense of conducting the county nearly two years without any taxes received as it will be June 1, 1912. before any great amount of taxes will be paid into the treasury of the proposed new county.

Voters, remember the divisionists have an ax to grind. They are not spending thousands of dollars in this fight just to better the condition of the poor farmers, and remember, that if the county is DIVIDED IT CANNOT BE REUNITED; it is for all the time. So think well before casting your vote on an unknown proposition. It is not like electing a man to office. If he don't live up to his promises, you can kick him out of the office in two years, but if the divisionists do not make good their fairy tale, neither you nor your children will have any recourse, and you will be compelled to pay tribute for your error for all the time.

WHO WASTES COUNTY MONEY?

government of Red Lake county, and the county auditor and the chairman of the county board, C. A. Lindquist, were notified to appear at the trial and defend themselves. Mr. Lindquist is the man against whom Thief River has the greatest spite and the newspapers of that city had been abusing and accusing him more than any one else. A time and place of hearing was set, and the accusers at Thief River Falls were fully notified to appear and make their charges good, but, at the time of the hearing, not a single man of those who had made the charges from Thief River Falls or elsewhere appeared or offered to take any part in the trial or produce any evidence of wrong doing.

What do you think of that? Attorney General Smith was present to help out those who filed the charges, but not a man from Thief River Falls showed up, except the county attorney, and he did not ask a question or offer any proof. The county auditor and Chairman Lindquist were there to meet their accusers and the county records were examined and testimony taken and a full and complete hearing was had. The testimony was all taken and written down and sent to the governor and after examining it, and upon recommendation of the attorney general and of Judge Matson who had conducted the trial, the governor found and decided that there was nothing in the charges and dismissed the whole proceedings.

All the costs of these proceedings which had been stirred up by the Thief River Falls people and at which they failed to appear and make their charges good had to be paid by Red Lake county, and these expenses already paid by the county as appears from the records amount to $348.64, beside which there are several of the bills not paid yet, which amount to $53.54, a total of $402.18, needless expenses and county money wasted, all by reason of the lying charges made by the Thief River boosters.

And that is the kind of charges they are making every day in their newspapers and in their meetings. Will you believe them, when you know that they have once had the chance to prove their charges and failed, so utterly, and you tax payers have already had to pay for their failure?

There is no graft or wrong doing in the county government. If there was, why did not the Thief River Falls people prove it when the governor gave them a chance and they had on their side the attorney general, one of the best lawyers of the state, and a hearing before a disinterested judge?

Because they cannot run Red Lake county to suit themselves, Thief River Falls has a spite against the honest county officers who refuse to become their tools. They want Pennington county because they know that they can and will run it, and you tax payers will have to dance to their music.

Supplement to Gazette

Red Lake Falls, Red Lake Co., Thursday, November, 3 1910.

State Press Favors Non-Partisian Judiciary.

Justice Thomas D. O'Brien's record on the supreme bench is first class, and the non-partisan argument can probably be worked to some advantage.—Willmar Rep. Gazette.

Judge O'Brien will surely be retained on the bench and in his retaining the court will be the gainer for there are none more able and brilliant than he.—Willmar Journal.

Judge O'Brien, the democratic member of the supreme court, is an able, fearless man and should be reelected regardless of party politics.—Cloquet Independent.

Partisan lines should not be drawn in the selection of our judiciary. Judge O'Brien, a Democrat, should receive the endorsement and support of the Republican party in his candidacy.—Wahkon Enterprise.

Mr. O'Brien is one of the ablest lawyers in the state and has already shown that he is the ablest member of the bench. He should certainly receive the united support of all parties at the polls.—Benson Monitor.

Friends of T. D. O'Brien, who was appointed by former Governor Johnson to the supreme bench, will make an effort to have him retained and if possible endorsed by the conventions of both political parties.—Moorhead News.

The democratic state convention endorsed two of the republican nominees for supreme judge and fair-minded voters of all parties, believing in the principles of a non-partisan judiciary, will take pleasure in casting their votes for Justice Thomas Dillon O'Brien.—Fairmont Sentinel.

Justice O'Brien is an appointee of Gov. Johnson and is acknowledged to be one of the most able, upright and worthily eminent jurists of the country. It becomes a matter for the fair-minded citizens of the state to pass upon and decide what they think and will do in such a serious situation of public affairs.—Albert Lea Standard.

Men who are able and on the square are the only ones who will command the support of the Foley Independent in the ensuing campaign, and in line with that policy that paper announces its determination to support T. D. O'Brien, present justice of the Supreme Court. * * * —Princeton Union.

Many of the prominent Republican newspapers of the state are urging the election of Thos. D. O'Brien to the Supreme Court. If the judges could be elected on their merits rather than of party designation there is no doubt that Judge O'Brien would head the list.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

There is said to be a non-partisan movement on foot to retain Judge T. D. O'Brien on the bench. If Judge O'Brien wishes to remain on the bench, it would be a recognition of an able jurist to retain him there. Besides a non-partisan judiciary is much to be desired.—Floodwood Broadaxe.

The appointment of T. D. O'Brien to the supreme bench of the state was one of the happiest selections the late Governor John A. Johnson ever made. One of the state's wisest, broadest and best equipped lawyers, he has brought strength to the bench and credit to the state. Though a Democrat he has given nobody occasion to think of partisanship in any way since he went upon the bench.—Anoka Free Press.

The Fergus Journal says that there has been a great deal said about keeping the judiciary out of politics and that good men ought to be selected regardless of their party affiliations. Judge Thomas D. O'Brien was appointed by the late Governor Johnson and has made a very able and satisfactory judge.—Breckenridge Telegram.

All over the state newspapers are saying a good word for Justice O'Brien of the supreme court. If ever there was a chance for the people to demonstrate that they are in favor of a non-partisan judiciary it is here this fall. O'Brien is able, honest and fearless and if he is defeated it will be simply because he is a Democrat and not a Republican.—Cambridge North Star.

The idea of a non-partisan judiciary is finding favor with many of the papers throughout the state and this should encourage the supporters of the movement to greater activity. Justice O'Brien, the Democratic nominee, wears no corporation's collar and it is decidedly to the interests of the people that he be re-elected.—Foley Independent.

It is gratifying to note the increasing number of influential Republican' papers who advocate the re-election of Judge O'Brien to the supreme bench of this state Judge O'Brien is concededly the ablest member of our supreme court and he should be retained as long as he will accept the office.—Perham Enterprise.

Republicans who think have a chance this year to make their thoughts lead to something more than mere talk. In fact, they have a dozen such chances, but one in particular would be valueable and useful. We refer to the right and duty of such thinking men to vote for Judge T. D. O'Brien, Judge of the Supreme Court. —Fergus Falls Wheelock's Weekly.

There are a number of people in the state who think it would be good politics to keep the supreme court out of partisan strife, and would like to see Judge O'Brien, also of St. Paul, who is a Democrat, and was appointed by the late Gov. Johnson, nominated by the Republicans.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

We want to see the people of Minnesota elect T. D. O'Brien to succeed himself on the supreme court bench. He is one of the brainiest lawyers in the state, and as square a man as ever came into the state. He is true as steel, and the Republican party could do nothing finer than to endorse him.—Windom Citizen.

While one is thinking about the supreme bench, Thomas D. O'Brien is charged with but one sin: he is a Democrat. By that token he's certain to be renominated by the Democratic convention, "And he'll be elected," says Frank Day. However, Republicans and Democrats alike praise Judge O'Brien.—St. Paul Dispatch.

The state press is kindly disposed toward Judge T. D. O'Brien. There is a general feeling that the Democrats should be encouraged for indorsing two Republican candidates for places on the state supreme bench, C. L. Brown and P. E. Brown. The newspaper men of the state seem to think that this action will go far toward bringing about a non-partisan judiciary.—St. Paul Dispatch.

The Republican party could be of great service to the movement for a non-partisan judiciary by nominating Judge Thomas D. O'Brien for re-election to the supreme bench. The Judge has made an enviable record and is recognized as an exceptionally able and conscientious jurist. No one can give a reason why he should be retired except that he belongs to the Democratic party.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The Star News is convinced that the judiciary should be of a non-partisan nature, especially as regards the state supreme court, and consequently hopes that Hon. T. D. O'Brien may be elected to that court this fall. All the other members of the court are Republicans and it seems to us that one lone democrat on the bench would give the public better service. Besides, O'Brien is a lawyer who measures up well as to abilities with any of the candidates.—Elk River Star News

Prior to the appointment of Thomas D. O'Brien to a position upon the supreme court bench by the late Governor Johnson the five members who constitute that court were all Republicans. Since that time there have been four Republicans and one Democrat, Mr. O'Brien being the lone Democrat. During the time the latter has occupied a position on the bench and as a member of that court he has established a strong record for ability and his legal power and integrity have never been questioned.—Cambridge Independent Press.

Judge O'Brien's abilities commend him to the legal fraternity while his honesty and integrity appeal to the laymen. Nominated to the highest highest court in the state by the late Governor Johnson, whose trusted friend and counsellor he was during the years of the governor's incumbency of office, he has fulfilled every expectation of those who commended the governor's judgment in placing Mr. O'Brien on the bench. His decisions have been fearless. Wisdom has characterized his every judicial act.—Olivia Times.

In many sections of the State there was among Republicans a desire to keep the judiciary out of politics, and to re-elect all the Supreme Court justices whose terms expire. The late Gov. Johnson was a great admirer of T. D. O'Brien's ability, integrity and sound judgment, and, when he wished to pay the greatest possible compliment to some one whom he highly rated he would exclaim, "Why, he is as straight as Tom O'Brien." And Johnson was a great judge of men.—St. Cloud Times.

The trouble with our courts is too much politics. The courts should be for the people and not for the politicians. It is to be hoped that the Republicans will consider the matter of ability rather than the matter of politics in naming candidates for the supreme court. If they do that Judge O'Brien will surely be retained upon the bench and in his retaining the court will be the gainer, for there are none more able and brilliant than he.—Willmar Journal.

It seems to be decided by the powers that be that Tom O'Brien is an objectionable feature of the supreme court, not so much because he is a Democrat, as that he has fought the railroads too much, in the past. His ability and qualifications are not questioned but he is not wanted. What will the people say? They have submitted to so much trickery in the past it is doubtful that they will even awaken to this case. * * * Let us elect Tom O'Brien one of the justices so as to have a friend of farmers on the supreme bench.—Le Sueur News.

Some of the more independent republican papers have already announced their intention of supporting T. D. O'Brien as one of the candidates for supreme justice, on the ground that the highest court of the state should be selected without regard to party. Judge O'Brien is one of the ablest lawyers and clearest thinkers now on the supreme bench, and every voter, no matter what his political convictions should select him as one of the three candidates for judge to be elected this year.—Litchfield Independent.

The people throughout the state, except the radicals in both the leading parties, desire that Justice O'Brien be retained on the supreme bench. There are many reasons for this. He is an able lawyer. The people have confidence in him. He will help restore respect for the court. He is of different political complexion to the other members, which is a good thing, though politics should not enter into court questions. In all he is a good citizen. It is to be hoped that the Republicans in state convention will not oppose him.—Shakopee Argus.

Shame it is that Justice Thomas D. O'Brien of the supreme court is not to be nominated by the Republican state convention. Nothing but kindest words are heard of Judge O'Brien. His abilities commend him to the legal fraternity while his honesty and integrity appeal to the laymen. Nominated to the highest court in the state by the late Governor Johnson, whose trusted friend and counsellor he was during the years of the governor's incumbency of office, he has fulfilled every expectation of those who commended the governor's judgment in placing Mr O'Brien on the bench His decisions have been fearless. Wisdom has characterized his every judicial act.—Fairmont Sentinel.

Let us hope that the democratic state central committee in session today at St. Paul to find a Moses will not choose O'Brien of the Supreme Court. This hope is expressed not from the standpoint of a Republican organ but on the ground of public welfare. Justice O'Brien cannot be spared from the supreme bench. If there is one duty more than another which every citizen owes to himself and to the state more than any other duty, it is to vote for the re-election of Justice O'Brien, who with Justice Brown, is most highly esteemed by the legal fraternity of Minnesota, and whose reputation outside the state, is that of a jurist of the highest order.—Hibbing Tribune.

Justice O'Brien is recognized by every one as one of the ablest members of the supreme court, and it would be a misfortune should he not be retained upon the appellate bench. It is to be regretted that the Republican convention refused to nominate him, because he is a Democrat, but the people will now have an opportunity to vote for Justice O'Brien and retain the services of one of the ablest and most distinguished jurists in the country.—Duluth Herald.

The state press continues to make favorable comment on the candidacy of Justice T. D. O'Brien of the state supreme court, many papers commending the Democratic state convention for its course in indorsing the candidacies of two Republicans for the judiciary It is probable that the situation presented as a result of the convention's action will result in real progress toward the popular adoption of the non-partisan judiciary reform and that Justice O'Brien, concededly one of the most brilliant and ablest men who ever have served on the state supreme bench, will be selected by a large majority.—Duluth Herald.

Though every rule of the game, recognized by the practical politicians, is against the retention of Justice T. D. O'Brien on the supreme bench, his friends will make a strong effort to make him a fixture, and already plans are in the making in that end. Judge O'Brien who was named by the late Governor John A. Johnson, to fill the unexpired term of C. B. Elliott, transferred to the Philippines, is a Democrat. He was Governor Johnson's closest adviser. As a result of the selection the governor received a world of praise from the country press all over the state.—Mankato Review.

No paper has advanced any reason against Justice O'Brien's election to the supreme bench other than his politics. He is conceded to be the peer of any man on the bench, and has the respect of the entire bar. He would continue to be a just, a wise, honest and fearless judge. Justice Mitchell was one of the great judges of the country, yet was sacrificed, as was Justice Canty, one of the ablest men who ever sat on the bench of this state. So there is not much encouragement for the success of Justice O'Brien, yet it is possible that the people may do themselves proud by continuing Justice O'Brien in the position he so well fills.—Little Falls Herald.

Partisan politics should not remove Judge O'Brien from the Supreme Court. He is such a big, brainy, level-headed jurist, and such a fair and withal lovable man, that one can easily forget his politics. His retirement would be a real loss to the state, as every member of the bar will testify. * * * The Tribune Herald's favorable mention of Judge O'Brien two weeks ago has been copied and favorably commented on in over a score of Republican papers over the state. The feeling is quite general that something should be done to bring about the selection of members of the supreme court in a non-partisan manner. That is the only way men of O'Brien's character can be retained in the public service.—Chisholm Tribune Herald.

The Beacon has had previous occasion to remark on the character and public service of Thos. D. O'Brien, now Supreme Court Justice. Since the plan of making the judiciary non-partisan does not seem to gain in popularity with the Republican managers, the Beacon favors Mr. O'Brien being chosen by the Republican voters instead of some Republican candidate. It is well known that Mr. O'Brien's fitness for a position on the supreme bench has not been excelled by any candidate for many years. He is in the very vigor of life and his record has not been one of service for the corporations. He was an attorney for the people with E. T. Young in the railroad rate case and his ability was everywhere recognized. He is a splendid man for the place, and entitled, regardless of party, to the support of men who want the right kind of men on the supreme bench of the state.—Cannon Falls Beacon.

Harold Knutson of the Foley Independent is another Republican editor who advocates the election of Justice O'Brien, saying:

"Why allow partisan politics to remove Mr. O'Brien from the supreme bench? All concede that he is one of the ablest jurists in Minnesota today. Let the newspaper men of Minnesota, who believe in a clean, wholesome judiciary, get behind the candidacy of Mr. O'Brien and his election will be assured. Let us for once throw aside the fetters of partisanship and show that our desire for a non-partisan judiciary is sincere."

Harold Knutson of Foley, chairman of the Benton County Republican committee and editor of the Foley Independent, has started a non-partisan judiciary movement by declaring for Justice Thomas D. O'Brien. His articles has been republished in various Republican papers throughout the state.—Duluth News Tribune.

The Republican state ticket heads the editorial columns of many Minnesota papers. So far we have noticed the names of the candidates for supreme court omitted from such papers as the Long Prairie Leader, the Glenwood Herald and the Brown's Valley Tribune. The movement for a non-partisan judiciary is progressing. The chances of electing Judge O'Brien look brighter every week. * * * The democracy of Minnesota deserves commendation for nominating a bi-partisan judiciary ticket: Two Democrats and two Republicans. The independent voters of Minnesota who believe in a non-partisan judiciary will not "vote 'er straight" when they get to that place on the ticket. We hope there will be enough of these independents to secure the re-election of Justice O'Brien.—Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press.

While there is no end of chatter in the daily papers about all other state nominees, there seems to be an ominous silence on the question of Judges of the Supreme Court, except the assertion that Judge O'Brien must be retired because he is a Democrat So far as our observation has gone Judge O'Brien has made an able and conscientious judge. The Ledger has ever advocated the divorcement of the selection of all judges from politics and sees no good reason why it should change its position in Mr. O'Brien's case. Judge O'Brien has evinced a disposition to overlook legal quibbles in his effort to arrive at the true merits of the cases submitted to him, consequently he is not a favorite with those who look upon the law as a means to justify their ends. If Mr. O'Brien is an able, just and upright judge, the species is getting altogether too scarce to cast him aside simply because he happens to be a Democrat.—Litchfield News-Ledger.

Those who have followed Judge O'Brien's public career can readily understand why his candidacy does not commend itself to privileged interests. Ordinarily with elections like those for the bench in view we hear much about the desirability of ignoring party affiliations. If there ever was an excuse for ignoring party affiliations in making judicial nominations it is in Judge O'Brien's case. His brilliant talents eminently qualify him for the position he occupies. He is not and never has been a bitter partisan. The service he rendered the public at a critical time in the revision of the insurance laws and in the conduct of the department put the state under lasting obligations to him. However, Judge O'Brien served the public in another capacity. When the best man to be had was needed to represent the State in its contest for the right to enforce railroad rates prescribed by legislative enactment Mr. O'Brien was selected to aid in fighting the people's battles. He entered into the work with his whole heart. For the purpose he practically sacrificed lucrative private practice.—Northfield News.

Justice O'Brien is today generally spoken of by the Bar of the state as one of the brainiest and most honorable of the Minnesota judiciary. To set him aside for political purposes and attempt to succeed him by others, is rank partisanship and has not and should not have any place in decent politics in Minnesota, and, while the party has named others, yet it cannot and will not bind and warp the consciences of the people of this state when it comes to election next November O'Brien has given to the citizens of this state the best insurance laws of any state in the Union. In fact, he set a pace for all other insurance commissioners to follow while he was Insurance Commissioner of Minnesota by appointment of Governor Johnson Justice O'Brien is the first insurance commissioner in this state to whom no criticism has ever been offered for attempting to appropriate to himself state funds that were commonly called the fees of the office. The characteristic honesty of Thomas D. O'Brien would not permit him to fleece the state to the tune of $30,000 a year, as had formerly been done under the fee system, and for which no law existed by which he could be prosecuted, but, rather than receive money dishonestly or besmirch his official linen, he proceeded to have his office placed on a salary commensurate with the services rendered.—Eveleth Star.

During the coming campaign the Independent will urge the election of only such men as it feels are able and on the square. In line with this policy we propose to support Hon. T. D. O'Brien, present Justice of the Supreme Court, and Democratic nominee. We have decided to do this after having given the matter a great deal of thought and study. Mr. O'Brien stands for purity in politics; his nomination came unsolicited and he is therefore under no obligation to any boss or interest. At a great personal sacrifice he some five years ago took charge of the insurance department of this state when it was in bad repute and by honest efforts placed it upon a basis where it became second to none in the country. As a reward for efficient and honest service he was appointed Justice of the Supreme Court by the late Governor Johnson and it is unfortunate that the Republican state convention failed to endorse him, thus taking the judiciary out of politics. We hope that Justice O'Brien will be elected for it is decidedly to the peoples interest to keep him on the bench.—Foley Independent.

Editor Joubert of the Litchfield News Ledger would not deny the charge of intense partisanship and he would justify himself too. It is therefore the more creditable in him to advocate non-partisan nominations for judges of the state supreme court as he does in urging the retention of Justice T. D. O'Brien, who was appointed by Gov. Johnson to succeed Judge Elliott. The edict has gone forth that Judge O'Brien must be retired because he is a Democrat, but Mr. Joubert calls attention to the fact that the people should learn of the trusts and corporations who care not a tinker what the politics of a man is so long as he is "right" with them. Judge O'Brien is known to be an able jurist and a just judge. He is respected and admired by the bar and trusted by the people. Elmer Adams, member of the legislature and publisher of the Fergus Falls Journal, and Robert C. Dunn, of the Princeton Union, are two prominent republicans who are broad-guaged enough to favor the non-partisan re-election of Justice Thomas D. O'Brien.—Hutchinson Leader.

A number of influential Republican editors are advising their party to nominate Justice T. D. O'Brien as one of its candidates, for the supreme court bench. Justice O'Brien is a Democrat, and in 1905 when Governor Johnson began serving his first term, was appointed insurance commissioner. Prior to that time the office had been conducted on a fee basis—part of its emoluments, which often exceeded $30,000 per year, going to the incumbent, and the remainder being transferred to the "yellow dog" fund and used for campaign purposes. Mr. O'Brien refused to consider the appointment under an arrangement of that kind, it was put on a salary basis, and from the outset the fees paid all the expenses of the department and left a large balance to be deposited in the state treasury. As insurance commissioner Mr O'Brien made a national reputation, many of the laws he drafted appearing in the uniform code adopted at the time of the insurance scandals, and when a vacancy occurred Governor Johnson promoted him to the supreme court. There he has served with equal credit, and it was he who wrote the recent Standard Oil decision. For years Minnesota sentiment has favored a non-partisan judiciary.—St. Peter Herald.

T. D. O'Brien has been Governor Johnson's most trusted adviser during his whole administration. As insurance commissioner he began by safely guiding a reorganization of the largest insurance company in the state, then drifting on the rocks through mismanagement. He was the directing spirit in the national movement for reform legislation on life insurance. At that time he went as Governor Johnson's representative and interviewed President Roosevelt, gaining his hearty support. It was largely because of the confidence the Minnesota legislature had in the fairness and good judgment of the insurance commissioner that it passed the reform program with hardly the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t. Governor Johnson has done no wiser thing in his whole public service than the selection of T. D. O'Brien for his right hand man. The praise bestowed by the governor in his letting accepting Mr. O'Brien's resignation was fully merited, and his leaving public office is a matter of regret. Attorney General Young has filed a claim on Mr. O'Brien's services, securing him as special counsel in the railroad rate cases, and the state is fortunate in having him still concerned in the public welfare. Men like Thomas Dillon O'Brien are too seldom found in the state service.—Minneapolis Journal.

Judge O'Brien has shown himself to be fearless, fair and well versed in the law. The only argument that can be advanced against him is that he is a Democrat. That argument has weight only with Republicans whose partisanship is too rabid to permit of a broad, patriotic consideration on any subject. People neither wish, expect nor would tolerate Republican or Democratic decisions from courts. What they want is justice under the law, and when they get that it matters little what political party the judge affiliates with. It is highly probable that partisanship will prevail, but nevertheless, it will be at the expense of an opportunity to win public confidence.—Wheaton Gazette Reporter.

So far as the sentiment of the state press may reflect the sentiment of the public in general, the hope that Justice T. D. O'Brien will be elected to the state supreme court seems to be well founded and probably will be realized. Many papers have commented approvingly on the action of the democrtic state convention in favor of non-partisanship in judlicial affairs. Several weeks ago the Chisholm Tribune-Herald said:

"It is to be regretted that partisan politics should remove Judge O'Brien from the supreme court. He is such a big, brainy, level-headed jurist and such a far and withal, lovable man that one can easily forget his politics. His probable retirement is a real loss to the state—as every member of the bar will testify."

To this the Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press replied:

"When as strong a partisan as Editor Arneson makes a statement like the above, it begins to look as though there was something to this talk of a 'non-partisan' judiciary. The only thing to do is to turn in and re-elect Justice T. D. O'Brien."

The following from the Northfield News shows the feeling that is back of the movement to make Justice O'Brien a non-partisan candidate for re-election:

"The Princeton Union, R. C. Dunn, editor, under the caption, 'A Splendid Man,' quotes with approval the endorsement of Judge O'Brien by Hon. Elmer E. Adams of the Fegus Falls Journal.

"Mr. Adams says very truly of Judge O'Brien that as insurance commissioner during the Johnson administration and one of the lamented governor's most influential advisers, be proved to be one of the greatest moral and intellectual forces in it."

"During the time he has served on the bench," adds Mr. Adams, "he has served most creditably, and if the Republican party has any desire to do that which will commend it to the people of the state it will not pull the supreme court into politics, but will renominate Judge O'Brien, notwithstanding he was a Democrat before taking the place on the bench."

"To this Mr. Dunn adds: 'Mr. O'Brien is an ornament to the bench, and if fitness were the prime requisite he would be renominated by acclamation. We cordially approve the Journal article."

The News desire to add a word to these appreciative references to Judge O'Brien's services and his talents. To make a seat on the supreme bench the object of a partisan scramble and a judgeship the reward of party service can hardly fail to discredit the court in public opinion. Such a course cannot fail to have a tendency to fill the court rather with men possessed of the qualifications and the arts of the politician rather than the high sense of duty and the judicial temperament which should characterize a jurist. The effort is being made in this campaign to elevate men to the bench with a view to being able in a certain kind of litigation to forecast its decisions. The Republican party should discountenance every such attempt.

The suggestion that the Republican party endorse Justice O'Brien for another term, is a good one, and should be followed. Mr. O'Brien is considered by the bar of the state as one of its ablest members, and by the general public as a man of integrity and splendid judgment. However, Mr. O'Brien's personal equipment is not the only consideration. In this state, noted for independent voting, non-partisanship, especially of the judiciary, has become almost a political ideal. The thrice-repeated election of a Democratic governor, the insurgent movement, and the prevalent disposition of our people to deprecate blind party allegiance, is evidence conclusive of this. In the selection of judges, a disregard of party politics is especially commendable. A political party is merely a group of citizens banded together to further certain political principles; whenever a party loses sight of this fact, it deprives itself of a reason for being. A judge is never called upon to determine governmental policies. His work consists rather in deciding whether the policies already determined upon have been followed out by individuals. His duty is not to make laws, but to read the law already made fairly and apply it fearlessly. The qualities that should predominate in his make-up are fairness, fearlessness and good judgment. It should not matter what he thinks of the tariff, the money question, the tonnage tax, or any of the other issues along which party lines are drawn. It should matter that he have such a conception of his duties and such a regard for the law under which he exercises his power, as to be willing ever to content himself with the interpretation of the will of the people, as declared in legislative and constitutional enactments, and to eschew all efforts to create or evade governmental policies. Because Mr. O'Brien is this sort of judge, he should be elected, not by the Democrats or by the Republicans, but by all the people.—Dawson Sentinel.

GRAY'S POSITION ON THE SALOON

Democratic Candidate for Governor Is Neither for Nor Against Them.

WOULD LET PEOPLE DECIDE

County Option Means That Residents Shall Have a Voice in Regulating the Traffic.

The Democratic candidate for governor is not making an anti-saloon fight. He is in favor of the passage of a county option law, and if elected governor will recommend the passage of such a law to the legislature. But he holds, and holds rightly, that the mere passage of such a law will not close a single saloon in the state. Such a law, if passed, will, however, give the people of any county the right to say whether they will have saloons in the counties or not. Under such a law, if a majority of the people want saloons, the counties of Brown, Carver, Blue Earth, Stearns, Winona and others would have them in plenty. On the other hand, if a majority didn't want them, they would be shut out. It is not a question of prohibition; it is not even a question of temperance. It is simply putting it up to the people. Letting them decide it for themselves, instead of having the brewers decide it for them.

There have been oceans of rot written about the county option movement, and the meaning of the term "county option." The word "option" means choice; therefore "county option" is simply county choice. It is not of itself for the saloon or against them. If a county option law is put on the statute books such an enactment will not close a saloon in Minnesota. It will, however, give the people of any county the right to say whether or not saloons shall be licensed. In other words, it puts it up to the people to decide.

The brewery agent says he is in favor of local option. That the city, the village, the township, under existing conditions, may vote for the exclusion of the saloon, and he is against further change—the brewer favors things as they are.

His statement is only partly true as to conditions. It is true that under existing conditions the village and the township can exclude the saloon, but as a rule the cities can not. For instance: The 1907 Minnesota Blue Book gives a list of seventy-one organized cities in Minnesota, with an aggregate population of 786,398. This is 39 per cent of the entire population of the state. Of these seventy-one organized cities only eleven, under their charters, can vote directly on the exclusion of the saloon. These eleven minor cities have a combined population of 33,496. So, as a matter of fact, there is better than a third of the people of the state who are absolutely disfranchised as far as voting on the liquor question is concerned. This is what the brewers call "local option." The contention of the Democratic candidate for governor is that this condition puts too much power in the hands of the brewers, and leaves too little with the people. He is against such a proposition now and all the time.

Then there is another phase of this situation even more serious. The brewers are merging the saloon business into a trust. Years ago the saloon was owned by the individual, who was usually a fair sort of a citizen in the community in which he lived. It was to his interest to make the business as respectable as possible. Now the saloons are owned largely by the big brewers, and are run by hired men who get a percentage on the business done, and it is their policy to take all in sight, regardless of right or decency. This is one reason for the growing opposition to the saloon.

The brewery trust is also responsible for the organized entrance of the saloon in politics. The saloon now has more "owned" men in the Minnesota legislature than any other big interest. They vote these men of theirs solidly on all questions concerning the liquor traffic. Nor are they satisfied with their services for themselves alone. They hawk their services to other interests. It is a clear case of legislative prostitution—of barter and sale.

How long does the voter believe such conditions can exist without bringing public disgrace to the fair name of the state?

Now is the time to stop it. Mr. Eberhart is receiving the support of the big brewers and liquor dealers in the state. Are you going to add yours? Will you lend your aid to this work?

Do you want Minnesota to be of the breweries, for the breweries and by the breweries?

Does not the fact that all the railroad presidents are supporting the Republican candidate for governor bear out La Follette's charge that "Eberhart is nothing but the errand boy of the railroads?"

Who did Eberhart and the state administration support in the primary fight of the progressives against the standpat candidates for congress in Minnesota?

An Eye Test.

Most people believe that they see the same with both eyes. That this is not the case one can easily convince himself by the following simple experiment: Cover one of the eyes with a hand or a bandage and let the experimenter attempt to snuff out a candle suddenly placed within a few feet of him. He will almost invariably miss the flame, either overreaching, underreaching or putting the fingers too far to the right or left of the flame. With both eyes normal and open the accommodation for distance and direction is instantaneous.

NON-PARTISANS CONDEMN EBERHART

Distinguished Republicans and Democrats Tell Story of His Enslavement by the Interests.—Ed. Smith Would Weld His Hold on People of the State.

Four distinguished citizens of Minneapolis have performed a public duty. They have issued a statement over their own signatures running through the record of Senator E. E. Smith, who is chairman of the Republican state central committee and campaign manager for Gov. Eberhart. These men are former Gov. John Lind, Democrat; D. C. Bell, a prominent investment banker and philanthropist, Republican; S. A. Stockwell, former state senator and civic leader, Democrat; and A. W. Rankin, head of the college of pedagogy at the state university and widely known educator, Republican. These men are actuated solely by a sense of public service. None is a candidate for office and one (Gov. Lind) only recently declined a nomination which meant an election as governor. All these are men identified with the state, its people and its future welfare.

They tell the story of the shame of Minnesota. They disclose the existence of a pool or combination which has for at least four years absolutely dominated and controlled the enactment of every piece of legislation. They show beyond any doubt the existence of this combination. They recite the record of Senator Smith, its recognized head and guiding spirit, and trace his steps from the management of this sinister organization to the enlarged field wherein by the election of Gov. Eberhart he will fasten his hold upon the entire people of the state. The story is told calmly, dispassionately and with truth so convincing that no argument can successfully assail it. The election of the present governor, surrounded as he is by these influences which made him their willing servitor as lieutenant governor, will bind the people of the state to predatory interests for years to come.

The men who issue this statement do not suggest a remedy. They but point out the danger that confronts Minnesota. The Democratic state central committee believes in these men. It has faith that they would not make these charges if they were not true. It offers as its candidate for governor James Gray, a man against whom nothing has been said in this campaign and nothing can be said. Gray has taken the people of the state into his confidence. He has told them where he stands on every issue. Gov. Eberhart has evaded every issue. If he has any views on any public question he has not given them. The Democratic party offers Mr. Gray as a candidate believing that with him as governor there will be no legislative pool, there will be no special service for special interests and that popular government will be restored.

The statement signed by Gov. Lind, Mr. Bell, Senator Stockwell and Professor Rankin is appended:

THE STATEMENT.

"For several sessions the Minnesota legislature has been dominated by an organized band of most unprogressive politicians. Through the manipulations of these men such special interests as the Minnesota Liquor Dealers' Association, the railroad ring, a number of public utility companies and other predatory corporations have controlled legislation and prevented reforms, both moral and economic.

"Believing that the great mass of the people were in ignorance of these conditions, Lynn Haines, Secretary of the Minnesota Citizens' League, published a book, 'The Minnesota Legislature of 1909,' which exposed the personnel and purpose of the politicians who had so grossly misrepresented their constituents.

"This volume, together with other reform influences, so aroused the people that at the primary elections they defeated, with few exceptions, the members of the old stand-pat machine who were candidates for re-election.

"Some whose pernicious political acts and affiliations had been exposed did not dare to ask the voters for another term. Among the professional politicians who thus retired voluntarily or were defeated at the primaries are included practically every member who had been a leader or lieutenant of the stand-pat machine. These eliminations mean that the Aldrich-Cannon kind of machine has been almost completely demolished in the Minnesota legislature.

"But here is the rub. The recognized leader of all these special interest-professional political forces in the legislature was Senator E. E. Smith of Minneapolis. He and his organization have been driven out of the legislature, but they are now attempting to fortify and perpetuate their reign higher up—in the governorship. Senator Smith, the discredited legislative representative of the breweries and public service companies, is in absolute control of the Eberhart campaign, and, if it is successful, will undoubtedly be the guiding force of the Eberhart administration.

SENATOR SMITH'S RECORD.

"In the chapter in which members of both House and Senate are characterized, Mr. Haines says of Senator Smith: 'The recognized leader of the corporation forces in the legislature; needs no detailed mention here because preceding chapters have shown his powers and pernicious public character; voted for the Hinton bill.'

"No informed person will dispute that Senator Smith commanded and controlled the special interest machine in the legislature. His vote on a few questions furnishes corroborative evidence that he was an unprogressive politician who stood consistently for predatory corporations:

"REFORMING THE RULES—Smith voted against the attempt to change the Cannonized methods of legislation, the change being designed to prevent the smothering and distorting of bills in committees.

"ELECTION MEASURES—Smith voted to repeal the primary election law and to repeal the corrupt practices act; he voted against extending the primary and against the direct election of United States Senators.

"LIQUOR LEGISLATION—Smith voted with the organized brewery influence on every proposition. He supported the Alderman bill which operates to give big breweries a firmer hold on communities, both commercially and politically.

"THE HINTON BILL—Smith voted for this infamous measure which was framed in the direct interest of the breweries and railroad ring as to make it a misdemeanor for any individual or reform organization to secure pre-election pledges from candidates.

"RAILROAD REFORMS—Smith voted against the people and for the railroads as often as he had opportunity. He voted against bills to regulate and prevent discriminations in freight rates; he voted against the 16-hour resolution; he voted for amendments to the two-cent fare bill which made it more favorable for the railroads; he voted against 'the full crew bill;' he voted against railroad employees also on the bill providing for automatic couplers; he voted against the reciprocal demurrage bill.

"AGAINST ROOSEVELT—Smith voted in the negative on a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt against the slurs and accusations of Harriman and urging congress to support the president and pass laws giving the government more control over the transportation trusts.

"We believe that the voters of the state should understand about the legislative life and influence of the politician whom Governor Eberhart insisted should manage his campaign.

"Governor Eberhart is notoriously weak and pliant in the hands of such brewery representatives as Senator Smith. As Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Eberhart not only did nothing to oppose the operations of the Smith machine, but he gave direct assistance to their schemes by placing Smith and other reactionaries in charge of the important committees.

"The signers of this are a self-constituted committee whose interest in the campaign is that of non-partisan citizens who desire that politicians like Smith shall be driven out of control of the governorship as they have been driven out of the legislature.

"JOHN LIND, "S. A. STOCKWELL,
"DAVID C. BELL. "A. W. RANKIN.

Preservative Peat.

Peat possesses wonderful antiseptic and preservative qualities owing to the presence of tannin, iron and other substances in it. Here is an instance: At the time of the covenanters, in 1685, three men were shot at a place called Crossgelloch on the moors above Old Cumnock, in Scotland. In 1825, when a monument was being erected to their memory, the workmen came upon the corpses rolled in their plaids. The bodies were in exactly the same state as when they were buried. The moss had preserved them as if they had been embalmed.

THE OTIS RULING

EXCEPTIONS ARE FILED TO THE OPINION OF THE MASTER IN CHANCERY.

IN MINNESOTA R. R. CASES

E. T. Young and E. S. Durment Acting As Special Counsel—Famous Rate Cases to Go To Supreme Court.

St. Paul.—Another important step in the fight to maintain the validity of the Minnesota rate laws was taken when general and special exceptions of the state of Minnesota to the findings of Judge Otis, special master in chancery in the rate cases, were filed with Judge Otis at St. Paul.

The general exceptions, contained in 23 closely typewritten pages, were prepared by E. T. Young, former attorney general. The special exceptions, of about the same length, were prepared and submitted by Edmund S. Durment. Both appeared as special counsel for the state in the preparation and trial of the case and in the exceptions filed acted for C. F. Staples, Ira B. Mills and Charles E. Elmquist, members of the state railroad and warehouse commission, and for George T. Simpson, attorney general.

Case an Important One.

Inasmuch as the case is one of vital importance to the people of Minnesota, involving principles of state sovereignty and the rights of the state to regulate and control the affairs of public service corporations, the state's attorneys have incorporated in their exceptions every material point affecting the merits of the case which may be the possible subject of contention in the supreme court of the United States. The reasons for each exception are set forth at length.

Direct issue is taken with Judge Otis' findings that the state exceeded its constitutional powers in prescribing the contested rates because, as the master said, such rates constitute a direct interference with and impose a burden upon interstate commerce.

The state maintains that the constitution gives congress control over commerce beginning in one state and ending in another and the interstate commerce act provides for the federal regulation of transportation carried on between different states; that the laws involved apply by their terms only to intrastate business and do not overlap and conflict with any federal laws.

Although substantive law is cited in support of the constitutionality of the Minnesota rate laws, expediency and public policy are also urged in that a judicial finding which cripples the commerce power of a state does not enlarge the commerce power of the nation.

Judge's Method Criticized.

General exception is entered to the method adopted by Judge Otis in fixing the valuation of the railroad property employed in the state. This is considered the most important feature of the Otis decision. After stating that the master ignored the original investment as a measure of the valuation upon which they are entitled to a return and also ignored the outstanding stocks and bonds of each company, which exceeded the actual investment, Mr. Young says:

"He adopted the so-called cost of reproduction as the sole measure of the value of railroad property. The plan followed by the master reduces railroad valuation to a mere exploit of the imagination. Under it the value of railroad property can be fixed at any figure which interested parties will swear they believe it to be worth, and if such a plan is upheld by the courts, railroads can make the public pay any rates they see fit to charge."

The attention of the master is also called to the fact that the actions are brought by the stockholders and not the railroads and that a railroad stockholder has no right in law to claim a return from the public on anything more than the face of his valid stock. At the suit of a stockholder the value found cannot, according to the state's attorneys, exceed the outstanding stocks and bonds.

Another Exception Filed.

Exception is filed to Judge Otis' apportionment of interstate and intrastate freight and passenger business carried on railroad property strictly within the state. This point is regarded as of the utmost importance for on the proper and just apportionment of this business depends the property valuation which determines whether or not the rates in question in this case are confiscatory, as found by the master.

The state objects to Judge Otis' division of the value of railroad property between state and interstate business, both passenger and freight. It is stated that Judge Otis by charging to intrastate business an undue percentage of the common value of both intra and interstate business, it is made to appear that the railroads are not earning a compensatory income on their Minnesota investment and that therefore the Minnesota rate laws are confiscatory.

The next step in the proceedings will be the consideration by the master in chancery of the exceptions filed by both the railroads and the state. He will make further recommendation based upon the exceptions and another stay of 30 days will be allowed for the lawyers of both sides to submit further exceptions. The entire record in the case, including the evidence, findings of the master, the two sets of exceptions, the master's findings on these exceptions and the additional exceptions, will then go to Judge Sanborn of the United States circuit court.

Judge Sanborn will set a time for hearing the arguments of counsel. The recommendations of Judge Otis on the exceptions filed will probably be filed within a week or ten days and in the order of business the arguments of law and fact will probably come up before Judge Sanborn early in December. The case will be appealed direct to the United States supreme court.

SHAKEUP IN THE INDIAN OFFICE.

N. J. Sero Transferred to Michigan—Minnesota Left to F. S. Brents.

Bemidji.—It is given out on reliable authority that there is to be a general shakeup in the staff of government agents working under the direction of W. E. Johnson, who has charge of enforcing the liquor provisions of the Indian treaty in Minnesota, and that other developments of a sensational nature may be expected, even to the ultimate closing of all the saloons in the affected territory.

N. J. Sero, who has been one of the leading agents in the work in northern Minnesota, and who has attained notoriety because of charges of assault, preferred against him and Agent James Davis by A. A. Oliver, editor of the Cass County Pioneer at Walker, has been transferred by Mr. Johnson to Michigan and the work in Northern Minnesota is now to be largely directed by F. S. Brents. Agent Brents recently visited Cass Lake to investigate conditions, the result of which was to arrest the three saloonkeepers charged with having offered bribes. He has long been in the government service and has already collected evidence which will make his return from the west a feature in the present liquor closing crisis.

TRUSTEES WITH DR. BRIDGMAN.

Hamline Students Heard at Winona But No Action Is Taken.

Norton, president of the board of trustees, and Rev. Frank Doran and Rev. W. M. McKinley, two other members. They were given a careful hearing. At the close of the session Mr. Norton intimated that it was not likely the board of 21 trustees would be called together before the regular meeting next June as he leaves for California for the winter in a few weeks.

He let the committee know the warm admiration he feels for President Bridgman for his work in financing Hamline university and building up an endowment fund.

KING AT NAPLES

ITALIAN KING VISITS SCENE OF RECENT CATASTROPHE TO AID VICTIMS.

DEATHS OVERESTIMATED

Than the First Estimates—Thousands are Homeless and the Most Serious Problem Is that of Feeding and Sheltering Them.

Naples, Oct. 26.—King Victor Emmanuel arrived here today. His coming was not wholly unexpected however. He was accompanied by his first aide, General Brusoti, Admiral Garelli and Count Mattillo Pasquolini, minister of the royal household.

The authorities were able to make a more definite estimate of the fatalities caused by the cyclone, tidal wave and eruptions of Mount Vesuvius and Mount Epomeo. The known deaths of Ischia are 12, Amelfi 10, Resina 7, Madonna Grazie 19, Minori 4, Lacco Amenia 3, Montre Corvino Torra Del Greco 1. Thousands are homeless and the most serious problem is to provide these with shelter, food and water. The movement of supplies is difficult because in many places the roads have been washed out.

Most of the towns requiring aid can be approached from the sea.

Admiral Leonardi, minister of the marine had a narrow escape from death on the island of Ischia today. It attempting to get a close view of the effect of the eruption from Mount Epomeo he approached too close to the bed of the volcanic stream and sank to his waist in mud. His plight was discovered by soldiers who rescued him.

News is Discouraging.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 26.—"The outlook for obtaining any information of the whereabouts of the America II grows less encouraging every hour," said Edmund H. Statton, representative of the Aero club of America today.

"The immensity of the north woods, the scattered settlements and particularly the absence of quick communication makes the search for Hawley and Post even with the aid of the dominion and provincial governments difficult and lacking in promise of quick results which is the thing desired."

The search for the missing aeronauts from this point will continue.

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—News of the depressing developments in the search for Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, the crew of the missing balloon America II, were received in dispatches today in St. Louis, saying an empty balloon had been found near Port Arthur, on the north shore of Lake Superior and a dirigible balloon was seen drifting north Tuesday night of Outmette, Ont., on the Canadian Pacific railroad.

The officials of the Aero club were cast into gloom by these reports, one of which came from Lewis Spindler, the club's special representative in Canada.

Spindler telegraphed from Toronto: "Tuesday night a balloon was sighted going west from Lake Kaprine. The same night a balloon was sighted going north at Quimette, near Pearl river, and Lake Superior. I fear this is a derelict. These statements confirm the previous reports.

Make More Than Farmers.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—That the railroads get a better return on their investment than the former, despite the latter's much talked of ability to buy automobiles, was the position taken at the rate hearing today, when the shippers who oppose the advances in freight rates put H. C. Wallace of Des Moines on the stand as their first witness.

Mr. Wallace is a farmer and an editor and was elected president of the national conservation congress at St. Paul recently.

Attorney Clifford Thorne, in introducing the line of testimony expected from Wallace, explained that "The great question to be determined in this case is what constitutes a reasonable rate of return for the railroads. They have based some of their pleas for higher rates on the prices paid to farmers and other producers for their products."

Haytian Gunboat Explodes.

Port Au Prince, Hayti, Oct. 26.—The Haytian gunboat Liberte has been lost at sea off Port De Paix following an explosion on board. It is estimated that seventy persons were either killed or drowned. Twenty others were rescued.

The news of the accident was received here today. The Liberte sailed on Monday last having on board ninety persons. So far as known only twenty escaped. Among those lost were ten Haytian generals who were going to take command of several divisions of troops in the department of the north. Details are lacking, the only definite information being as to the loss of life and the fact that an explosion occurred.

Postoffice Robbed.

Meza, N. D., Oct. 26.—The postoffice and store of Sam Ransler at this place was entered and robbed of $20 of postoffice money. An attempt to blow the safe, which contained $400 was not successful. The robbers drilled a hole through the outer door of the safe but the charge of powder blew the inner door in and left the outer door unharmed. The robbers left clues which are being followed up.

To Visit Nort Dakota.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Assistant Indian Commissioner Fred H. Abbott will leave Washington next Saturday for Oklahoma and after several days spent there will go to North Dakota chiefly to visit the new Indian agency at Turtle Mountain, north of Devils Lake, in North Dakota.

Mr. Abbott says there are a number of questions which have arisen regarding allotments and also as to timber sales which he thinks a personal visit from a representative of the Indian bureau may materially aid in straightening out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Hague Decides in Favor of America.

The Hague, Oct. 26.—The international court of arbitration rendered its decision in the Orinoco claims case today. The harge award is declared null on four points and the American company is awarded $46,867 with 2 per cent interest since June 16, 1903, and $7,000 costs.

The judgment is to be paid by Venezuela within two months. The tribunal rejects the American contentions on the other points in dispute. Today's decision disposes of a long standing dispute between United States and Venezuela steamship companies.

HITS COAST OF NAPLES

CYCLONIC STORM AND TIDAL WAVE WORKS HAVOC.

Coast of Naples Badly Devastated by Freak of Elements—Vesuvius Also Gets Busy.

Naples, Oct. 25.—The beautiful coasts of the bay of Naples and the gulf of Salerno and the islands of Ischia and Procida have been devastated by a peculiar combination of elements.

The exact number of victims has not been learned, but 250 persons are said to have been killed. The monetary loss is great.

The disaster appears to have come in the form of a cyclone having three centers, the first over the island of Ischia, the second over the town of Torre Del Greco and on the east coast of the bay of Naples and the third sweeping the gulf of Salerno.

Accompanying the cyclone were a cloudburst, tidal wave and violent eruptions from Mount Vesuvius and from a crater suddenly opened on the summit of the long extinct Mount Epomeo on the island of Ischia. Ischia and the adjacent islands suffered the most.

No Americans are reported in the trouble zone, foreigners having recently given that section a wide berth because of cholera epidemic. Throughout the night much confusion existed as the failure of electric and telegraph wires left the territory in darkness and without means of easy communication.

Admiral Leonardi, the minister of marine, is at Ischia organizing relief for which $400,000 is already available. Human bodies and carcasses of animals have been discovered in a molten stream from Mount Vesuvius.

Next to the loss at Ischia, the greatest damage was done in the towns of Porticia, Torre Del Greco, Resina, Amalfi, Sorrento, Maicrit, Ravelloa, Angri, Ponte Cognao, Cetara and Mont Corvino.

Reports from Ischia describe the situation as distressing. The famous paths of Lucullus have been destroyed. At some points the lava from Mount Epomeo is twenty feet deep. At Torre Del Greco the roof of a building was blown off and the floors collapsing, carried a sailor, his wife and child of thirteen months into the cellar. The woman was killed and the husband with the baby in his arms escaped from the place only to be drowned in the street. The baby was rescued.

Heinze Case in Supreme Court.

Washington, Oct. 25. — The brief of The United States in the case against Fritz Augustus Heinze, involving the charges of willful misappropriation of the assets of a national bank, wrongful discounting of notes, etc., while Heinze was president of the Mercantile National bank of New York, was filed in the supreme court of the United States today.

The aggregate of the unsecured notes which figure in the count of the indictment is $1,362,000. The insufficiently secured notes aggregate $370,000.

Soldiers as Strike Breakers.

Lisbon, Oct. 25.—Eight thousand freight and express wagon drivers went on strike today. Soldiers and firemen are being utilized in the transportation of the necessities of life.

The outbreak of labor trouble of the capital is considered especially unfortunate at this time when an effort is being made to harmonize all classes in support of the provisional government and the new republic. A commission was named today to establish courts of honor which are designed to replace the practice of dueling.

Roosevelt Had Drizzly Day.

Pen Yan, N. Y., Oct. 25.—The second day of Colonel Roosevelt's campaign in New York state began with a drizzling rain which threatened to interfere with several open al rallies which had been aranged. Had Close Call.

Aneta, N. D., Oct. 26.—What came near being a tragedy happened here when Louis Trostad and Candidate S. J. Tando came along in the former's auto and were about to cross the track. Train No. 3, running two hours late, came at a terrific speed. The first the men knew of the train was when it was right upon them—just a few seconds would have meant death to both. The engine tore off one of the front fenders and smashed the wheel on the auto, but the occupants were not hurt in the least, and were perfectly satisfied the way things went after all.

FAR FROM CIVILIZATION

Balloon Crosses Small Lke and Comes to Ground in Forest—Friend of Aeronauts Leaves to Effect Rescue.

Huntsville, Ont., Oct. 21.—Richard Cole, a guide, who has just returned from New Ontario, brings a story of the missing balloon which he and his party sighted about eight o'clock last Thursday morning. The party was crossing a small lake when the balloon passed. After traveling probably a mile it alighted rapidly with a tremendous crash. A search was made, but the party were forced to return without effecting a rescue.

Cole thinks if the aeronauts traveled eastward they must be lost in the impenetrable forests without hope of rescue.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 24.—The balloon America II., the only one of the international race entrants which has not yet reported landing, passed over Thompsonville, Mich., Tuesday, Oct. according to a message received this morning by the Aero club of St. Louis.

The message was signed by Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, pilot and aide. It read: "Thompsonville, Mich.,—America II. passed over this place Tuesday. Course due north."

The delayed message was dropped to a farmer eight miles from Thompsonville and was forwarded by E. S. Northrop of Thompsonville. Northrop, replying to a message of inquiry, said the farmer who received the message from the balloonists talked with them and read the name of the aerostat on the gas bag near dark. The course of the balloon was west of St. Ignace, Mich., over Sutton's Bay.

The America II., according to Northrop's message, followed the course of the Azurea and the Necetla. The former landed thirty-two miles northeast of Biscotasing, Ont., and the latter near Villa Marie, Ont.

The receipt of the message revived the hope of the Aero club officials that Hawley and Post are alive and now it is only a question of getting them to civilization.

The police believe the Michaels murder referred to the mysterious death of Dr. F. W. Michaels in Chicago, Aug. 6. Rhodus after admitting he was in Chicago at that time refused to discuss details.

Rhodus admits he is the man who has been called the "candy bandit."

"The importance of an independent, taxes on four thousand acres of land in Fillmore county. He also runs a store at Forestville, it being the same business started by his father in 1853.

For the past eight years he has been president of the First National bank at Preston. When he was a young man he was first vice president of the State Farmers' Alliance organization. He was also first chairman of the People's party organization and presided over the convention at which that party was organized in this state. Upon that committee were such men as Ignatius Donnelly, Sidney Owens, General J. H. Baker and W. W. Erwin and others. He was a Bryan elector in 1896 and candidate for lieutenant governor in 1900. He was also a member of the board of equalization under both Governor Johnson and Governor Lind.

JAMES C. TRACY.

He is a native Minnesotan, born forty-one years ago in Olmsted county. For years he has been a prominent and respected business men of Rochester, in that county. He is married and a man of quiet worth, and his business, elevator, grain and coal, has given him a close knowledge of questions which are directly passed upon by the commission to which he is a candidate.

He will receive a large complimentary vote from the people in his section of the state, and his friends, as well as the committee, are making a very active canvass in his behalf.

Origin of Fasting.

The custom of fasting is not of Christian origin. It was certainly observed by the Jews long before Christianity was known, as well as by most of the other nations of antiquity. Asceticism has always been popular in the earlier stages of religion and is still the dominant idea in Buddhism and Brahmanism—two of the oldest of all religions.—Exchange.

Belated Advice.

"That coat looks shabby," remarked Hicks to his intimate friend, the poet. "Why don't you have it turned?"

"Do you think this coat has three sides?" asked the impecunious one sadly. And nothing more was said on the subject.

"Might Have!"

I have lived my life, and I face the end.
But that other life I might have led—
Where lay the road, and who was its friend,
And what was the goal when the years were dead?

Where lay the road? Did I miss the turn?
The friend unknown? Our greetings unsaid?
And the goal unsought? Shall I never learn
What was that life I might have led?

"IDENTIFICATION COMPLETE."

One day a big city bank received the following message from one of its country correspondents: "Pay $25 to John Smith, who will call today." The cashier's curiosity became suspicion when a cabman assisted into the bank a drunken "fare" who stated that he was John Smith and wanted some money. Two clerks pushed, pulled and piloted the boisterous individual into a private room away from the sight and hearing of regular depositors. The cashier wired the country bank:

"Man claiming to be John Smith is here. Highly intoxicated. Shall we await identification?"

The answer read: "Identification complete. Pay the money."—Success Magazine.

Averting a Panic.

On one occasion John Philip Sousa by his promptness was the direct means of stopping a panic which might have had the most disastrous results. While his band was playing before 12,000 people in St. Louis the electric lights in the hall went out suddenly. People began to move uneasily in their seats, and some even began to make a rush for the doors. Coolly tapping with his baton, Sousa gave a signal, and immediately his band began playing "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" A tiny ripple of laughter that went round the audience showed that confidence had been partially restored. When the band began to play "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By" the laughter deepened into a roar of merriment that ended only when the lights were turned on again.

A Favored Congregation.

A famous North Carolina clergyman while preaching from the text, "He giveth his beloved sleep," stopped in the middle of his discourse, gazed upon his slumbering congregation and said, "Brethren, it is hard to realize the unbounded love which the Lord appears to have for a large portion of my auditory."

A Pointed Question.

There is an amusing story told of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria and the famous old soldier Galgotzy: "After the occupation by Austro-Hungarian forces of Bosnia-Herzegovina Galgotzy was set to build a military road. Funds were short, and the sum available for the purpose seemed hopelessly insufficient. By dint of hard work and ingenuity Galgotzy succeeded nevertheless in performing his task and thereupon reported, 'Road built; 25,000 florins received, 25,000 florins spent; remains, nothing.'"

Dissatisfied with so summary an account, the audit officials applied for a detailed statement of expenditure. Galgotzy ignored the application, which was presently renewed in peremptory form. Impatient of red tape, he replied: "Road built; 25,000 florins received, 25,000 florins spent; remains, nothing. Whoever doubts it is an ass!"

Shocked by such impropriety, a solemn official submitted Galgotzy's account to the emperor, who blandly inquired, "Do you, then, doubt it?"

Proposed Amendments

—TO THE—

Constitution

—OF—

Minnesota

—BY—

The Legislature

General Session

1909.

St. Paul, Minn., May 1, 1910.

Hon. Julius A. Schmahl, Secretary of State—

Sir: As required by Section 26 of the Revised Laws as amended, I have the honor to furnish you herewith a statement of the purposes and effects of the respective amendments proposed to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota by the Legislature of 1909 and which are to be submitted to the electors in said state at the general election in 1910.

FIRST PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The first proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 506 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to authorize the payment by the State from the State Road and Bridge Fund of one-half of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein, and is an amendment of Section 16 of Article 9 of the Constitution, which now reads as follows:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided further, that in no case shall more than one-third (⅓) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund," and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 16. For the purpose of lending aid in the construction and improvement of public highways and bridges, there is hereby created a fund, to be known as the 'state road and bridge fund,' said fund shall include all moneys accruing from the income derived from investments in the internal improvement land fund, or that may hereafter accrue to said fund, and shall also include all funds accruing to any state road and bridge fund, however provided.

"The legislature is authorized to add to such fund, for the purpose of constructing or improving roads and bridges of this state, by providing, in its discretion, for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state of not to exceed in any year one-fourth (¼) of one mill on all the taxable property within the state.

PROVIDED, that no county shall receive in any year more than three (3) per cent or less than one-half (½) of one (1) per cent of the total fund thus provided and expended during such year; and provided, further, that in no case shall more than one-half (½) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge be paid by the state from such fund."

EFFECT. The present Constitution authorizes the payment by the State, out of such fund so created of ONE-THIRD (1-3) of the cost of constructing or improving any road or bridge therein. If this amendment is adopted the State could then pay ONE-HALF (½) of the cost of constructing any such road or bridge, and the effect of the amendment is thus to increase the amount which the State may lawfully pay toward such purpose.

SECOND PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The second proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 507 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to repeal the provisions of Section 11 of Article IX of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 11. There shall be published by the treasurer, in at least one newspaper printed at the seat of government, during the first week in January of each year, and in the next volume of the acts of the legislature, detailed statements of all moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, for what purposes and to whom paid, and by what law authorized; and also of all moneys received, and by what authority and from whom."

EFFECT. The Constitution requires the treasurer to publish yearly a detailed statement of the moneys drawn from the treasury during the preceding year, giving the names of the persons to whom paid and the purposes for which it was expended. It also requires a like statement of the names of the persons, and the sources, as to money received, and in both cases a statement of the law under which payments were made, or money paid into the treasury. The effect of this Amendment, if the same be adopted, will be to repeal the section of the Constitution mentioned and insofar relieve the treasurer from such publication. This change in the Constitution, however, would not prevent the legislature from hereafter directing by law that such, or a different publication, of the same or other information should be made by the Treasurer.

THIRD PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The third proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 508 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 17, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment, by the State of Minnesota, of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, including the necessary expenses of giving effect to this act, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment, if adopted, will be to authorize the State to become a trustee in the collection and disbursement of a fund for the payment of damages to growing crops by hail or wind, or either. This fund is to be created and maintained by a specific tax imposed by the legislature upon the lands of such persons, ONLY, as shall voluntarily list the same with their respective county auditors for that purpose. Under it there could be no tax for such purpose imposed on the lands of any owner who does not consent thereto. The legislature is also authorized to include in such fund the necessary expenses of administration of the law. The adoption of the amendment will authorize the legislature to direct that the taxing machinery of the state be used to levy and collect the tax necessary to raise such fund and to provide for the disbursement of same by the officers of the State; but any payments to be made by the State, by reason of damage by hail or wind will have to be made from such fund and from no other. In the settlement of any such damages the State would assume no liability beyond the amount of such fund, and could not further be rendered liable. A similar amendment was offered at the general election of 1908, but not adopted. The amendment then offered read as follows:

"Section 17. The legislature may provide for the payment by the State of Minnesota of damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, and to provide a fund for that purpose, may impose a specific tax upon lands, the owners of which, at their option, have listed the same with county auditors for that purpose, and no payment shall be made of any such damages except from the fund so provided."

The main difference between the amendment now offered, and the one last quoted, being that the legislature is now to be authorized, in addition to providing a fund for the purpose of paying damages to growing crops by hail and wind, or either, to further provide an additional tax upon the lands of the persons so listing the same, to meet the necessary expenses incurred in the administration of the law and thus relieve the State therefrom. This last provision was not included in the amendment offered in 1908.

FOURTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fourth proposed Amendment is contained in Chapter 509, General Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to repeal Section 23 of Article IV of the Constitution, which section now reads as follows:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and every tenth year thereafter. At their first session after each enumeration so made, and also at their first session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section second of this article."

and to substitute therefor the following:

"Section 23. The legislature shall provide by law for enumeration of the inhabitants of this State in the year 1915, and every ten (10) years thereafter. At any session after any enumeration of the inhabitants of this state made pursuant to law and also at any session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or any of the same, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts according to the provisions of section 2 of this article."

EFFECT. The effect of this Amendment will be to direct the legislature to provide for a census of the inhabitants of the State in the year 1915, and every tenth year thereafter, and will also authorize the legislature to change the boundaries of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, or of any one of such districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts, at any session after any State or Federal census. If adopted, the legislature might therefore, if it deems best, change at any session the boundaries of such districts and apportion anew the senators and representatives and thus redistrict the State every two years.

FIFTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The fifth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 510, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is sought to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution, to be known as Section 18, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 18. To secure a sustained yield of timber for the use of the people of this state, the proper officials shall annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property within this state, the proceeds of which shall be used for the purchase of land better adapted for forestry purposes than for agriculture for the state at not over $5.00 per acre, and for the production and maintenance thereon of forest according to forestry principles.

"Unexpended balances shall not lapse but constitute a fund for forestry purposes.

"The timber produced thereon shall be sold at a fair valuation and the revenue therefrom or from other source shall be paid into the state treasury, except that one-quarter of the net revenue shall be paid to the towns, or if unorganized, to the county, in which the land is situated, in aid of public schools and roads.

"Should any tract acquired be found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, it may be sold and the proceeds used for acquiring or developing forestry land.

"Until otherwise directed by the legislature, which may supplement these provisions with necessary enactments, the state forestry board shall draw and disburse the money hereby provided and purchase, manage and control the lands and forests.

"No money shall be paid for any tract until the attorney general shall certify to the validity of the title.

"It shall be competent for two successive regular legislatures, by a two-thirds vote of each house, to repeal any of these provisions."

EFFECT. This proposed amendment, and the proposed amendment hereafter mentioned should be read together. They constitute the foundation for a plan of State reforestration. As the constitution stands today, while the legislature might pass laws providing funds to be used for the purchase of lands, and the cultivation of the same for reforestration purposes, yet it is not directed to do so. The effect then of this amendment is to COMPEL the taxing officers of the state to annually levy and collect a tax of one-fifteenth of one mill on each dollar of taxable property in the state, to be used as the legislature shall direct, for the purchase for the state of land adapted to forestry purposes, but at a price not to exceed $5 per acre. All unexpired balances in the fund at the end of each fiscal year shall not lapse, but shall be carried over into the fund thus raised for the succeeding year and shall be an addition thereto. It also directs the sale, at a fair valuation, of the timber produced on such land so purchased, the payment of three-fourths of the money received therefrom into the state treasury, and the payment of the remaining one-fourth to the town, if organized, or otherwise to the county in which the land is situated, and that the same shall there be credited to the public school funds. If after the land is purchased it is found better adapted for any other purpose than the production of timber, authority is contained in this amendment to sell it, but the proceeds must be used for acquiring or developing forestry land. Until the legislature provides otherwise, all purchases shall be under the direction of the State Forestry Board. The title to all lands purchased must be approved by the Attorney General before purchase is made. It is further provided that two successive regular legislatures shall have power by a two-thirds vote of each house to repeal any of the foregoing provisions. That is to say, if after a trial, such plan for any reason is found to be impracticable or undesirable, and it so appears to two successive legislatures, any or all of the foregoing provisions of the amendment may be repealed. The legislature does not now possess such power and the same is a distinct change in the methods heretofore in vogue in Minnesota, in the making and revising of the Constitution. Heretofore an amendment might only be made to the Constitution or a provision of that instrument eliminated by direct vote of the electors. Under this amendment, if it be adopted, that power is not taken away and also exists. But a new power, that of repeal by the legislature, as to this however, would extend to no other provision of the Constitution and affords an easy method of change in case of necessity or advisability.

SIXTH PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The sixth proposed amendment is contained in Chapter 511, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1909.

PURPOSE. By this amendment it is proposed to add an entirely new section to Article IX of the Constitution to be known as Section 17a, and which shall read as follows:

"Section 17a. Laws may be enacted exempting lands from taxation for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon."

EFFECT. The effect of this amendment is to authorize the legislature to enact laws exempting from taxation lands of private persons to be used in the planting, cultivation and protection of useful forest trees thereon, and thus supplement where the lands of such private persons are devoted to reforestration, the purposes contemplated as to public lands by the fifth proposed amendment. The authority so granted is part of a general plan for the reforestration of land within the state. If the legislature does not pass such laws, such lands will not be exempt and the power to repeal such a law, when enacted, remains with the legislature. Power to pass a law to exempt such lands from taxation the legislature does not now possess, and it is, therefore, an additional grant of power.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE T. SIMPSON,
Attorney General.

St. Paul, May 1, 1910.

Mr. Julius A. Schmahl,
Secretary of State.

Dear Sir:—Referring to proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 1 would say: As state expert printer I have given the publications involved in this proposed amendment special thought, and am of opinion both these publications are entirely superfluous. The extensive annual publication "in a daily newspaper published at the capital city" attracts absolutely no attention. The annual report of the state treasurer is published in book form, and to an extent that makes it easy for every person specially concerned to secure a copy. To conform strictly with the law as it is at present, means the expenditure, under reasonably favorable printing contracts, of approximately $8,000, a sum which can be used to excellent advantage under conditions which ordinarily suggest the greatest care and economy upon the part of those under whose direction the printing fund is expended.

Yours respectfully,
J. T. MANNIX,
State Expert Printer.

Buy A MONARCH
MALLEABLE RANGE!
It Pays For Itself.

BUYING a Monarch Range is like investing a little money at such a splendid interest that it pays back the principal in a year or so, and then for unlimited years brings a return of from 25 to 50 per cent.

Because—

A Monarch requires but little more than one-half the fuel burned up by a "steel range" of the common type. Moreover, it does away with the usual repair bills—saves much time—eliminates the hard part of kitchen work—and in addition it does its work so well it satisfies as no other can.

You don't have to take our word for these things. Investigate for yourself the way the Monarch is built. Let us show you how the Malleable Iron and steel plates are riveted together, making air-tight joints without the use of STOVE PUTTY. See the brightly polished top and body, which will retain their fine appearance forever without the use of stove blacking. Also notice the duplex draft and other exclusive features. These things PROVE our statements.

Monarch
MALLEABLE
The Stay Satisfactory Range

Steel Ranges built in the ordinary way are wasteful—extravagant

They are not made in the right way nor even of the right kind of material. It is not wise to buy one, nor even to continue to use one, though you may have had it only a few years. Its seams have already opened up—the stove bolts worked loose, the putty has fallen out and these "air leaks" let the fuel and fire through and cause a waste of fuel every year equal to a large part of the cost of a Monarch.

A Personal Word
To Intending Buyers

In ranges as well as other lines, we aim to handle the best to be had. Our many years' experience in the range business has acquainted us with all makes of ranges and we know that the Monarch is the one and only range that could justify the above claim.

The TERRORS of SWEEPING DAY Full of Meaning to Housewives

That was many years ago, when the primitive corn broom was the only device woman had to clean her carpets and rugs. The BISSELL Sweeper has changed all this, making sweeping day a pleasant anticipation instead of a day to be dreaded. Sweeping with a corn broom is indeed a self-imposed drudgery. Running so easily that a child can operate it, the BISSELL glides over your carpets and rugs, lifting out of the nap all the fine dust and grit that is never gotten by the corn broom, confining same within the pans, instead of scattering it over the furniture, draperies, etc. Once you purchase a you will regret the sacrifice you made in going without it for so many years. Stop in today and look them over.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE IS THE QUESTION

Vote on County Division is Very Close. Result in Doubt.

Largest Vote in History of County.—Division Proposition Got Out the Vote.

The largest vote in the history of Red Lake county was cast in Tuesday's election, the county division proposition being the incentive to get out the vote. Thief River Falls voted straight—"yes", and Red Lake Falls voted her straight—"no". The farmers of the north end gave a strong majority for division though not so strong a vote as the farmers of the south east against the proposition. The people of the middle tier of townships opposed division and gave substantial majorities against the proposition.

The returns are not all in yet and the vote is so close that it cannot be determined at this time whether or not the proposition has carried. Official returns have been received from the following precincts and the vote on the division proposition is given below.

In the state election Eberhart has defeated Gray by a majority of about 60,000 and the other Republican candidates on the state ticket are elected.

Reports from all over the country indicate that the voters cast their ballots for Democratic and Progressive Republican congressional candidates.

In New York, Dix, the Democratic candidate for governor, defeated Stimson, the Republican-Roosevelt candidate.

Regular Passenger and Freight Service From Moose Lake to Plummer.

A report from Bemidji, dated yesterday is as follows:

A regular passenger, mail and freight service will be started Monday on the new Soo line through Bemidji, from Moose Lake to Plummer.

The official news was contained in a letter received today from Edmund Pennington, president of the Soo, in which he makes this statement:

ZELIA QUESNELLE TAKES THE LEAD

The Gazette Voting Contest Going at a Lively Clip and Race is Interesting

Miss Zelia Quesnelle, who has to date been second in the race in the Gazette voting contest, made a strenuous effort, with the assistance of her friends to get into the first place in the contest and she succeeded.

Miss Quesnelle's success in making such a substantial gain should not discourage the other candidates. On the contrary it shows conclusively how much can be accomplished by a little systematic work and the others should get busy and reduce that lead. The Gazette has hundreds of subscribers who are simply waiting to be asked to vote their subscriptions and a little effort will secure a bunch of new subscribers, as some of the candidates have demonstrated.

The vote published this week is Saturday night's count and does not indicate accurately how the candidates would stand if the votes were counted today, for a lot of votes have been cast since Saturday

Every candidate should cast all the votes she can before Saturday night for on each dollar paid on subscriptions on or before that date 2000 extra votes will be given. To come in on this extra vote offer the candidate or her friends must have secured the payment of at least $10 on subscriptions. This condition is made so that the Gazette may know who are the active candidates Get a subscription book and go after the votes, and don't neglect to have your friends working for you if you wish to land a prize.

Following is the record of votes cast up to Saturday night.

NEW WORK OF THE LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL

Short Course for Farm Students—Practical Subjects Will Be Given.

Four Months Course, Commencing November 28 and Ending March 31.

For four school months beginning Monday, November 28, and ending Friday, March 31, the state high school in Red Lake Falls is to offer a short course for farm students, the course to be composed of class work in the following subjects: Farm Arithmetic, Practical Agriculture, English, Local Government, Business Law, Carpentry, Cooking and Sewing. This course is to be open and free to any of the young people in the territory surrounding Red Lake Falls. It is intended to be an opportunity for education along practical lines for those young men and women who are needed at home during the greater part of the school year but who are free to attend school during four of the winter months, as well as for all of those who feel that the advantage of a full high school course cannot be theirs, but who are dissatisfied with the amount and quality of education they have so far received. The lower age limit has been placed at 14 years. There is no upper age limit. Those who are thirty years of age will be welcomed as students. The experience in other localities where a similar course has been offered to the farm students is that young people from 16 to 25 years of age are the most eager for the work, and it is expected that this will be true of the attendance in Red Lake Falls.

The Course of Study.

The larger items of the course for young men are Farm Arithmetic, Practical Agriculture, English, Local Government, Business Law and Carpentry. For the young women the course will be the same except for cooking and sewing in place of carpentry. The general nature of the treatment of each subject will be as follows.

FARM ARITHMETIC—Only such topics will be taught in this subject as will prove of practical use to the students. Computations in the acreage of fields, bushels of grain in bins, tons of hay in stacks, lumber measurements, interest on notes, etc., will occupy the most of the lessons. There will be four lessons per week in Farm Arithmetic.

AGRICULTURE—The work in this subject as of all others will be intensely practical. Half of the three double lessons will be actual exercises in milk testing, seed testing, judging of grains, fertilizer tests, rope splicing and related work; the other half will be a study of the same topics from a practical text-book and readings from the agricultural library and 2500 farmers' bulletins recently acquired by the high school.

ENGLISH—There will be two lessons per week in English devoted largely to the writing of correct English, use of capitals, punctuation, letter writing, etc.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT—In the three lessons per week given over to this subject the aim will be to have the student get a thorough understanding of the affairs of state and local government. A study will be made of the school district, the township, the county and the state, both as to their organization and administration.

BUSINESS LAW—This course will consist of about twenty lessons on such important subjects as contracts, negotiable instruments, transfers of personal and real property, etc.,—such simple business law as every citizen, man or woman, should know.

COOKING AND SEWING—Because of their extreme practical nature these subjects are more and more finding their way into strong courses of study and young women taking advantage of this short course will be given the opportunity of using the splendid new equipment which has recently been installed by the board in the Red Lake Falls high school. As it is now planned, all the young women in the short course will receive instruction for two double lessons per week in Sewing and for one double lesson per week in Cooking. The new sewing machines, the sewing tables, the eight blue-flame oil stoves, the fine malleable steel range, the cooking tables, and the entire outfit of lesser utensils will be put at the disposal of the young women entering upon this course. The sewing course will cover such exercises as aprons, undergarments, shirtwaists and dresses. The cooking work will be with mixing and baking of doughs and batters used in the making of bread, cakes, cookies, etc., and in the purchase, preparation and serving of the various kinds of meats. The course will not neglect the general management and care of the kitchen.

CARPENTRY—At the same time that the equipment for cooking and sewing was installed, the local board made the purchase of a complete equipment for wood-work. This is made up of fifteen heavy hard maple manual training benches all fitted with rapid-acting vises, and all the carpenters' tools necessary for fifteen students working at one time. For this reason the brief course in Carpentry can be made very practical and will contain among others the following exercises: Milk stool, file handle, saw jointer, ax handle, single tree, eveners, wagon jack and small barn frame model. There will be three double lessons in this work per week.

Requirement for Entrance.

The natural question that comes to a young man or woman in considering this course is, "Can I take this course with my present educational qualifications?" To answer this question it can be said that the requirement for entrance upon the work will not be very rigid. As stated above, the purpose of the course is to offer some of the essentials of a practical education to young people who, up to date, have not had adequate educational opportunities. Any boy or girl, any young man or young woman who is over 14 years of age will be admitted to the work. It is believed that any young person with average mental maturity will be able to carry the work satisfactorily.

The Course is Free.

There will be no charges for tuition for the course. There will be a small charge enough, to cover cost only, to the young men in the class in Carpentry for the lumber used in articles that are made to be taken home, and in the case of the young women there will be a small expense for materials which they will purchase at the stores for the garments they make for themselves in the sewing class, but there will be no charges for tuition nor for text-books.

Enrollment Limited.

On account of the limitation of the capacity in the High School building the number of young people who will be permitted to take the work will be fifteen in all. Because of this limitation of enrollment to a maximum of 15 students the first ones who make application for the work will be the favored ones. Those young people who are interested should make immediate application to City Superintendent Leonard V. Koos either in writing or in person, preferably in person. Regret can best be avoided by avoiding delay in application.

A circular setting forth in somewhat more detail the outline of the short course, the complete program for the week's classes indicating the proportion of the time to be spent in the various classes, and the names of the instructors is being prepared and may be had by making application for same. The superintendent will be glad to mail a copy of this circular to anyone. If you desire one for yourself or would like to have one sent to some one whom you think it will interest, make your desire known by phone, by card, or by a call at the office of the superintendent in the High School building.

WILL WRESTLE TO FALLS.

Professional Mat Artists at the Bijou Tomorrow Night.

Ed. Oher, the professional wrestler who appeared in Red Lake Falls recently, will be here again Friday night and he and Miller, another professional, from Angus, will go it for three falls. When here recently Oher demonstrated his cleverness and Miller is touted as a fast one, and consequently local mat game enthusiasts are anticipating some good sport.

BAD FIRE EARLY THIS MORNING

Freund's Confectionary Store and Zaiser's Millinery Store Burned.

Loss of $6500 Partly Covered by Insurance—Cause of Fire Unknown.

Shortly after four o'clock this morning, Freund's confectionary store was discovered to be on fire and the fire had made such progress at that time that it was impossible to do anything to save the building and the stock. Zaiser's millinery store, south of Freund's was also burned, though much of the stock was saved. The buildings were not more than two feet apart and the fire had such a start when discovered that it was impossible to get it under control until all except the floor and south wall of the Zaiser building had burned.

Mr. Freund says his loss on the building and stock is about $5000 with $3500 insurance. The loss of the millinery store and stock is about $1500 with $600 insurance.

Mrs. Zaiser will open her millinery store as soon as she can find quarters. Mr. Freund may rebuild, though he has not decided definitely.

BLAME RAILROAD

CANADIAN NORTHERN CHARGED WITH SETTING FIRE THAT BURNED BAUDETTE.

TOTAL DEATH LIST IS 29

Blaze Started in Canada Crept Underground, Say Probers—Damage Placed at Five Million Dollars.

St. Paul. — The Canadian Northern Railway is held responsible for the fire which destroyed Baudette, in a report made to General C. C. Andrews, forestry commissioner, by Geo. Chapin of St. Paul and Frank Curtis of Roosevelt, who have been investigating the origin of the forest fires in Minnesota for the last two weeks.

The report says there is sufficient evidence to show that a fire was set by the railroad on the Canadian side during the latter part of July. This fire worked south to the North branch of Baudette river and north to Rainy river, covering about eight square miles. It burned up to the west side of Baudette and lay smouldering until Oct. 7, when it was fanned by a terrific wind and led to the disaster.

About the same time a fire was set on the right of way just east of the Winter Road river. This fire worked east three miles and about two miles back on each side of the track, where it connected with the fire which was started on the Baudette side of the river.

Fires Smoulder in Moss.

This fire also lay smouldering in the moss, gradually eating into the root of the timber and felling it, making conditions favorable for another fire. Four other fires also were started in this vicinity in August, covering from one to eight square miles. These fires were also fanned into life Oct. 7 and resulted in the terrible disaster.

The report says the country through which the fire traveled is wild and thinly settled. It has been lumbered and slashed extensively for the last six years, and the accumulation of slashing was lying on the ground. In ordinary years it is very wet, making it impossible for a fire to travel any great distance. As a result a thick growth of moss covered the accumulation of long-decaying vegetation. This year the country experienced a drought. The swamp and moss became dry, and as a result the ground formed a peat, holding the fire below the surface and keeping it smouldering during the entire summer. The report said that if there had been no slashings on the ground the fires could have been choked.

Prosecutions Are Pending.

Eight prosecutions against the Canadian Northern railway for allowing combustible material on the right of way are now pending in the district court of Beltrami county. The railroad is fighting the constitutionality of the law. If the state wins in these cases, the forestry department plans to bring action against the Canadian Northern for sixteen other fires alleged to have been set since July.

The loss from the recent fires is estimated at about $5,000,000 by the agents of the forestry commission. Of this, property valued at $1,700,000 was destroyed in the towns.

The exact number of dead is placed at 29. This is below the last reports sent from Baudette which placed the loss of life at 34. The list includes two families with seven children each, and one family with three children. There were five lumbermen and one girl, Miss Kate Josmer, who also lost their lives.

800 Persons Homeless.

In a report to the governor, General Wood says there are 800 homeless families to be provided for. He has already arranged for the shipment of enough lumber to build 50 houses in the fire district. An administration building is nearly completed, from which all relief work will be carried on. General Wood reports there is great jealousy between Baudette and Spooner and that the relief committee will have to use great diplomacy in assisting these towns.

ORE VALUATION WILL STAND.

Tax Commission Upholds Individual Mineral Land Increases.

St. Paul. — The individual increase of $10,000,000.00 on the valuation of the mineral properties in upper Minnesota will be allowed to stand by the state tax commission. Objection to the increases were made by the representative of the mining companies at a conference held with the state commission. A few decreases were made, but further increases decided upon will make the total increase at $10,000,000. The mining companies had accepted the general 5 per cent increase announced several days ago but objected to the individual increase on the ground that they were unfair.

MINNESOTA TUBERS LARGE.

Potato Crop in Southern Part of State Surprisingly Good.

Winona.—The potato yield in Southeastern Minnesota this fall has been unusually large and of the very best quality, the big size of most of the potatoes being a surprise to the farmers themselves. It was thought during the prolonged dry spell in July and August that the tubers would turn out a very poor crop, but the moisture which came later happily destroyed anticipations of this character.

BRYAN AT ST. PAUL.

St. Paul. — Hon. Wm. J. Bryan drew his customary big audience here. From the auditorium platform Mr. Bryan charged that former President Roosevelt, in his Ossawatomie speech, had borrowed Democratic doctrine. He claimed that the progressive legislation of the last few years was due to Democratic support, and urged his audience to vote for James Gray and Justice Thomas D. O'Brien, and gave special emphasis to the candidacy of J. L. Gieske, Democratic nominee for congressman of the Fourth district.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT WARREN.

Apparatus Called From Near-By Town To Help.

Warren. — A very destructive fire in Warren caused great excitement in the town during which the local agent for the Soo line sent for a special train bearing fire-fighting apparatus, and the Great Northern agent wired Argyle, a town north of Warren, to send assistance. Thief River Falls also sent an engine.

Fire had broken out in the basement of the K. J. Taralseth & Co.'s department store, and the building and the town hall were soon in ruins. The store was valued at $25,000, with $5,000 insurance. The stock, valued at $70,000, was also destroyed. It was insured at $30,000.

The city water gave out and the firemen had to fight the flames with buckets of water. The Argyle department sent down an engine as the Warren fire engine had blown out a cylinder head. Automobiles carried the Argyle fire department to the scene in time to help in the work of protecting the other buildings in the town.

The State bank, Ed Quist, Dr. Theodore Braterud and Dr. W. S. Anderson suffered partial losses placed at $3,000, fully insured. The walls of the buildings are being torn down and the K. J. Karolseth company will rebuild at once.

The center wall of the building fell to the ground, completely covering Tom Keefe, a fireman. He was severely cut on the head and body, but will recover.

TO LOG BURNED TIMBER.

Heavy Operations Will Employ Large Crews in Northern Woods.

Bemidji.—As a result of the recent forest fires which swept through Beltrami and adjoining country this part of Northern Minnesota is to enjoy a period of extraordinary activity, furnishing work for more men than possibly can be obtained.

Expert cruisers who have just completed an extensive investigation of the burned over area say that the total damage done to the stand of timber has been considerably exaggerated, but admit that it will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars, providing the scorched trees are not cut and made into logs within the next few months, for they will soon become wormeaten and dozy.

As a result loggers are making preparations for the busiest season in years, and are already predicting a scarcity of help, despite the fact that wages offered are the highest in many years.

ST. PETER HOST TO KNIGHTS.

Council To Be Installed in Columbus Order—Big Delegations Coming.

St. Peter. — St. Peter council Knights of Columbus, will be installed next Sunday, and it is expected that 500 or 600 members of the order will come to this city to witness the ceremonies of initiation. Large delegations are coming from Mankato, New Ulm, Faribault and Winona, and the Omaha road will run a special train to accommodate the crowd from Minneapolis and St. Paul.

In the morning, services will be held in St. Peter's Catholic church. In the afternoon a class of 60 candidates will be initiated and in the evening a banquet will be served at the opera house. Speakers at the banquet will include Judge John W. Willis, St. Paul; Rev. John Dumphey, St. Thomas college; W. F. Dwyer of Minneapolis, and C. F. Ladner of St. Cloud.

DIVORCE STIRS RESERVATION

Suit of Mrs. Gus Beaulieu of Minneapolis Causes Sensation.

White Earth. — The papers were served last week on Gus Beaulieu of White Earth for Mrs. Gus Beaulieu of Minneapolis, who seeks a divorce from her husband. She names several prominent women of White Earth as co-respondents. When the news leaked out at White Earth it caused a sensation. Mr. and Mrs. Beaulieu resided there for years and both have a host of friends.

It also leaked out that a number of full-blooded Indians had sent a petition to Indian Agent John R. Howard, in which they ask the secretary of the interior and the Indian department to remove Mr. Beaulieu from the reservation. Whether Mr. Howard has forwarded this petition to Washington or not could not be learned.

Fire Chief Indicted Again.

Minneapolis. — Another indictment charging grand larceny in the first degree was returned by the Hennepin county grand jury against James R. Canterbury, ex-chief of the Minneapolis fire department. The second indictment against Mr. Canterbury was for the same offense that brought his first indictment, another section of the statute being used, which holds that money and property obtained by "virtue of false representation" is stolen money or property.

Poisoner Sentenced to Hang.

Le Seuer Center.—Martin O'Malley of this place was found guilty of murder in the first degree of his stepchildren and was sentenced to be hung by Judge Morrison of the Le Seuer county court. The execution will take place within 30 days from date. Some time ago three of O'Malley's stepchildren died suddenly and suspicion was directed towards the father. A post-mortem of the bodies showed that the children had come to their deaths by poisoning, and O'Malley was arrested and charged with the crime.

Cruisers Have Close Call.

Akeley.—Thomas J. Brennan and H. W. Day, cruisers for the Red River Lumber company, have just returned to the city from the lumbering districts north of this city after a narrow escape in the forest fires. They attempted to drive through the burning district when they were hemmed in by the flames and would have perished had they not started back the moment they discovered their perilous situation. Men and team were slightly burned.

FORMED IN LINE

STANDING ROCK AND SHEYENNE RESERVATIONS OPENED TO SETTLEMENT.

Only A Small Number of Winners in the Government Lottery Filed—Many Squatters Are Entering on Claims.

Lemmon, S. D., Nov. 2.—At midnight last night the Standing Rock, and Sheyenne reservations were thrown open to general filing. The line commenced forming in front of the landoffice at 10 a. m., and at dark was a block long. Many women were in the line. The first to be able to file was Mrs. Pearl Hanson of Salem, N. D. She was told to retire and her place would be saved for her. Rain fell all day, but the sturdy homeseeker cares naught for storms, with a quarter section of good land within grasp.

The landoffice opened at 9 a. m. yesterday with the longest line of "honyakes" since it was established here, over two years ago. The town is full of strangers. Out on the reservation are hundreds of squatters, who are endeavoring to beat those at the landoffice. They moved on at midnight, with their shacks and families, and established their homes before morning. There will be many legal battles before it is decided who is entitled to the land.

SEES HUSBAND SHOT DEAD.

Wife, Paralyzed With Fear, Watches Deliberate Murder.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—Lying beside her sleeping husband last night Mrs. Antonio Valentino heard a crash of glass and a moment later saw two men climb through the window of their room from the porch roof without.

Too frightened to move or cry out Mrs. Valentino watched one of the intruders steal up to the bed and deliberately place a pistol at her husband's breast and fire a shot that brought instant death to the sleeping man.

By the time the woman succeeded in recovering her voice and raising an alarm, the murderer and his companion had escaped.

Valentino, with his wife and three children arrived about four days ago, having come almost direct from Italy. Mrs. Valentino says they left Naples very hurriedly her husband professing great fear for his life for some reason not revealed to her. The police believe that a family vendetta or the vengeance of some secret society explains Valentino's murder.

Will Ask Permit to Parade.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Mayor Busse, it was learned today, will be asked to allow a parade of 70,000 persons as a demonstration by the striking garment workers and friends. They expect the permit will be refused, in which case another application will be made just before the impending election.

Chief of Police Steward declared today that club women, settlement workers and college girls, who have donned the garb of workers, will be treated exactly like any striker. Their engraved visiting cards, he declared, do not impress him in the least.

It is said to be one of the purposes of the society pickets to submit to arrest in order to discredit the police, whom they accuse of brutality, by proving their own innocence of infringing the law.

May Arbitrate Strike.

New York, Nov. 2.—The strike of the express companies' drivers and helpers neared a settlement late today, when Mayor Gaynor announced the strikers had agreed to arbitrate. The strikers informed the mayor they were willing to leave their case in the hands of arbitrators to be selected by a conciliation committee of the National Civic federation and return to work and wait for a decision of the arbitrators until Dec. 1 or Jan. 1.

Mayor Gaynor held a conference this afternoon with Frank Platt, president of the United States Express Co., on the strike situation. All that is needed to secure a settlement of the strike by arbitration is the consent of the employing companies.

Robbers Raid Ohio Bank.

Columbus, O., Nov. 2.—Robbers early today blew up the safe of the Merchants & Farmers bank at Hilliard, ten miles northwest, and secured between $8,000 and $10,000 in gold and currency.

According to officials of the bank, two charges of the explosive were used, the door of the safe shattered and the interior of the safe rifled. The robbers walked a block and a half west of the bank, entered the stable of Dr. R. K. Francis, a veterinary, took out a horse and buggy and made their escape.

CONDITION IS DIFFERENT

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION REFUSES PETITION.

Omaha Asked for Same Rate From Grain District That Was Given Twin Cities.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—Dismissing the complaint filed by the Omaha Grain exchange against the Chicago & Northwestern railway, alleging unreasonable rates from points in South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa to Omaha as compared with rates from the same points to other markets, the interstate commerce commission announced that comparitive competitive conditions do not affect Omaha as they do Minneapolis.

Omaha grain dealers complain they are not able to secure a fair share of the grain originating in South Dakota between the Missouri river and the Minnesota state line, points in southwestern Minnesota and northwestern Iowa. They desire to have the grain shipped to Omaha, not particularly for milling or consumption but for reshipment east and south. The railroads, which were made defendants, claim that the combination of rates which make up through rates to the south and southeast or Chicago.

The complainants proposed equal rates to Omaha and Minneapolis where distance is same and in territory nearer Omaha differentials in favor of Omaha substantially the same as those in favor of Minneapolis where distance is less to Minneapolis.

The commission says the rates to Minneapolis are strongly influenced and controlled by competitive conditions which do not likewise affect the Omaha rates and that Minneapolis milling interests and demands and the interests of Minneapolis lines which do not also reach Omaha, create substantially dissimilar conditions.

BATTLESHIPS ON CRUISE.

Situation Interesting in Ohio.

Columbus, O., Nov. 1. — With two cabinet members sent by President Taft to his home state now actively on the field in the interest of harmony in the republican party, with the Foraker-Garfield controversy uppermost in the minds of all voters and with the democratic organization in full swing, the closing days of the Ohio campaign are marked by as bitter warfare as has been evidenced in many years.

The republican nominee, Warren G. Harding, publisher of the Marion, O., Star, has opposed to him Gov. Judson Harmon, a potential presidential nominee for 1912 on the democratic ticket. Harmon carried the state by a plurality of 19,372 in 1908.

Mr. Harding is popular throughout the state, having been in local politics for many years, at one time being elected to the office of lieutenant governor.

Probably no state election is being watched more closely by President Taft than that of Ohio, his home state. It is here he will cast his own vote on Nov. 8 at Cincinnati, making a special trip from Washington to do so.

Trial Halted by Bribery Charge.

New York, Nov. 1.—The trial of Edward T. Rosenheimer, reputed to be a millionaire, charged with the murder of Miss Grace Hough by running her down with his automobile was halted today before Justice Ogorman by the arrest of one of the jurors, George W. Yeandien, architect, on a charge of having demanded and accepted a bribe.

The arrest was made after $500, it was alleged, had been given Yeandien by George A. Knoblock, one of Rosenheimer's lawyers. The money, it was learned in court was paid over to him on the account of a total sum of $2,000.

A man named Timendorfer, a friend of Yeandien, also was taken into custody charged with having been a "go-between."

STRIKE GROWING

GREAT STRIKE OF EXPRESSMEN TIES UP BUSINESS OF NEW YORK CITY.

STRIKEBREAKERS ARRIVE

Reported That all Teamsters of Country May Be Called Out—Patrolmen are Kept Busy Guarding Wagons.

New York, Oct. 31.—The strike of the express company drivers and helpers which has brought express business here to a virtual standstill is expected to spread today to the stable hands. Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of teamsters now in Boston has sent word that if necessary he will organize all the express drivers in the country and call them out on strike. No express matter was moved in the early hours today and the companies apparently confined their attentions to preparations to break the strike.

Strikers were caught unaware in Jersey City early today, when a dash of 100 trucks were made and express matter brought to this city without trouble. No disorders were reported by the police in the early hours of the day.

Police Inspector Walsh today assigned 100 patrolmen to go out on express wagons. Extra patrolmen have been stationed along the thoroughfares used by wagons to prevent trouble. Two hundred strike-breakers from Pittsburg are quartered in Jersey City and will be put to work today. The International Brotherhood of Teamsters this morning called out between 1,500 and 1,800 drivers and helpers employed by the Boston Dispatch, a subsidiary of the Adams Express Co., Moneham's Express and the Manhattan Delivery Co. These men went out at once, not one, according to the strikers, remained at work.

Efforts at strikebreaking in the forenoon were confined to the American Express Co. service. The company managed to move three covered trucks loaded with merchandise from their downtown receiving station with the driver and two special guards on the rear of the wagons.

At the Adam's shed not a wheel was turned nor a single package of goods moved.

All the platform men of the American Express Co. at the Grand Central station struck today. Many reports that the stablemen had gone out lacked verification. Thirty strikebreakers from Philadelphia arrived in the forenoon reaching the sheds without molestation. Few disturbances occurred before noon.

"The Burlington is not in as good condition to accumulate surplus now as it was ten years ago."

The foregoing were among the statements made at the rate hearing today by Claude G. Burnham, vice president of the Burlington who was the first witness.

Attorney T. J. Horton, who represents the railways as a whole at the hearing, stated that he had only one more witness to introduce.

Their raids have been directed against the foreign element. Two companies of the Third United States Infantry were sent to suppress the disorders. General Pershing does not regard the situation as serious.

STRANGE ROMANCE of an ILLINOIS BOY WHO BECAME FIJI KING

ONE of the strangest stories that ever came out of the tropic seas is that of Edward Thompson, the only American who ever became a king in his own right. Nothing more romantic exists in poetry or legend than the tale of the lad from southern Illinois, who founded a kingdom in the faroff isle of Nalkeva. For a quarter of a century he ruled in his savage realm, forgetful of the world that had forgotten him. While he sat in judgment over the affairs of his tribesmen or led his warriors to battle the map of the world was being changed.

Only the faintest echoes from civilization ever reached the island kingdom of Nalkeva, where ruled Walla Nambuka, "the Child of the Sun." To the simple-minded islanders he was always looked upon as a supernatural being. His recent death has plunged his people in gloom. The mourning robes of his subjects have been brought out of the napa huts and worn in the dead king's honor. His two little sons, the princelings of Nalkeva, will reign in his stead and King Walla sleeps at the crest of a gentle slope overlooking a coral reef, where the league-long breakers thunder hour after hour. His bones lie far from those of Scotch-American forbears, who settled in southern Illinois nearly a century ago.

A disappointment in love started him out upon the long road of adventure when he was a youth of nineteen or twenty years. One of these unfortunates who run to extremes in matters of sentiment, he fell in love with one of the pretty village girls of old Albion. Things move slowly in this, one of the oldest and proudest towns of Illinois. In the natural course of events it was to be expected that the two would marry in the fullness of time. There was a home to be built and preparations made for a start in life. Something of the methodical slowness of their English ancestors clung then, and still clings, to the everyday life of the citizens of Albion. The town has changed but little in the years that have flown since Thompson left under cover of nightfall. The same houses line the spacious public square. The same homesteads that sheltered the pioneers now shelter their descendants of the third and fourth generations. Red brick homes, low-eaved and with wide doorsteps, still line the older streets of the little southern Illinois town.

Outwardly the town has changed but little, and in spirit not at all, since the days when young Thompson waited for his girlish sweetheart at the half-lighted corner of the court house square. The Albion of the Flowers, the Thompsons, the Hulmes, the Birkbecks, of "Park House" and "Wanborough Place" still remains. Had the white monarch of the savage isle of Nalkeva come back to the place of his birth in the last year of his life he would have found "Little Britain," as the region is known, much as he left it. It is the same little city of schools and churches, of quiet homes and quieter streets that it was when he was a barefoot lad stealing away to fish and loaf along Bonpas creek. The future ruler of Nalkeva spent many an idle hour with hook and line along the shallows of old Bonpas, if the traditions of the folk of "Little Britain" are true. He was fond of making long trips to the shores of the Wabash with his chums, but he seemed to lack the ambition dear in every boyish heart, the hope of getting out and seeing the big, round world. There was nothing to set him apart from his fellows as one who would taste of strange adventures before his death in the antipodes. The prosy, uneventful life of a farmer, a storekeeper or at the most a humdrum professional man in a country town was all to which he could look forward.

There came an interruption, an awakening in his love's young dream that drove him out of his home town between sundown and sunrise one summer's night. This spur to his pride, this wound to his self-love sent him adventuring among the spicy isles of the south seas and made him a king in his own right before he was twenty-five. He was of that shy, retiring, loyal type of the Scotch who love deeply when they love at all. He had become engaged to the village beauty. The day had been set for the ceremony and the unmarried youth of the town looked upon him as one already lost to the fun and frolics of the single state.

About this time a new business house was opened in the little town and a youthful eastern manager was sent on by the owners to look after its affairs. He came armed with letters of introduction that opened the most exclusive homes of the aristocratic English families to him. Among the many young girls that he met was the village belle, the affianced of the young Scotch-American. It was another version of that old triangle, the woman and two men. From the first the friends of young Thompson could see that his cause was hopeless. His affianced wife and the young stranger spent more and more of their time together. Little rumors began to find their way about the village. The gossips, ever ready in a small town, were soon busy. Thompson, moody and hurt by her systematic neglect, was the last to hear and the last in countenance the whispered talk that was going the round of the village loafing places.

There was a great hue and cry along the quiet old streets one summer morning. Thompson's bride-to-be had disappeared. Her mother had gone to her room to awaken her and found her gone. She had gone with the young manager of Albion's latest business house, and from that day to this neither of them have been heard from.

Young Thompson changed in a day from a cheerful, happy lad to a grim-faced man. He became moody and silent. He neglected his work and never went near the home to which he had expected to lead his bride. Less than a month after the flight of the elopers there was more excitement in Albion. It was reported that Edward Thompson had disappeared. The strain and the shame of living in a town where every man, woman and child knew the story of his jilting had proven too much for his sensitive, high-strung nature.

While life flowed on in the same uneven current in the village of his nativity he was wandering here and there among the emerald islands, the lagoons and the coral reefs of the seas that behold the Southern Cross.

All the islands that lie off the familiar track of the steamers knew him first and last in the three or four years that he spent with the traders and copra buyers. The Philippines, the Ladrones, the Solomons and a dozen other island groups of the southern Pacific were visited by him in the epic years of his Odyssey. Finally he and his trading companions touched at the island of Nalkeva in the Fijis. One of the eternal civil wars that are always disrupting the peace of the little island kingdoms was brewing in Nalkeva when the tramp schooner dropped anchor inside the reef of coral that formed the harbor breakwater. A new claimant had risen for the throne and he and his followers were demanding the scepter and the head of the old king.

Thompson had left Illinois, had put the states behind him to escape the constant reminder of his lost love that he saw in every woman. The wandering life of three or four years had cleansed his heart of but little bitterness against womankind. He had put the old life behind him and dreamed only of adventure and never of bright eyes and loving lips. It was a mixed crew of Kanakas, Malaysians and half-castes aboard the little trading schooner. They cared but little for the kings and chieftains of the islands, but it was a part of their policy to be polite to the native rulers. An audience was arranged with the native sovereign and a part of the ship's company attended laden with calicoes, mirrors and brass rods as gifts. It was in the royal hut Thompson first saw the Princess Lakanita. She stood at the side of her father's throne when the white men entered the palm hut for their talk with the old king.

Some indefinite attraction seemed to draw the white adventurer and the brown-skinned princess to each other. They met many times while the schooner was taking on its load of native products. There was more than a little Spanish blood in the veins of the old king's daughter. Her mother was a half-caste Spanish woman and much of the languorous beauty of the maids of old Castile was the heritage of this barbaric princess of the remote isle of Nalkeva. In the half twilight of the cocoanut groves he heard her story of danger and distress. The rival claimant of the throne had demanded her hand in marriage, and had promised to spare the life of her father if she would consent to become his queen. It was but a matter of weeks, possibly of days, till his force would be strong enough to back his arrogant demands. In the end the white man knew that the island beauty had fallen in love with him. She pleaded with him to stay and help her escape from the clutches of the oppressor.

It is possible that Thompson would have lingered for a time if his companions had not been eager to get away from the island before the civil war began. They were traders, and as such they did not care to take sides in the dispute. It might hurt their business chances in case they ever made another trip to the island. The anchor was lifted, the brown sails spread and the ugly little schooner slipped out of the harbor of Nalkeva while Thompson stood on her deck and waved a farewell to the imperious little island beauty. At the very last she had reminded him of his promise to return to Nalkeva.

It was weeks after the departure of the ship from Nalkeva that Thompson was dramatically reminded of his promise to the Princess Lakanita. The sun had just set one night and Thompson was lying on deck smoking and watching the swift tropic dark come up out of the east. A native canoe scraped against the schooner's side and a native was heard calling for "the white man with the blue eyes." He was brought aboard and proved to be the faithful messenger of the distressed princess. He had followed the schooner across leagues of unknown seas in his open canoe searching for the only man upon whom she could rely for aid.

The end was at hand in Nalkeva, and Lakanita and her father were about to be put to death. Help must come quickly, and it was more than possible that it was now too late. That night the stanch little trading vessel pointed her prow toward Nalkeva. In the final melee along the sands the old king and his rival were both slain and Thompson was stunned by a blow from a war club in the hands of a savage fighting man. When he revived he and his men began a hunt of extermination for all the revolters. They were wiped out and their villages fired before the party returned to the king's village, where the schooner lay anchored. Then the white hero was stricken by one of the malignant island fevers, brought on by his injury on the beach.

It was many days before he was able to recognize his free-trading companions. The princess had been his devoted nurse through his dangerous attack of tropical fever. Now that he was about to leave the island forever she grew sorrowful and listless. She drooped like a dying flower as the ship's preparations for sailing were being made. All his promises to return brought on fits of passionate weeping on the part of the little princess. She wanted him to stay.

"I fought that fever when it tried to take you away from me, and it was all for nothing," was her constant reply, "and now that you are well the white men are taking you away where Lakanita can never hope to see you again."

In the end her pleadings won. After all there was nothing in the outer world to which he cared to go back.

The good news spread quickly over the little kingdom. "The Child of the Sun" was to wed their princess and rule them in the wise ways of the white man.

After twenty-five years of idyllic happiness, Thompson, the love-lorn youth who fled from the covert jeers of the town of his birth, died a king in far-off Nalkeva. The princess still lives and his two sons will reign in his place. The silence of twenty-five years has been broken by the news of his passing away surrounded to the last by his dusky retainers.

Mills' Opinion of Marriage

Among the letters written by the late English philosopher and economist, John Stuart Mill, recently published, is the following document, dated March 6, 1851, upon the occasion of his marriage to Mrs. Taylor, whom he had loved since long before the event of her widowhood:

"Being about, if I am so happy as to obtain her consent, to enter into the marriage relation with the only woman I have ever known with whom I would have entered into that state, and the whole character of the marriage relation as constituted by law being such as both she and I entirely and conscientiously disapprove, for this, among other reasons, that it confers upon one of the parties to the contract legal power and control over the person, property and freedom of action of the other party, independent of her own wishes and will, I, having no means of legally divesting myself of these obvious powers (as I most assuredly would do if the engagement to that effect could be made legally binding on me), feel it my duty to put on record a formal protest against the existing law of marriage, in so far as conferring such powers, and a solemn promise never in any case or under any circumstances to use them.

"And in the event of marriage between Mrs. Taylor and me, I declare it to be my will and intention to absolutely disclaim and repudiate all pretense to have acquired any rights whatever by virtue of such marriage.

"J. S. MILL."

GOOD APPLE BUTTER

Snitzing Party Period Is Now a Thing of the Past.

Modern Methods of Manufacture Have Robbed Pennsylvania Farmers of Delightful Frolics Held in the Fall.

Garfield, Pa.—During September and October of each year all roads in Berks county lead to the cider and apple butter mills, for this is the season when everybody has more apples than he needs for winter use. There is no farming community in Berks county today that does not have its community cider mill, where farmers can take their apples in the morning and return with the cider a few hours later, but there are only two or three places in this great agricultural county where the farmer can so speedily turn his fruit into nice, fresh apple butter.

Marvelous as it appears to grandmother, who used to sit in the old farmhouse kitchen with her little Barlow knife, peeling the rinds off the red cheeked apples, paring them next morning in the barrel-sized copper kettle to be cooked into apple butter, it still appears more marvelous to the mother of twenty-five years ago, to whom the apple butter party was "the time of the year." She can hardly realize today that those good old times are passing away.

"What a change!" says mother. "Today we pick the apples; tomorrow father starts for the cider mill at 6 o'clock. The apples are shoveled into a grinding machine, ground into pomace and shoveled to one of the latest style hydraulic presses, from which the juice is extracted in a very few minutes, ready for the apple butter cooking, under the same roof. The cider is then cooked and boiled in large barrel-shaped receptacles, the steam running through copper coils that nicely fit in barrels.

The sweet apples the farmer just brings along from the tree, and there is no snitzing party on the farm beforehand. They are brought entire, and are first nicely washed, then placed in a barrel, cooked by steam until they form a thin, mushy paste. Then they are placed in a copper sievelike instrument, over which is operated a rubber lever which separates the skin from the apples, cores and seeds, so nothing but pure apple juice goes into the apple butter. This nicely sieved pulp and the boiling cider are placed together in another barrel, the spices are added, and within forty-five minutes the steam that runs through another set of copper coils will have accomplished the trick and the apple butter will be ready to pour into the farmer's milk cans or crocks in which he usually hauls it home.

The first apple butter cooking factory in Berks county was installed by ex-County Treasurer David W. Mogel and today he and his son, John F. Mogel, make cider and cook apple butter four days each week for the farmers of the community, and each Saturday cook it for themselves, to sell to other folks. When the farmer gets his apples turned into cider he pays only a cent a gallon. For apple butter he pays fifteen cents extra per gallon, and, while it takes four gallons of cider for a gallon of apple butter, the only outlay in cash is the nineteen cents a gallon, except what he pays for the spices. For every barrel of cider he needs two bushels of nice sweet apples. The ordinary cooking for a family consists of two barrels of cider and four bushels of apples, and the result is twenty gallons of apple butter.

If the farmer preferred to sell the apple butter he can realize from sixty cents to one dollar a gallon—twice as much as he could get for the apple butter that was made during the "snitzing party" period. The Mogels have made as high as 88,000 gallons of cider and 4,000 gallons of apple butter in a season. The high mark for one day was 123 barrels of cider and 240 gallons of apple butter. During the busy season they work day and night.

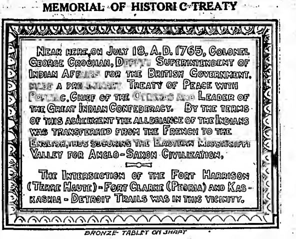
COULDN'T MISS HIS TRAIN

"Kind" Friends Make Sure That Jersey Man Awakens in Time to Catch Train.

New York.—Anxious to take the 4:35 train from Washington, N. J., Thomas James decided to sleep over night in the store where he is a clerk and be awakened by an alarm clock. The other clerks decided to have fun with him.

At 1 a. m. James was awakened by a loud ringing. There was the clock ticking peacefully by his side, with the alarm hand pointing three hours ahead. He found the source of the sound under a large pan. He stopped it and went to sleep. Fifteen minutes afterward he was reawakened similarly. Another clock was under another pan. The performance was repeated three times more. Then James decided to abandon the place to the alarm clocks. He walked the streets until train time.

MEMORIAL OF HISTORIC TREATY



NEAR HERE, ON JULY 18, A.D. 1765, COLONEL GEORGE CROGHAN, DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS FOR THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, MADE A PRELIMINARY TREATY OF PEACE WITH PONTIAC, CHIEF OF THE OTTAWAS AND LEADER OF THE GREAT INDIAN CONFEDERACY. BY THE TERMS OF THIS AGREEMENT THE ALLEGIANCE OF THE INDIANS WAS TRANSFERRED FROM THE FRENCH TO THE ENGLISH, THUS SECURING THE EASTERN MISSISSIPPI VALLEY FOR ANGLO-SAXON CIVILIZATION.

THE INTERSECTION OF THE FORT HARRISON (TERRE HAUTE) - FORT CLARKE (PEORIA) AND KASKASKIA - DETROIT TRAILS WAS IN THIS VICINITY.

BRONZE TABLET ON SHAFT

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—The citizens of Edgar county, Illinois, have erected and soon will unveil a monument to mark the spot on which was made one of the most important of American treaties, that made with Chief Pontiac of the Ottawas in 1765. By this agreement the Indians transferred their allegiance from the French to the English and the latter acquired the vast territory that stretched from New York westward along the Great Lakes and down the Mississippi to its mouth. The making of the treaty thus was one of the most momentous events in American colonial history.

BAN ON UNMARRIED WOMEN

Tufts' President Says Middle-Aged Spinsters Should Be Banished as College Teachers.

Medford, Mass.—President Frederick W. Hamilton of Tufts college has come out with the positive assertion that unmarried women teachers should be barred from girls' colleges because their influence is harmful. He says:

"I do not believe that young girls who are just passing into young womanhood are in the proper environment when they are continually brought into close personal touch with elderly unmarried women.

"The larger proportion of women's colleges are in the hands of woman teachers, however, and the educational atmosphere of the places is feminine, the peculiar type of feminity developed by highly cultured, middle-aged unmarried women. Now, while the type may be very fine individually, it is not the proper one to create the atmosphere for girls at the formative period of their lives.

"Girls just coming into womenhood are receiving their most valuable impressions and their future attitude toward the questions of this time. Their outlook on life, which I believe is the most important part of the college training, should be broad, and it cannot be so unless formed in an environment of breadth.

"In the lower grades of the schools, too, and in preparatory schools the influence of the unmarried, middle-aged woman is counteracted by the dominating influence of the home. I believe that an element of married teachers, widows, who were teachers before marriage, perhaps, would be beneficial. The relationship of these schools and their pupils is different, however, because the pupils live at home. The girls at college live a purely academic life. They are on their resources and they face problems that are quite new to them. They are to be trained to become competent and important parts of life, we hope. They need a large outlook and a broad viewpoint. The elements which go to give these must be brought into their lives at this psychological time, and all elements that tend toward narrowness should be eliminated."

TEACH BRIDES COOKING ART

McKeesport School Board in New Uplift Movement—Young Women Enter Night Classes.

Pittsburg.—The spirit of the uplift in this city is now directed toward women and their housekeeping abilities. The action of the domestic science committee of the schools in McKeesport the other night in establishing classes in cooking for prospective brides is expected to result in an increase in matrimonial ventures.

The committee, on application of a number of mothers with eligible daughters, announces the cooking department of the schools will be thrown open for night classes for young women, who will pay 25 cents for ten lessons.

Almost simultaneously in Pittsburg a number of women organized the housekeepers' club to carry out a plan to solve the servant girl question. A committee was appointed to devise ways and means to get good servant girls and keep them after they are captured.

STUMPS MOVED VERY CHEAP

Charpit Method of Taking Out Tree Roots on Cleared Land Proving Successful.

Chehalis, Wash.—Chehalis is just now the center of an interesting experiment in land clearing. Recently through the offices of Secretary Merrell, of the Chehalis Citizens' club, an arrangement made with Harry Thompson of the United States department of agriculture, with headquarters at Seattle, and Prof. H. W. Sparks, farm demonstrator of the state college, to conduct some experiments with the charpit process of burning out stumps on logged-off lands. The work has just been completed at the farm of Henry Dupertuis, near Chehalis.

One hundred fir stumps, from two to four feet in diameter, were kept burning in this test, an accurate account was kept of labor. Stumps were completely destroyed, and roots burned out at an average cost of 50 cents per stump.

This voluntary work of the Citizens' club of Chehalis will, it is hoped, prove of great value to western Washington and Oregon, as it establishes the value of the charpit burning method of clearing logged-off lands. The process works most effectively on clay soil.

The method has two valuable features. First, it can be successfully conducted without the high-priced skilled labor required for the blasting powder and donkey engine process. Boys from fourteen to sixteen years of age can do the work thoroughly. Then, it leaves highly fertilized seedbeds for grasses, grains, berries or other fruits, whereas blasting tears holes in the ground and lifts the hardpan to the surface.

Photographs taken on the farm of Mr. Dupertuis, where he has heretofore used the charpit process, show that wherever a stump was burned out there was invariably a heavier growth of grain or grass than on adjoining ground. Fruit trees planted over such a spot showed an unusual growth as compared with others.

Mr. Thompson's report will be issued later by the United States department of agriculture.

"Conscience Fund" Grows.

New York.—The "conscience fund" at the custom house, known officially as "duties from unknown bands," has been increased by the receipt of $15 in Canadian notes. They came in an envelope postmarked Victoria, B. C., with an unsigned letter reading:

"When entering the United States awhile ago, I did not pay duty on some things."

The custom house ordinarily does not accept Canadian money, but has made an exception in this case.

Lovers' Lanes in Parks.

Kansas City, Kan.—The Rev. Samuel Gervin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in this city, thinks that "lovers' lanes" are a necessary part of the park system of a city. He says that these shady walks are of no harm and that they should be provided in the city parks.

FAVOR YANKEE FIZZY WATER

Twenty August Visitors Line Up at Soda Fountain Like Little School Children.

New York.—Frederick H. Mills, financial director of the international prison commission, is showing New York to the foreign delegates, the British, Austrian, German, South American, Italian and Chinese prison experts who are going to Washington to attend the first international prison congress ever held in the United States. Today Mr. Mills wondered what new thing he could lead them to. They had seen the tall buildings, the art museum, the subway, the parks and the flatirons, but they still craved novelty.

Struck by an idea he guided a party of 20, including Sir Evelyn Ruggles-Brise, of the British home office; Dr. Van Engelberg, of the German ministry of justice; Charles Didion, of the ministry of justice of Belgium, and Victor Almquist, chief of the division of the ministry of justice of Sweden, to a big ice cream parlor in Broadway near the Herald Square hotel.

Mr. Mills seated them along the counter, then he said to the soda fountain attendant: "Make twenty ice-cream sodas, vanilla flavor."

"Trust me," he added to the delegates, "they will not harm you. It is one of our principal American luxuries. Stir gently and eat with the spoon."

The dignified prison congress folk went at the soda gingerly at first, but they froze to the mixture and told Mr. Mills that they intended to try it again. They had never partaken of an ice cream soda and they were positive that the experience would remain as one of their pleasantest in New York.

There is a German delegate at the Hotel Plaza who set out to taste all dishes on the menu card that were new to him. At present he is dieting under doctor's orders. "He mixed things too much," said Mr. Mills.

MAYFLOWER MASCOT IS LOST

Mrs. Roosevelt's Gift to Crew of President's Yacht Is Missing, but Not as Deserter.

New York.—There is sorrow on board the U. S. S. Mayflower, known as the president's yacht, which is being overhauled at the Brooklyn navy yard. Spike, the Mayflower's mascot, is missing, and it is feared that either he has been stolen or has met some evil companions. He has not yet overstayed his shore leave to the point where he can be termed a deserter, but the master-at-arms will take him in charge wherever he is found.

Spike is the bulldog presented to the crew by Mrs. Roosevelt. He is rated the ship's champion swimmer and is entitled to medals for life saving. On two occasions he saved the lives of men who fell overboard.

In a notice sent out by the crew offering a reward for his return, Spike is described as being "all bulldog, weight about fifty pounds, head about seventeen inches above the ground. He is black and white and has one black ear."

Was Not a Fungus.

A certain worthy minister was a keen and accomplished naturalist. His specialty was a remarkable knowledge of different classes of fungi. His enthusiasm, however, was but indifferently appreciated by certain members of his parish, and one day when calling upon one of them—a sour old spinster—he was considerably embarrassed when she reminded him of the exact length of time that had elapsed since he had last paid her a visit. He began to make excuses for the delay, when she abruptly and curtly cut him short.

"If I was n toadstool," she said, with grim irony, "you'd have been to see me long ago!"—London Tit-Bits.

Bad Writer With a Good Memory.

Harvey Waters, an expert on patent cases, had occasion to write Rufus Choate on some important question and when he received the reply was unable to read a word of it, so took the missive to Mr. Choate and asked him what he had written. Mr. Choate replied, "I never can read my writing after the ink is dry, but if you tell me what it is about I will tell you what I have written." And he did.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anaemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons become inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitoes. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling.

S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1800 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the large size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

HE KNEW HIM WELL.

But That Was No Excuse For Publicly Insulting Him.

About the year 1847 Charles Webb was playing at the old Chatham theater, New York, and during the engagement he became intimate with a young fish dealer named Shapleigh, doing business in Washington market. The fish dealer was a genius in more ways than one. In his younger days he had belonged to a juvenile dramatic company, and in his manhood, since making Webb's acquaintance, he had been behind the curtain during rehearsal and had really fancied he would "dearly love to appear just once."

Webb became satisfied that Shapleigh could act and was willing to please him, and it so happened that an opportunity presented itself which had not been anticipated. The night of Webb's benefit had been fixed, on which occasion he was to play the character of Hamlet. The actor who had been set apart for the character of Polonius was unexpectedly called away, in which emergency Webb sought his friend at Washington market and asked him if he would help him. Shapleigh was only too glad to do it. The eventful night came, and a front box had been reserved for Shapleigh's wife and little daughter and other relatives and friends. The house was packed, with every bit of standing room occupied. The play commenced and all went well, the beneficiary receiving round after round of applause on his first entrance, and it was the same with the kind friend who had "so magnanimously volunteered his valuable services." The first act went off smoothly. In the second act, scene 2, Polonius is on the stage with king and queen, when to them enters Hamlet, reading from a book. King and queen are unceremoniously hustled out of the way. "Do you know me, my lord?" Polonius asks. "Excellent well. You are a fishmonger." Hamlet replies, according to the text. This aroused the indignation of Shapleigh's wife, and, forgetting all else but the direct insult offered to her husband, she exclaimed loud enough to be heard in every part of the house: "Well, it ain't very nice of you, Mr. Webb, after Tom has been so good to you to go showing him up in public in that fashion! I'd have you know that a fishmonger, as you call him, is as good as an actor any day!" For a moment a wondering silence fell upon the house. That moment was caught by Shapleigh, whose wits had not forsaken him, and, looking up toward his wife's box, he said, with an assuring nod: "It's all right, Bessie. It's so in the book!" And then, the secret out, the house "came down."

For sale or rent, good six room house with good cellar, good cistern, and good well and four good lots, two blocks from main street.—A. G. Groshong.

CHAPTER XXXI.—Continued.

The ghost had said "chimney." It [illegible], and a house as large as Sunnyside was full of them. There was an open fireplace in my dressing room, but none in the bedroom, and as I lay there, looking around I thought of something that made me sit up suddenly. The trunkroom, just over my head, had an open fireplace and a brick chimney, and yet there was nothing of the kind in my room. I got out of bed and examined the opposite wall closely. There was apparently no flue, and I knew there was none in the hall just beneath. The house was heated by steam, as I have said before. In the living room was a huge open fireplace, but it was on the other side.

Why did the trunkroom have both a radiator and an open fireplace? Architects were not usually erratic. It was not 15 minutes before I was upstairs, armed with a tape-measure in lieu of a foot-rule, eager to justify Mr. Jamieson's opinion of my intelligence, and firmly resolved not to tell him of my suspicion until I had more than theory to go on. The hole in the trunkroom wall still yawned there, between the chimney and the outer wall. I examined it again, with no new result. The space between the brick wall and the plaster and lath one, however, had a new significance. The hole showed only one side of the chimney, and I determined to investigate what lay in the space on the other side of the mantel.

I had a blister on my palm when at last the hatchet went through and fell with what sounded like the report of a gun to my overstrained nerves. I sat on a trunk, waiting to hear Liddy fly up the stairs, with the household behind her, like the tail of a comet. But nothing happened, and with a growing feeling of uncanniness I set to work enlarging the opening.

The result was absolutely nil. When I could hold a lighted candle in the opening I saw precisely what I had seen on the other side of the chimney—a space between the true wall and the false one, possibly seven feet long and about three feet wide. It was in no sense of the word a secret chamber, and it was evident it had not been disturbed since the house was built. It was a supreme disappointment.

It had been Mr. Jamieson's idea that the hidden room, if there was one, would be found somewhere near the circular staircase. In fact, I knew that he had once investigated the entire length of the clothes chute, hanging to a rope, with this in view. I was reluctantly about to concede that he had been right, when my eyes fell on the mantel and fireplace. The latter had evidently never been used; it was closed with a metal fire front, and only when the front refused to move, and investigation showed that it was not intended to be moved, did my spirits revive.

I hurried into the next room. Yes, sure enough, there was a similar mantel and fireplace there, similarly closed. In both rooms the chimney flue extended well out from the wall. I measured with the tape-line, my hands trembling so that I could scarcely hold it. They extended two feet and a half into each room, which with the three feet of space between the two partitions, made eight feet to be accounted for. Eight feet in one direction and almost seven in the other—what a chimney it was!

But I had only located the hidden room. I was not in it, and no amount of pressing on the carving of the wooden mantels, no search of the floors for loose boards, none of the customary methods availed at all. That there was a means of entrance, and probably a simple one, I could certain. But what? What would I find if I did get in? Was the detective right, and were the bonds and money from the Traders' bank there? Or was our whole theory wrong? Would not Paul Armstrong have taken his booty with him? If he had not, and if Dr. Walker was in the secret, he would have known how to enter the chimney room. Then—who had dug the other hole in the false partition?

CHAPTER XXXII.

Anne Watson's Story.

Liddy discovered the fresh break in the trunkroom wall while we were at luncheon, and ran shrieking down the stairs. She maintained that, as she entered, unseen hands had been digging at the plaster; that they had stopped when she went in, and she had felt a gust of cold damp air. In support of her story she carried in my wet and muddy boots, that I had unluckily forgotten to hide, and held them out to the detective and myself.

"What did I tell you?" she said dramatically. "Look at 'em. They're yours, Miss Rachel—and covered with mud and soaked to the tops. I tell you, you can scoff all you like; something has been wearing your shoes. As sure as you sit there, there's the smell of the graveyard on them. How do we know they weren't tramping through the Casanova churchyard last night, and sitting on the graves!"

Mr. Jamieson almost choked to death. "I wouldn't be at all surprised if they were doing that very thing, Liddy," he said, when he got his breath. "They certainly look like it."

I think the detective had a plan on which he was working, but which was meant to be a coup. But things went so fast there was no time to carry it into effect. The first thing that occurred was a message from the Charity hospital that Mrs. Watson was dying and had asked for me. I did not care much about going. There is a sort of melancholy pleasure to be had out of a funeral, with its pomp and ceremony, but I shrank from a death-bed. However, Liddy got out the black things and the crepe veil I keep for such occasions, and I went. I left Mr. Jamieson and the day detective going over every inch of the circular staircase, pounding, probing and measuring. I was inwardly elated to think of the surprise I was going to give them that night; as it turned out, I did surprise them—almost into spasms.

I drove from the train to the Charity hospital, and was at once taken to a ward. There, in a gray-walled room in a high iron bed, lay Mrs. Watson. She was very weak, and she only opened her eyes and looked at me when I sat down beside her. I was conscience-stricken. We had been so engrossed that I had left this poor creature to die without even a word of sympathy.

The nurse gave her a stimulant, and in a little while she was able to talk. So broken and half-coherent, however, was her story that I shall tell it in my own way. In an hour from the time I entered the Charity hospital I had heard a sad and pitiful narrative, and had seen a woman slip into the unconsciousness that is only a step from death.

Briefly, then, the housekeeper's story was this:

She was almost 40 years old, and had been the sister-mother of a large family of children. One by one they had died, and been buried beside their parents in a little town in the middle west. There was only one sister left, the baby, Lucy. On her the older girl had lavished all the love of an impulsive and emotional nature. When Anne, the elder, was 32 and Lucy 19, a young man had come to the town. He was going east, after spending the summer at a celebrated ranch in Wyoming—one of those places where wealthy men send worthless and dissipated sons for a season of temperance, fresh air and hunting. The sisters, of course, knew nothing of this, and the young man's ardor rather carried them away. In a word, seven years before, Lucy Haswell had married a young man whose name was given as Aubrey Wallace.

Anne Haswell had married a carpenter in her native town and was a widow. For three months everything went fairly well. Aubrey took his bride to Chicago, where they lived at a hotel. Perhaps the very unsophistication that had charmed him in Valley Mill jarred on him in the city. He had been far from a model husband, even for the three months, and when he disappeared Anne was almost thankful. It was different with the young wife, however. She drooped and fretted, and on the birth of her baby boy she had died. Anne took the child and named him Lucien.

Anne had had no children of her own, and on Lucien she had lavished all her aborted maternal instinct. On one thing she was determined, however: That was that Aubrey Wallace should educate his boy. It was a part of her devotion to the child that she should be ambitious for him; he must have every opportunity. And so she came east. She drifted around, doing plain sewing and keeping a home somewhere always for the boy. Finally, however, she realized that her only training had been domestic, and she put the boy in an Episcopalian home, and secured the position of housekeeper to the Armstrongs. There she found Lucien's father, this time under his own name. It was Arnold Armstrong.

I gathered that there was no particular enmity at that time in Anne's mind. She told him of the boy, and threatened exposure if he did not provide for him. Indeed, for a time, he did so. Then he realized that Lucien was the ruling passion in this lonely woman's life. He found out where the child was hidden, and threatened to take him away. Anne was frantic. The positions became reversed. Where Arnold had given money for Lucien's support, as the years went on he forced money from Anne Watson instead until she was always penniless. The lower Arnold sank in the scale, the heavier his demands became. With the rupture between him and his family things were worse. Anne took the child from the home and hid him in a farmhouse near Casanova, on the Claysburg road. There she went sometimes to see the boy, and there he had taken fever. The people were Germans, and he called the farmer's wife grossmutter. He had grown into a beautiful boy, and he was all Anne had to live for.

The Armstrongs left for California, and Arnold's persecutions began anew. He was furious over the child's disappearance and she was afraid he would do her some hurt. She left the big house and went down to the lodge. When I had rented Sunnyside, however, she had thought the persecutions would stop. She had applied for the position of housekeeper and secured it.

That had been on Saturday. That night Louise arrived unexpectedly. Thomas sent for Mrs. Watson and then went for Arnold Armstrong at the Greenwood club. Anne had been fond of Louise—she reminded her of Lucy. She did not know what the trouble was, but Louise had been in a state of terrible excitement. Mrs. Watson tried to hide from Arnold, but he was ugly. He left the lodge and went up to the house about 2:30, was admitted at the east entrance and came out again very soon. Something had occurred, she didn't know what; but very soon Mr. Innes and another gentleman left, using the car.

Thomas and she had got Louise quiet, and a little before three Mrs. Watson started up to the house. Thomas had a key to the east entry, and gave it to her.

On the way across the lawn she was confronted by Arnold, who for some reason was determined to get into the house. He had a golf-stick in his hand, that he had picked up somewhere, and on her refusal he had struck her with it. One hand had been badly cut, and it was that, poisoning having set in, which was killing her. She broke away in a frenzy of rage and fear, and got into the house while Gertrude and Jack Bailey were at the front door. She went upstairs, hardly knowing what she was doing. Gertrude's door was open, and Halsey's revolver lay there on the bed. She picked it up and turning ran part way down the circular staircase. She could hear Arnold fumbling at the lock outside. She slipped down quietly and opened the door; he was inside before she had got back to the stairs. It was quite dark, but she could see his white shirt-bosom. From the fourth step she fired. As he fell somebody in the billiard room screamed and ran. When the alarm was raised, she had had no time to get upstairs; she hid in the west wing until every one was down on the lower floor. Then she slipped upstairs and threw the revolver out of an upper window, going down again in time to admit the men from the Greenwood club.

If Thomas had suspected, he had never told. When she found the hand Arnold had injured was growing worse, she gave the address of Lucien at Richfield to the old man and almost $100. The money was for Lucien's board until she recovered. She had sent for me to ask me if I would try to interest the Armstrongs in the child. When she found herself growing worse she had written to Mrs. Armstrong, telling her nothing but that Arnold's legitimate child was at Richfield, and imploring her to recognize him. She was dying; the boy was an Armstrong, and entitled to his father's share of the estate. The papers were in her trunk at Sunnyside, with letters from the dead man that would prove what she said. It was she who had crept down the circular staircase, drawn by a magnet, that night Mr. Jamieson had heard some one there. Pursued, she had fled madly, anywhere—through the first door she came to. She had fallen down the clothes chute, and been saved by the basket beneath. I could have cried with relief; then it had not been Gertrude, after all!

That was the story. Sad and tragic though it was, the very telling of it seemed to relieve the dying woman. She did not know that Thomas was dead, and I did not tell her. I promised to look after little Lucien, and sat with her until the intervals of consciousness grew shorter and finally ceased altogether. She died that night.

Ways to Keep Neat.

"My children were becoming dreadfully careless about leaving their things around," said an original mother, "and the older members of the family weren't any too tidy. So I made up my mind that I wasn't going to be a 'pick-up' drudge for the rest of the household. I set up a big fine box, a box with an oblong hole in the top, into which I put every single thing—hat, coat, toy, pipe, no matter what—that I found lying around in the way. And to get his or her property the owner had to pay a penny—if it was one of the children; ten cents in case of the older ones. As the children have only an allowance of ten cents a week each, they didn't naturally want to pay it out in fines; so they began to be careful. Gradually the whole family mended their ways, and now my fine box is generally empty, and the house is as tidy as you please."

Intelligence in the Kitchen.

The higher the intelligence and the broader the education of the woman in the kitchen, the greater the pleasure and satisfaction in household duties.

The women who cooks intelligently is commanding great and mysterious forces of nature. She is an alchemist behind an apron. At her command food constituents that are indigestible, unpalatable and even poisonous, are subjected to chemical changes that render them an epicurean delight. The woman of real intelligence and powers of imagination finds in her well ordered kitchen a source of deep and enduring interest and pleasure.

Day of Rest and Pleasure

Filipinos of Both Sexes Make Sunday a Time of Enjoyment—The Market Women.

It is the women who market the produce. Early each morning long lines of these farmer wives, with great cigars in their mouths and large baskets of wares on their heads, can be seen striding along the narrow trails toward the capital city where market is held, says a Manila correspondent.

Strong and happy, they wade through the streams and the mud, calling out to one another as they go, and only stopping to get a fresh light for their cigars from some one of their number or some one whom they chance to meet. Once at market they chat, smoke, laugh and barter for hours over a few small tomatoes, some green squash, a live chicken, eggs, fruit, sugar or anything they happen to have, and toward noon they straggle home, having had a good visit and sold or exchanged their wares.

Sunday is the one really strenuous day for the Filipino. It is the big market day when people come from all the surrounding country, and it is the time when cock-fights are allowed. Men spend a good share of their time during the week in training their pet roosters, and on Sunday, early and late, they can be seen going to and from the pit, carrying their game-cocks under their arms.

Excitement runs high and their joyous shouts can be heard for a long way. Some women attend the fights, but most of them do the double duty of attending mass and then patronizing the market, which is just across the street from the church. All day Sunday they are active and excitable but the next day they settle back into their quiet, uneventful lives.

Cheering Her Up.

Islington, which is no longer rural, was once so esteemed by medical men that they sent their patients there after severe illness. Many also went there in the last stages in the forlorn hope that the invigorating air might restore them to health. A story related by Dr. Abernethy turns on the latter class of visitors. One of his patients engaged some rooms in Islington, and casually remarked to the landlady that the banisters on the staircase were very much broken. "Lor' bless you, mam," said the landlady, "it's no use to mend them, for they always get broken when the undertaker's men bring the coffins downstairs."—London Chronicle.

AT THE SIGN OF THE SHOES

Simple but Significant Device of a Long Island Cobbler to Save His Patrons' Time.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Time saving is not less important in the country than in the city. That's what the farmers will tell you as they regard you disdainfully for your presumption in looking upon countrymen as having lots of time on their hands. So when a man with whom they have to deal devises a way to save them time or make things easier for them they like him for it and are inclined to stick by him.

By doing just this a Long Island cobbler makes an easy living, and one that appears to be comfortable to him. It certainly is an independent one, for he is sole monarch of his home and shop, and none will enter there save when bidden by his simple device. None even starts for Crispin's unless the device calls, for it can be seen a long distance down the roads of Southold town, and if it isn't seen Crispin isn't receiving work.

This shoemaker will have no sign blazoning his name before the world. He squats in a plain frame house on the south road at the foot of Willow hill, with the Bowery lane at his elbow, Pine Neck and Goose Creek for a vista and the soldiers' monument and Southold village down the street at his left. The plain boards of the building bear no name, though a shingle at a corner of the house tells that the place is for sale.

But when Crispin is in and working or ready to receive work or to deliver jobs completed there hangs on pegs in the front of the building at either side of the door pairs of old shoes. People up the hill or across the meadows or down the street have merely to look out of their windows or from their dooryards or fields to see whether it's the proper time to go to the cobbler's. No waste of time in unnecessary trips. If driving they need neither turn aside nor get out of their vehicles for a possible futile trip to a closed shop, for if there are no boots garnishing Crispin's front door posts it would be like going to a bank to do business after three o'clock. If the boots are there, on the other hand, so is Crispin and ready for callers. It's simple, the people like it, and apparently so does Crispin.

PASSING OF THE EVANGELIST

Only a Few of Any Prominence Left and Their Influence Has Become More Constricted.

Boston.—The church evangelist seems to have served his day. He is less conspicuous than he was some years ago, and his influence is more restricted. A new order of worship as well as thought in the church is responsible for this change, and the new order is simply a part of the general transition toward a safer and more permanent system of public expression. Conditions are not favorable to the peripatetic preacher now, and there are only a few of them of any prominence whatever.

Undoubtedly the old-time evangelist found his richest harvest in the emotional heart. Are hearts less emotional today, or are the people more thoughtful? It must be the latter. It cannot be that they are less religious, if our statistics, which show steady increases in church populations, be infallible. Ministers maintain their people are more inquiring, more honest in their thought, and, therefore, more and not less pious, but the difference between their piety now and that of yesterday is that the preachers are appealing more and more to their reason than their emotion.

And this is as it should be. The new conditions make the local pastor a more important and influential factor and give greater stability and permanence to the church and its agencies. But with the passing of the modern circuit rider have come new enterprises for propagating the faith. They have assumed various forms and are more systematic and aggressive, both as to their character and influence.

NONE KNEW THE MODERN RIP

Wanderer Returns to His Old Home in New York After Absence of Fifty-One Years.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Alfred Booth Sands is a veritable Rip Van Winkle except that he did not sleep. Given up for dead years and years ago, he has returned at the age of seventy-nine, and, after an absence of 51 years, to the village of Milton, where he was born, to find that nearly all his relatives and friends, including the sweetheart of his young manhood, are dead, and that few remain who remember him. He is now renewing associations with relatives whom he abruptly severed more than half a century ago to seek his fortune in California.

For 18 years Sands has been in the Soldiers' home in California. While sick last spring a friend on an adjoining bed saluted him as "Rip Van Winkle." Instantly the familiar story ran through his mind and he came east under that name to re-enact the story. Only the old stage driver remembered him when he arrived at Milton. His mother lived for 20 years after he went away, and, for nearly all that time, confident of his return, she kept a lamp burning at night in the window of her home. After her death the courts declared Sands legally dead.

DOCTORS ADVISED OPERATION—DECIDED TO TRY GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY

I want to tell you in a few words what your Swamp-Root did for me, believing that my testimony may do some other suffering person a great deal of good.

About six years ago, I was dangerously ill, consulted three doctors, all of whom said I had kidney trouble. One of the doctors analyzed my urine and reported that I had gravel, and further said that in order to regain my health and life, an operation would be necessary. I did not want to be operated on as I was afraid that I would not recover. Someone told me of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and said it was a reliable medicine for kidney trouble, so I decided to try it and went to Mr. Rose, the druggist, at 303 Central Ave., Minneapolis, and bought a bottle, took it, noticed results and continued taking it until I was entirely cured.

Having been free from any kidney trouble for over six years, I consider that I am absolutely cured and know that Swamp-Root has the credit.

I never fail to tell my friends about your remedy, as I believe it is the best of its kind. Your U & O Ointment is also very good. We are never without a jar in our house.

Yours very truly,

Planning a Desperate Revenge.

The haughty, imperious beauty handed him back his ring.

"Now that all is over between us," she said, "I suppose you will buy a revolver and put an end to your wretched existence?"

"Worse than that!" he hissed, being careful to introduce the necessary sibilant; "far wors-s-se! I shall steal a revolver! And I shall shoot your measly little sore-eyed poodle!"

A wild shriek burst from her lips.
She fell upon her knees and——
But he had gone.

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props, Boston, Mass.

His Point of View.

"John, dear," queried the young wife, glancing up from the physical culture magazine she was perusing, "what is your idea of a perfect figure?"

"Well," replied her husband, "$100,000 may not be perfection, but it's near enough to satisfy a man of my simple tastes."

What About Him?

The talk had gone back and fro, and the youthful socialist had been announcing that no man ought to get his living by cheating, and we all listened to him, and agreed that it was dreadful when men and women did not tell the truth, but tried to make their living by deceiving people. Millionaires, landowners, financiers, we sacrificed all of them who cheat the public. "No one should make a living by deception," said the young man. Then a quiet voice from a woman came from the corner of the sofa, "What about the conjurer?"—London Chronicle.

"That First Invented Sleep."

"Now blessings light on him that first invented this same sleep! It covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak; it is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases all the pleasures of the world cheap; and the balance that sets the king and the shepherd, the fool and the wise man even. There is only one thing, which somebody once put into my head, that I dislike in sleep—it is that it resembles death. There is very little difference between a man in his first sleep and a man in his last sleep."—From Cervantes.

The Key to Germany.

Capt. Charles King, the author, praised, at the Milwaukee club, the German element in Milwaukee's population.

"I know a soldier," said Captain King, "who met the kaiser last year in Berlin.

"'You have a thorough knowledge of our best thought and customs,' said the kaiser. 'Have you ever been to Germany before?'

"'O, yes, sir,' said the soldier.

"'What cities have you visited? Berlin and Hamburg?' asked the kaiser.

"'No, sir,' said the soldier. 'Milwaukee.'"

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

IMPORTANCE OF CONCRETE DRAIN TILE ON FARM

Becomes Harder and Stronger With Age and Can Be Made as Porous as Those Made of Clay —Retains Its Shape.

Concrete tile become harder and stronger with age and may be made as porous as clay tile; in comparison the clay tile becomes water-soaked and disintegrates in the years of service, thus causing broken tile and a useless drain.

This is easily demonstrated by taking up concrete tile and clay tile that have been imbedded in the ground; while the former are as strong as one could wish and lift easily, the clay are brittle, and must be handled with extreme care to prevent breakage.

Again, to employ vitrified clay tile is to make a drain that does not absorb water from the soil except at the joints; while a concrete tile has all the advantages of being porous and yet fully as strong as the best vitrified tile.

The simple machine illustrated with this article may be built in any size at a slight cost, and will enable anyone to make the best quality of concrete tile at a cost of 55 cents a rod when made in the 4-inch size; 77 cents a rod for 5-inch; 88 cents for 6-inch; $1.10 for 8-inch; $1.65 for 9-inch; $1.88 for 10-inch, and $2.64 for 12-inch tile.

The cost is based on sand at 75 cents a cubic yard; cement at $2 per barrel; labor at $2 a day. The tile are made as strong as possible, using one part cement to three parts of the gravel, which will give them all the strength needed for any service.

The 4-inch tile are made three-quarters of an inch thick; the 5, 6, and 8-inch tile are made one inch thick; the 9 and 10-inch are made 1 3-8 inches thick, and the 12-inch 1½ inches thick.

In this manner you can estimate the cost of your drain and easily compare with the cost of clay tile of the same size.

By employing the proper methods for handling concrete in the winter, you may employ your spare time during the winter in making this much-needed article on the farm, and thus save the cost of labor, which is the greatest item in the above table of costs, averaging from 44 to 77 cents per rod of tile.

The machine explained in this article is one making a 6-inch tile, and from this explanation any other tile may be easily constructed.

A box form is built of two boards 18 inches long and 8 inches wide. And two boards 18 inches long and 10 inches wide. These are joined together to, make a form, the inside measurements being 8x8 inches and 18 inches high.

Fasten these boards together with two hinges at each of three corners, and the fourth corner fasten with two hooks and eyelets as shown in the illustration; this allows the machine to be folded back from the tile without injury.

Now nail in each corner of this box some three-cornered or beveled strips 18 inches long, but nail to just one side of board only, which will hold them in place and yet allow the machine to fold back from the work easily.

For the core take a 6-inch stovepipe 24 inches long and inside same place a 6-inch board 30 inches long, nailing securely as shown in the illustration. The top of this board is cut to make a handle to draw out the core, as illustrated.

The bottom is cut down to leave a small three-quarters-of-an-inch projection or pin on same, which sets into the holes bored in the pallet, thus insuring the core being always in the center of the form.

The pallets are made of any boards larger than the form used for molding the tile, and in the center is bored a three-quarter-inch hole to receive the pin on the bottom of the board in the core.

The outside part of the mold is held in position by four iron pins or spikes. These are placed by setting the casing in the correct position on the pallet and then on each side mark where the pin is to be placed, bore a hole for the same and arrange so it can be easily inserted and removed. Small bolts or spikes will do for this purpose.

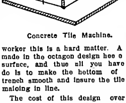
A pallet is prepared for as many tile as you wish to make each day, and the tile are left on the same for at least 48 hours before removing, when they may be piled up and the pallets used again.

In operating, the machine is placed in position on the pallet with the core in place. The mortar is placed in the mold and tamped down.

The tamping process must begin with the first mortar put in, otherwise the tile will be too porous. Add mortar and tamp down, and so on until the mold is filled. Now simply draw out the core and unhook the sides and fold back from the tile leaving it upon the pallet to dry for 48 hours.

The tile thus made are 18 inches long, requiring but 11 to the rod, and are octagon in shape which is so planned that they may be easily laid.

A round tile must be very carefully bedded, otherwise they will get out of line, and for the inexperienced worker this is a hard matter. A tile made in the octagon design has a flat surface, and thus all you have to do is to make the bottom of the trench smooth and insure the tile remaining in line.



Concrete Tile Machine.

The cost of this design over a round tile is but very little, and as it has many advantages, it should appeal to the inexperienced worker as he cannot help but secure correct and satisfactory results.

While the tile may be made in shorter lengths, it is merely a waste of labor as the 18-inch lengths are much quicker laid, and the tile are porous so the joints need not be as close as with vitrified clay.

Another great advantage of concrete tile is that each tile is perfect, while clay tile are very apt to draw out of shape in burning, and thus make trouble when laying them.

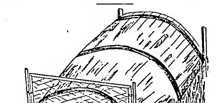
Selecting Breeds.

Farmers care more for the quality of their cattle, sheep and horses than they used to do. It is as much as advantage to extend their pride and care to poultry as to any branch of their work. A flock of uniform size and color is very attractive and live birds sell better.

Denatured Alcohol Stills.

Farmers in New York state are organizing small companies to construct and operate denatured alcohol stills. Pulp from cider mills and other by-products will be used.

EXCELLENT COOP FOR CHICKS



Secure a stout, clean barrel and drive shingle nails through the hoops on both sides of each stave, clinching them firmly, says Farm Press. Divide the barrel into halves—lengthwise—sawing through both the bottom and hoops. Secure the coop to four stakes—one driven at each corner. One end is, of course, closed by the half of the bottom. The other should be protected by a gate. It is well to cover the whole outfit with wire screening to protect it against animals which prowl by night.

NECESSITY OF GOOD CROPS

Farmer Is in Better Position to Stand Poor Yield Than Manufacturer, Banker and Railroad Man.

(By G. R. PERKINS.)

Who is most interested in a good crop and a sure crop? The farmer, the manufacturer, the railroad man, merchant, or the banker? The more I study the problem the more it looks as though the farmer is the best fixed to stand a poor crop, and that it hurts the others more. The farmer loses less sleep over it than any of the others and proportionately fewer farmers fail than any of the other lines of business mentioned in a time of poor crops. The farmer can get his living from the farm, can reduce expenses and economize in a way that the others cannot. From this it is plain that it is of vital interest to all that crops be a sure thing for each year, and each of these industries which has really grown out of the farm ought to put forth their best effort to see that the farmer handles his farm according to the best that we know of farming.

Driving Cows.

Never move cows faster than a comfortable walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding. They should never be excited by hard driving, abuse, loud talking or unnecessary disturbance. The milking should be done quietly, quickly, cleanly and thoroughly. Do not allow any unnecessary noise or delay. Begin milking at exactly the same hour in the morning and evening, and milk the cows in the same order.

Pure-Bred Horses.

The living pure-bred stallions owned by the members of the Percheron Society of America are estimated at 24,000 and the mares at 16,000 by Secretary Wayne Dinsmore. Other pure-bred Percherons will probably run the total number up to 50,000.

ARE STRANGE TWINS

Missouri County Claims Distinction in Unusual Kinship.

Man and Tree Made Their Start in Life on the Same Day and Have Grown Up Together—Now 63 Years Old.

St. Louis, Mo.—New Garden neighborhood in Ray county, Missouri, boasts the possession of unique twins, a man and a tree, 63 years old. March 15, 1847, saw the birth, on his father's farm near New Garden, of Samuel Hightower. The same day Elias and Thomas, older brothers of the new arrival, set out in the yard before the house a slip of a sugar tree, or hard maple, as many know it.

Thus the two made their start in life together, and thus while the babe that was to be a man, hard thinking and hard working, fought its way through the precarious first days of its existence to a securer hold on life, before the door the slip that was to be a tree, great and spreading, underwent the same process.

When passing years had given the youngster sufficient strength to toddle about the yard one of the chief of the innumerable wonders his round eyes beheld was the sturdy young "sugar tree." His first efforts at climbing were expended on it.

The hard maple is of slow growth, and this one at that time was not large, yet to the child it seemed of great size.

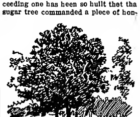
Through the years of his childhood his happiest hours were those spent in scrambling around over its limbs. As he grew older, large enough to take a part in the work in the fields, he found a new pleasure in the sugar tree. Resting in its shade during the noon period was a pleasing reprieve from the toil in the sunbaked fields.

The Man.

In time the boy reached man's estate and married, but as the young couple made the old place their home, the association between the twins was not interrupted by this momentous event in the man's life. It was in the tree's shade that the bridal party, on arriving at the house, halted to recuperate from the drive through the July heat. The grassy plot beneath it formed the parlor where friends and relatives were entertained on hot days.

When children came to the couple the young mother availed herself of the sugar tree's help in caring for them. A cradle or pallet underneath its boughs, and a mosquito net, insured baby a sound nap.

As time transformed these babies into children they, like their father before them, found their chief delight in clambering about over the tree, and now, though they are grown men and women, they still cherish a deep affection for it. Houses have come and gone from the yard, but each succeeding one has been so built that the sugar tree commanded a piece of honor before the front entrance. In planning changes in the place it is always taken into consideration. Nothing is done that may endanger its vigor or detract from its beauty in the least.



The Tree.

Mr. Hightower, or "Uncle Sam," as everyone calls him, is inclined to be old fashioned as regards the love of home, and has never traveled much, and in all the 63 years there has scarcely been a day that he has not seen the maple.

One Way of Being Anonymous.

New York.—Booker T. Washington, at the National Business league's convention in New York, praised the modesty of the anonymous giver. "But, of course," he added, with a smile, "when I praise anonymity I don't include the kind—common enough among philanthropists—that Deacon Brown of Loachapoka favored.

"Loachapoka is a small place not far from Tuskogee. Deacon Brown arose in the church there one Sunday morning to read a list of subscribers to the missionary fund. He began: 'Rev. Calhoun Travers, $10; Brother Stephan Pagat, $56; Sister Phoebe Rica, $7; anonymous donor, myself, $6.'"

Wireless Music.

New York.—A recent test of wireless telephony was made to show its value for transmitting music. Several selections were sung in a transmitter at Park avenue and Fortieth street, New York, and were listened to by a group of newspaper men at the Metropolitan Tower. At times the singing was very clear, but frequently it was impossible to hear anything but a confused b[illegible] of sound.

HIS LIVELIHOOD AT STAKE

Certainly Candidate for Governor Could Not Expect to Get That Vote.

An incident in which former Governor Odell of New York figured as the victim was told by Col. James Hamilton Lewis at a recent banquet.

"When Governor Odell was last running for office," said Colonel Lewis, "there had been a great deal of talk about Niagara Falls and the electrical power that could be conferred on all parts of New York. One day an old negro halted Mr. Odell and said:

"'Mr. Odell, is yo' runnin' for gov'nar, sah?'

"'I am,' answered the candidate.

"'I guess yo' want my vote, den,' said the colored man.

"'Well, I would like to have your vote, Zeb. I have known you for so many years.'

"'Well, I jist want to ask you a question, Mr. Odell, befo' I give mah vote to you. Are yo' for electric lights in die town?'

"'Well, Zeb, I am for all modern improvements,' said Odell, with a slight flourish.

"'Well, seh, I can't vote for you,' said Zeb with firmness. 'Yo' done forget dat I is a lamp lighter.'"

LOOK TO YOUR KIDNEYS.

When Suffering From Backache, Headaches and Urinary Troubles.

They are probably the true source of your misery. To keep well, you must keep your kidneys well. There is no better kidney remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

Every Picture Tells A Story

Ernest Ulbright, Kellogg, Idaho, says: I was nearly dead with kidney trouble. I passed quantities of blood and lost 15 pounds in weight in three weeks. My bladder was so full of gravel I could not hold the urine. I passed several stones as large as a pea. I rapidly improved under the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and was soon well and strong."

"Kin by Marriage."

A caller was talking to a small Harlem girl who is extravagantly fond of her mother. She likes her father well enough, but he is far from being first in her affections. The caller, knowing the situation, asked the child why she didn't love her father as she did her mother.

"Oh, you see," she explained, loftily, "he is only kin to us by marriage."

Buy A MONARCH

MALLEABLE RANGE!

It Pays For Itself.

BUYING a Monarch Range is like investing a little money at such a splendid interest that it pays back the principal in a year or so, and then for unlimited years brings a return of from 25 to 50 per cent.

Because—

A Monarch requires but little more than one-half the fuel burned up by a "steel range" of the common type. Moreover, it does away with the usual repair bills—saves much time—eliminates the hard part of kitchen work—and in addition it does its work so well it satisfies as no other can.

You don't have to take our word for these things

Investigate for yourself the way the Monarch is built. Let us show you how the Malleable iron and steel plates are riveted together, making air-tight joints without the use of STOVE PUTTY. See the brightly polished top and body, which will retain their fine appearance forever without the use of stove blacking. Also notice the duplex draft and other exclusive features. These things PROVE our statements.

Monarch
MALLEABLE
The "Stay Satisfactory" Range

Steel Ranges built in the ordinary way are wasteful—extravagant

They are not made in the right way nor even of the right kind of material. It is not wise to buy one, nor even to continue to use one, though you may have had it only a few years. Its seams have already opened up—the stove bolts worked loose, the putty has fallen out and these "air leaks" into the flues and firebox cause a waste of fuel every year equal to a large part of the cost of a Monarch.

A Personal Word To Intending Buyers

In ranges as well as other lines, we aim to handle the best to be had. Our many years' experience in the range business has acquainted us with all makes of ranges and we know that the Monarch is the one and only range that could justify the above claim.

"Ouch—my shoes hurt my feet." How often you hear this expression after a person has gotten a new pair of shoes, worn them and gotten them damp. It is because the shoes have shrunk and are pulled out of shape that they have become "foot-torturers." But with the Gotzian Shoe, which is sold in Red Lake Falls by Mat Skala this shrinking and stretching out of shape is impossible. When the Gotzian shoe is made the leather is pulled tightly over the wooden last (over which all shoes are made) taking out all the stretch and the leather which is moist is allowed to dry thoroughly while on these lasts where it can't shrink or pull out of shape. That's why the Gotzian shoe "Fits like your footprint."

Mrs. O. Houle.

Mrs. O. Houle, who suffered a stroke of paralysis while trading at LaBissoniere's store, Tuesday, Nov. 1, died Friday Nov. 4. Following her sudden illness, Mrs. Houle was taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. Jos. Lachance, where she was cared for until her death.

The funeral was held at St. Joseph's church Monday, Nov, 14, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating and interment was at the church cemetery.

Mrs. Houle had resided in southern Red Lake county for many years and had many friends who will be pained to learn of her death. She is survived by two sisters and seven brothers, one of whom is Noel Delorme of this city. All of the brothers and sisters except one, Mrs. Lafromboise of North Yakima, Wash., reside in this vicinity.

Can You Guess?

At Thief River Falls there were four votes against county division and forty "spoiled ballots." It is difficult to understand how so many mistakes could be made after so vigorous an educational campaign on "how to mark your ballot" had been conducted.

If there had been any contests for the county offices it would be easier to understand how forty intelligent Thief River voters could spoil their ballots in marking them.

Sick, but Not Seasick.

Thomas Brown was about to take a short sea voyage. Thomas hated the sea and all that's in it with a twenty-two carat hatred, for he suffered horribly when on the briny ocean, but he had to go, and there was no help for it. This time, however, he determined to put a new seasickness cure theory into practice, and no sooner had he got on board then he stowed himself away in his bunk and slept like a top till early next morning. He felt in perfect trim and went up on deck beaming with delight.

"I've found a certain cure for seasickness, captain," he announced to that individual. "Go to your bunk as soon as you get aboard and don't show your nose out of it until you are near your destination. It worked like a charm with me. I haven't had a qualm all night. Why, what are you laughing at?"

"Oh, nothing," said the captain, "only the machinery broke down just as we were starting, and we haven't moved out of dock all night. The other passengers were transferred, but we didn't know you were aboard."

His Conundrum.

It was during the prune course at the boarding house breakfast table. The thin man spoke:

"I've got a new one this morning. Why is a one cent stamp like a sloop?"

"Because," began the stenographer, with her eyes on the ceiling.

"No; that's not the reason," said the thin man.

"My guess is because a sale makes it go," suggested the fat boarder at the end of the table.

"Very good," said the thin man, "but not the correct answer."

"Well, we give it up," came in chorus.

"Because it's a single sticker," said the thin man as he began to dodge things.—Yonkers Statesman.

Pastor's Bad Example.

The intemperate citizen had promised the clergyman that he would that night take just another drink and come to service on the morrow.

On Monday the clergyman chided the citizen for not having kept his word. "You promised me you'd take just another drink; see how many you've had since."

"Yes," retorted the man astutely, "yesterday morning you said, 'Now, just another word,' and see how many more you gave us after that."—Widow.

NEARLY SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND

Remarkable Showing made by Red Lake Falls Banks In Statements This Week.

More Than $582000 on Deposit in Two Local Banking Institutions.

In the quarterly statements published in this issue of the Gazette the First State Bank and the Merchant's State Bank made a remarkable showing of bank deposits. There is on deposit in the Merchants State Bank over $272000 and in the First State Bank over $310,000. This is an increase of more than $50,000, each institution increasing its deposits by about $25,000 since the publication of the last report.

This showing indicates a healthy financial condition in southern Red Lake county. Few cities the size of Red Lake Falls make so good a showing.

STICKERS STICK.

Saugstad Goes to Senate From Polk by That Route.

A. D. Stephens, the political war horse of Crookston and Polk county, was defeated for re-election to the state senate. Saugstad, who defeated Stephens, got there by the sticker route by a majority of 230, and at that, some of the stickers didn't stick. A number of ballots were thrown out because the stick were not properly attached.

The victory was a decided one, since Stephens had won in the primary election and had the advantage of having his name printed on the general election ballot, while Saugstad was defeated in the primary election and his friends were compelled to get his name on the ballot with gum paper in the hands of the voters.

County option was the big issue of the Polk county campaign and the optionists have won a victory.

County division was defeated by a majority of 289.

Owing to the change it is essential that accounts be balanced at once. Those having bills against the firm are requested to present them at once, and we trust those owing the Gazette will call as promptly as possible and make settlement.

DEER ARE PLENTIFUL

A Number Killed In Country East of Town.

Deer are more plentiful in Red Lake county this fall than for many seasons. A number have been killed in the country east of town. It has been reported that farmers have killed half a dozen or more since last Thursday, the day the season opened. Tuesday a hunting party consisting of E. G. Buse, Clem Brunelle and P. B. Gaass brought in a young buck. Clem fired the fatal shot and he could not help bagging his game for he shot in a whole flock of deer. On Monday Oliver and Henry Belair and George and Fred Cyr drove ten or twelve miles east and returned with a young doe. The killing of a number of deer has excited the sportsmen and it is said that the roads and runaways between this city and Plummer are lined with hunters looking for big game.

WANT NEW COUNTIES

Fosston and McIntosh are Ambitious Would-be County Seat Towns.

The second petition in a week for the division of Polk county was filed with the Secretary of State Schmahl Monday, and there undoubtedly will be an effort by the petitioners to have the petition which was filed last week by the McIntosh people declared illegal and void.

The petition filed Monday asks for a vote on the question of creating Roosevelt county out of eastern Polk county, with Fosston as its county seat. The petition filed last week asks for a vote on the creation of Columbia county with McIntosh as its county seat. The territory of the two proposed counties is nearly the same. Only one petition can be voted on at one time and that only at the general election in the fall. The first petition filed that complies with the law in every respect will have to be voted on and the other is cast aside.

The petitioners for Roosevelt county will allege that signers for the Columbia county petition were obtained on election day or before and will endeavor to show that any signatures obtained before the result of the last election was known are invalid. A petition for the creation of Park county with Erskine as the county seat was voted on and defeated last Tuesday.

Returns Show That Eighty-Eight Votes Were Spoiled at Thief River Falls.

Proposition to Divide County Carried by Majority of 102.

The official canvass of the election returns was completed by the canvassing board this morning and and some very interesting figures are found. The total vote cast—not counting the "spoiled" ballots—was 3722, by far the largest vote in the history of the county. The county division proposition received a majority of 102—and at Thief River Falls there were eighty-eight "spoiled" ballots.

What do you think?

People who had watched the fight closely had estimated that at Thief River Falls there would be not far from one hundred votes against division. That's hitting it pretty close, isn't it? There were six votes counted against division and eighty-eight ballots were "spoiled."

And what of it? The Gazette may tell you more about that in a later issue.

Following is the official vote on the county division proposition and on governor:

MEN SHOOT JAWS OFF.

Two Men Mutilate Themselves in Horrible Manner.

A report from Hallock dated Saturday says: Ben and Clay Smith came to Ole Paulson's place on the Red river Thursday carrying a gun. Each had his lower jaw shot off in exactly the same way. Their faces were a bloody mass, tongues shot off and their jaws a mass of broken flesh and bones.

Coroner Muir at Hallock was phoned for and he had them taken to the Drayton, North Dakota, hospital.

They were still very much intoxicated, but when he asked one how the shooting was done he scrawled on a piece of paper "He was drunk and so was he, he shot himself and so did 1, on purpose."

They came from Iowa this fall and have been working, threshing and when the cold weather came engaged in trapping on the Red river ten miles west of Hallock.

The young men are 25 years of age. One may recover, but if he does, his face will be forever disfigured and he will be unable to talk. But it is feared that his jaw will never be in shape to chew food again.

Cheap Power.

Owing to the installation of all day electric service, the Gazette has a five horse power gasoline engine that will be sold very cheap. Just the thing for grinding feed, pumping water, sawing wood, etc. The farmer who buys this engine will get a snap. Better come in and look at the engine.

GENTILLY SCORES AGAIN.

Next to Highest Average in State Scoring Contest.

Winners in the butter and cheese scoring contests conducted by the State Dairy and Food commission during the past six months were announced by Andrew French, commissioner, Saturday. Several hundred persons started in the contest and ninety finished. The prizes which will be awarded have not been decided upon, but will be announced within the next two weeks.

Gabriel Berrow of Gentilly received next to the highest average score on cheese for five monthly contests; his average score was 95.5. J. J. Rock of Pine Island scored 96, and Younggen, also of Pine Island, scored 94.83.

COURT HAS ADJOURNED

Work of the October General Term of District Court Completed Yesterday.

District court adjourned yesterday, the work of October term having been completed. The jurymen were discharged Tuesday, all jury cases having been disposed of at that time.

In the case of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine company vs. D. Linnihan and J. F. Gray, the court ordered judgement of $738 for plaintiff.

In the case of Samuel V. Bailey vs. Anton Homlka, an action to recover on a promisory note, the the court ordered judgement of $126.83 for the plaintiff.

Thos. F. Connors was the defendant in a suit to recover commission for sale of a piece of land, E. W. Komarek being the plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

In the case of P. B. Gaass vs. Lydia E. Howle the jury brought in a verdict of $160 and interest for plaintiff.

The case of Dahlin vs. St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry., an action to determine title to land, was settled, the company giving the plaintiff a deed to the land.

Aime Benoit brought action against the Great Northern Railway company to recover because of damages to ground caused by overflow of Clearwater river alleged to be due to the construction of a railroad grade in this city. Plaintiff got verdict for $125.

The only criminal case of importance was that of State vs. A. N. Daly. Daly was charged with grand larceny in the second degree. It was a complicated business transaction that landed Daly in the county jail. Daly "bought" a team of horses and gave a check in payment. The check was drawn for a larger amount than the price of the team and Daly got a check in "change." The Daly check was not honored because of no funds when the local bank people wired for information and that brought about the arrest of the defendant. In court Daly testified that he would have had money at the bank by the time the check arrived and the cashier said that might have been the case—and with that testimony the jurymen decided they could not convict and the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal.

SALE OF LANDS POSTPONED.

The United States land office at Crookston has received the following communication from Fred Dennet, of the general land office at Washington:

"I have to advise you that on October 12, last, the Department approved a recommendation of this office postponing the sale of the eleven townships in the western part of the Red Lake Diminished Reservation, opened under the Act of February 20, 1904 (33 Stats. L. 46), pending legislation by Congress.

"This action was taken at the request of Senator Clapp and Representative Steenerson."

A TIGHT LID ON INDIAN COUNTRY

Order Affects All Territory Covered by the Indian Treaty of 1855.

Shipment of Liquor Forbidden—Bemidji, Cass Lake and Other Towns Affected.

A vast stretch of territory in Northern Minnesota, comprising about one sixth of the area of the entire state, is made completely "dry" by the latest orders of "Pussyfoot" Johnson, agent of the Bureau of Indian Affairs at Washington. This order is being carried out to the letter by the common carriers. Railroad and express companies operating through that district are refusing all liquor shipments.

Prohibition, as the word is understood, never made a locality so "dry" as the latest order of the famous Indian agent, provided that order is brought into effect, and all signs point to the conclusion that it will be. The latest order of Mr. Johnson absolutely forbids a man to step upon an inch of that Northern Minnesota territory with a bottle of liquor in his pocket. No person is allowed to bring liquor within that region at all.

This vast district includes Becker, Hubbard and Cass counties, and parts of Crow Wing, Aitkin, Pine, Carlton, St. Louis Itasca, Koochiching, Beltrami, Clearwater, Mahnomen, Polk, Norman, Clay, Otter Tail and Wadena counties. The chief cities and towns are Brainerd, Hibbing, Ada, Bemidji, Hawley, Lake Park, Detroit, Frazee, Perham, Cass Lake, Grand Rapids, Park Rapids, Aitkin and Walker. Three thriving breweries in this territory will be put out of business.

By issuing this order covering strictly the limits of the 1855 treaty territory, Mr Johnson considers that he is complying with the recent order of Secretary of State Ballinger to the effect that the anti-liquor treaty provisions must be enforced without discrimination. Mr. Ballinger overruled the former method by which Mr. Johnson sought to surround the Indians with "dry" territory, by placing certain "dry zones" about their homes.

In an interview at Washington Secretary Ballinger has expressed his approval of the work of the Indian agent.

DEATH OF PIONEER.

Joseph Brohman Passed Away Suddenly Sunday.

Joseph Brohman, one of the pioneer settlers of Red Lake county, died at his home in this city Sunday morning at 9:45 o'clock. Mr. Brohman had been ill only a few days and his condition was not considered serious until a short time before his death.

Mr. Brohman was born in Ontario, Canada, and was seventy-two years old last August. Twenty-seven years ago he came to the states and lived a short time at Long Grass and at Fartila. Twenty-four years ago the family moved to Lambert in this county, then a part of Polk county. The family lived there until five or six years ago, since which time Mr. and Mrs. Brohman have lived in this city, the children having grown and moved away.

Deceased is survived by the widow and eight children, six of whom were here for the funeral. Those who were here are Mrs. House of Marinat, Wis., Mrs. Nepper of Lindsay, Minn., Mrs. Hudson who lives in this city, Wendell J. and George of Grand Forks and Henry of Sandburn, N. Dak.

A daughter, Mrs. Ochstadt, and one son, Anthony, were unable to be here for the funeral.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Wednesday at St. Joseph's church, of which deceased was a member, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating.

Only two weeks ago Frank Brohman, a son of the deceased, died. He passed away while undergoing an operation for cancer at a Grand Forks hospital.

The friends of the bereaved family sympathize with them in the double affliction that has come to them.

DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE IS GENERAL

DIX ELECTED IN NEW YORK BY OVER ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND.—WILSON IN NEW JERSEY BY 20,000.

BEVERIDGE DEFEATED BY JOHN W. KERN

Gray Makes Poor Showing Against Eberhart, Which Day Atributes to Anti-Option Sentiment.—Foss Defeated Gov. of Massachusetts.—Harmon Wins in Ohio.

New York, N. Y. — John Dix, a business man, and the first Democratic nominee elected in 16 years, will be the next governor of New York. He was chosen by the people over Henry L. Stimson, Republican, for whom Theodore Roosevelt stumped the state, by a plurality based on nearly complete returns of from 55,000 to 65,000. New York city gave him a plurality of more than 100,000, while Stimson came down to the Bronx with about 40,000, leaving a substantial lead for the Democratic nominee.

The normal Republican majority upstate has greatly tended to cut down the rural vote and Stimson's estimated plurality to the borders of New York city, about 40,000, is less by 20,000 than the up-state vote polled by Hughes in 1908.

Both the assembly and senate returns ran strongly Democratic and there were some notable upsets in even the congressional districts. Representative Herbert Parsons, a lifelong friend and political associate of Theodore Roosevelt, and formerly chairman of the Republican county committee, was ousted by Jefferson M. Levy. Representative W. W. Cocks of Nassau county, Theodore Roosevelt's home seat, was tipped out by Martin Littleton. William S. Bennet was defeated for congress by Henry George, a son of the political economist.

Sereno Payne, father of the tariff bill, was re-elected, but his home town, Auburn, went for Dix, and Vice President Sherman's candidate for congress was defeated by a Democrat. Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, gave ground to Richard E. Connell, a Democrat. Not only did Colonel Roosevelt lose on the state ticket, and his candidate for congress in Nassau county, but his home town went for Dix and the Democrats jubilantly shouted that they had "beat him to a frazzle."

JOHN A. DIX.
Democratic Candidate for Governor of New York.

There were even indications that the Democrats might seize a working majority in the legislature and dictate the nomination of the next junior United States senator to succeed Senator Chauncey M. Depew, but more complete returns will be necessary to settle this issue.

Landslide Is General.

Elections held throughout the country resulted in a political convulsion of far-reaching extent similar to the famous tidal wave of 1882, and even more widespread in its effects.

The national house of representatives has been carried by the Democrats, who will control that branch of congress by a safe working majority after March 4 next, reversing the present Republican majority of 43. Representative Champ Clark of Missouri has announced his candidacy for speaker to succeed Speaker Cannon.

The United States senate will have a reduced Republican majority as a result of legislative elections held in many states.

In New Jersey Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, is elected governor over Vivian M. Lewis, Republican, by from 10,000 to 15,000, reversing the Republican plurality of 8,000 in 1907. The legislature of New Jersey is probably Democratic and will elect a Democratic United States senator to succeed John A. Kean.

In Massachusetts Foss, Democrat, defeated Governor Eben S. Draper, Republican, for re-election by about 25,000 plurality, reversing Governor Draper's former plurality of 8,000.

In Connecticut Judge Simeon E. Baldwin is elected governor over Charles A. Goodwin, Republican, by about 2,600 plurality, reversing the previous Republican plurality of 16,000.

In Ohio Governor Judson Harmon, Democrat, candidate for re-election, is elected by an estimated plurality of 30,000.

In New Hampshire Robert P. Bass, Republican candidate for governor, is elected by about 5,000 plurality.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART.

In Pennsylvania the election of John K. Tener, Republican candidate for governor, is claimed, but the later returns indicate a largely reduced plurality.

In Rhode Island Governor Pothier, Republican candidate for re-election, is elected governor by a reduction of about 1,000 in the previous plurality.

In Tennessee the fusion candidate, W. Hooper, is elected by 20,000 plurality.

In Michigan, Chase S. Osborn, Republican, is elected governor by a plurality estimated at 40,000.

In Wisconsin, Francis E. McGovern, Republican, is apparently elected by a reduced majority and the return of Senator La Follette is assured.

Democratic governors were elected in Alabama and South Carolina.

Returns from other localities of the Middle and Far West are not yet conclusive. In California Johnson and Bell are reported running neck and neck. In Wyoming the election of Carey, the Republican candidate for governor, is claimed by 4,000.

In Oklahoma both sides are claiming the governorship.

Republican United States senators are assured from Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan, Rhode Island and Wisconsin, and Democratic senators from New Jersey and probably Tennessee, in addition to those already elected.

Representatives Cannon of Illinois and Payne of New York, author of the tariff bill, are among the prominent Republicans re-elected to congress.

The Minnesota Results.

Governor Eberhart's election will be by a majority of from 40,000 to 70,000. It was a landslide for the Republican candidate for governor.

The entire Republican state ticket is elected with Governor Eberhart.

Before leaving headquarters, where he received the returns, Governor Eberhart said: "This has been a peculiar campaign. I have endeavored to present the issues of the campaign frankly to the people. I have told them where I stood and they have indorsed my position. I am elected and naturally I am pleased. Further than that I do not care to discuss the results. Except that I will say that the indorsement I have received gives me courage to go ahead with the policy of the 'square deal' and to give the people the very best possible service it is possible for me to give."

Gray Makes Good Showing.

James Gray, the Democratic candidate, was game to the finish and made a good showing, in spite of the results. Mr. Gray said:

"We made the best fight we could and we are satisfied if the people of Minnesota are. I think that the campaign has resulted in a long step forward in popular government. It usually takes two or three campaigns to educate the people in a new issue. I believe we have accomplished a great deal, to get the amount and character of support that we did. It was a straightforward campaign. I meant every word I said and I would rather be defeated on my platform than be defeated on a negative platform such as my opponent stood on. This campaign is simply a preliminary skirmish in Minnesota. The cause of Democracy is bound to win in Minnesota as it has won in the East."

Minnesota Congressmen.

Minnesota will send its usual delegation to congress with the one exception of Sydney Anderson of the First district.

In the Third district, C. R. Davis; the Sixth, C. A. Lindbergh; the Seventh, A. J. Volstead; the Ninth, Halvor Steenerson; there were no contests against the Republican congressmen.

Probably one of the most notable fights was that of the First district where Sydney Anderson, the man who defeated James A. Tawney, was pitted against H. L. Buck, the Democratic candidate. Anderson appears to have won by a majority ranging from 3,500 to 5,000. In the Second district, where a strenuous fight was on between Congressman W. S. Hammond and F. F. Elsworth, Hammond seems to have won by a small majority, but the result is in doubt and will remain so until the final results are obtained.

In Ramsey County.

In Ramsey county, Congressman F. C. Stevens has won over the barber candidate, J. L. Gieske, by a comfortable majority. It was estimated at 7,000.

In the Fifth or Hennepin district, Congressman Frank M. Nye has won. With two precincts to hear from, he had received a majority of 1,710. This is not the best possible showing for the Minneapolis congressman and indicates that the "Boiler Maker," in his appeal for support, has struck a responsive chord."

In the Eighth district, Congressman Clarence B. Miller, the Republican congressman from Duluth, has won by a good majority over Alfred Jaeques, his Democratic opponent.

In the other districts, where the Republican congressmen had no opposition, there was, of course, no particular interest, and they have been accorded nothing but a regular vote.

Probably the greatest interest centered in the First district, where a fight was on between Mr. Buck and the progressive candidate for congress. The Tawney men were out in revolt and threatened to get the scalp of the progressive candidate.

Probably Judge Buck's attitude on the tariff, when he declared himself in favor of a tariff for revenue only, had as much as anything to do with the success of Anderson.

Minneapolis Mayoralty.

With one precinct missing at 1 a. m. today, W. E. Satterlee, Republican candidate, has been elected mayor of Minneapolis for the two years beginning January 1, 1911. The total vote for mayor follows:

W. E. Satterlee—R	12,936
James C. Haynes—D	12,694
Frank H. Mellen—Pro	611
Thos. Van Lear—P. O	11,679

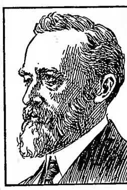
Satterlee's plurality.... 242

Thomas Van Lear, Public Ownership candidate, rallied the workingmen to his support by the tens of thousands and it is safe to say that he and his party will be a factor to be reckoned with in succeeding elections.

A careful analysis of the vote shows that Mr. Satterlee, by polling about 3,000 votes less than he did at the primaries, must have suffered as severely as did Mayor Haynes from the inroads of the Socialist organization. There is no question that Mayor Haynes can lay his defeat to the activity of Mr. Van Lear.

Beveridge Is Defeated.

Indianapolis, Ind. — The Democratic state ticket is elected, including both houses of the legislature. Albert J. Beveridge will be succeeded in the Senate by John W. Kern. The Democrats made a clean sweep of Marion county (Indianapolis), electing the entire legislative ticket. Vanderburg county (Evansville), is also carried by the Democrats, where they gained three members of the legislature.



SIMEON E. BALDWIN.
Democratic Candidate for Governor of Connecticut.

It is not improbable that 11 of the 13 congressmen from this state will be Democratic.

Democrats Control House.

Chicago, Ill. — Democratic control of the next house of representatives became a certainty shortly after midnight.

It was then known that the Democrats had gained 26 seats in the house, including two previously secured in Maine. Republicans gained from the Democrats net gain 24, which is sufficient to give them control.

That they will have a good working majority was indicated by the returns from several states, among them New Jersey.

Returns there showed there would probably be a gain of six Democrats in the representation of that state.

Other returns from New York and Pennsylvania indicated the success of several Democrats in their contests for seats now held by Republicans.

The Democrats also expected to increase their lead by returning several members from Illinois and also from Missouri.

The definite Democratic gains were: New York, 8; Pennsylvania, 3; North Carolina, 2; Ohio, 2; Massachusetts, 2; Maryland, 2; Connecticut, 1; Illinois, 1; Iowa, 1; Kentucky, 1; Missouri, 1; West Virginia, 1.

The Republican gains were: Massachusetts, 1; New York, 1; Pennsylvania, 1.

Lloyd's Statement.

James T. Lloyd, chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, issued the following statement:

"Present indications are that congress will be Democratic by about 35 majority. Thus far the returns indicate that our pre-election estimates were about correct.

"The causes which have led to the results of today are well known. It is a serious rebuke to the Republican party for its failure to reduce the tariff as the people believed the party had promised. The high cost of protected, manufactured articles which has resulted in greatly increased cost of living has had very much to do with producing this result. There is general dissatisfaction with existing political conditions and with the Republican administration. This has led to its repudiation as far as could be done at the polls.

WOODROW WILSON.
Democratic Candidate for Governor of New Jersey.

"The Democratic party has won a victory because the only hope of the people is in its supremacy.

"The Republican party has shown by its course that it will not enact legislation in the interest of the masses when such legislation would be to the detriment of the classes."

Barnes' Statement.

J. Mahlon Barnes, national secretary of the Socialist party, issued the following statement:

"The Socialist party comes out of the campaign with flying colors and has made the gain expected—that is one hundred per cent throughout the nation.

"The vote in 1908 was 424,000. This will be doubled. About 35 members of state legislatures are now assured in the states of Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota and Massachusetts. Three congressmen are assured, Berger and Gaylord of Milwaukee, and Bachman of the Twelfth Ohio district.

California is expected on later returns to quadruple the vote of two years ago."

Results in Iowa Doubtful.

Des Moines, Iowa. — At midnight last night both Democrats and Republicans claimed the governorship with the Democrats showing the greater confidence. If Governor Carroll is reelected it will be by the narrowest of margins.

Claude R. Porter, Democratic candidate, claimed that he would carry the state by 20,000, but more conservative estimates, based on returns from 100 precincts of 2,300 placed his plurality (if any) at four or five thousand.

Governor Carroll was scratched mercilessly, running behind his ticket in practically every precinct. The remainder of the Republican state ticket is probably Republican.

This state has 11 congressional districts.

I. S. Pepper, the young Democratic candidate in the Second district, walked away with the election, carrying every county over his opponent, Charles Grilk. It was in behalf of the latter that Colonel Roosevelt recently made an address at Davenport.

In the Fourth and Sixth districts respectively, the Republican incumbents, Congressman Haugen and Kendall were reported in danger. Burlington reported that Congressman Kennedy, Republican, "was safe." This statement was disputed by Democratic chairman Reed. S. F. Prouty, the progressive Republican candidate of the Seventh (Des Moines) district, who wrested the nomination from the veteran "stand-patter" Captain Hull, seemed to have landed the position so often sought unsuccessfully before.

CHARLES A. GOODWIN.
Republican Candidate for Governor of Connecticut.

Walter I. Smith, a member of the Cannon rules committee, and who is credited with speakership aspirations, was elected with greatly reduced plurality in the Ninth.

Stubbs Re-elected in Kansas.

Topeka, Kas. — Gov. W. R. Stubbs was re-elected in Kansas by a majority estimated by Republican campaign managers at from 12,000 to 20,000. Stubbs made his race on a progressive Republican platform, and was vigorously opposed by George A. Hodges.

The remainder of the Republican state ticket is practically certain of election.

The election of six Republican congressmen is conceded but the results of two congressional races remain in doubt. In the third district P. P. Bilkin, are running a close race. Frank Rockefeller, cousin of John D. Rockefeller, and Democrat, and L. D. Young, Rep., are having a hard struggle in the Sixth district.

Harmon Wins in Ohio.

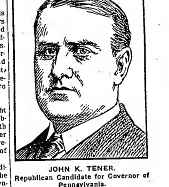
Cleveland, Ohio.—Dilatory returns indicated that Governor Judson Harmon, Democrat, has made a clean sweep of the state, defeating Warren G. Harding, Republican, and his plurality will approximate 50,000. With him he has carried at least two and possibly more Democratic congressional candidates in districts that have heretofore elected Republicans. Ohio will send at least 10 and possibly 12 Democrats to congress.

Surprise in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Wis. — The Social Democratic party will be represented in the next house of representatives by Victor L. Berger of the Fifth Wisconsin district, his election being conceded by the Republican committee. Incomplete returns show Berger to be leading his opponent, Henry C. Cochems, insurgent Republican, by an apparently safe margin.

Gaylord, Social Democrat, also claims he is elected over Cary in the Fourth district, but this is not conceded by the Republicans, who claim Cary's election by a small plurality.

The Social Democrats elect their Milwaukee county ticket by between 2,000 and 5,000, according to the latest returns.



JOHN K. TENER.
Republican Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Democrats Control West Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Democratic victory in the First congressional district assumed the proportions of a landslide. John W. Davis, Dem., has been elected by a majority of more than 1,000 to succeed William P. Hubbard.

Legislative gains throughout the state seem to indicate that the legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot, insuring the defeat of N. B. Scott of this city for re-election to the United States senate.

ROSENHEIMER IS ACQUITTED.

Wealthy New Yorker Cleared of the Charge of Criminal Negligence.

New York, N. Y.—After 39 minutes of deliberation, a jury acquitted Edward T. Rosenheimer of criminal negligence in causing the death of Miss Grace Hough by running down in his automobile the buggy in which she was riding. The case had been followed with close attention, because of the wealth of the defendant and the attempt to convict for murder.

Negroes Seize Polling Booth.

Muskogee, Oklahoma.—A telephone message to the Times-Democrat from Cowela, Okla., states that negroes took possession of a voting booth in a schoolhouse in a negro settlement four miles from Coweta. The white election officers were thrown out of the polling place, the negroes declaring they would vote despite the "grandfather clause." A messenger was sent to Coweta asking for help and two automobiles with fifteen white men armed with shotguns left for the scene.

OCTOGENARIAN IS SLAYER.

Upper Michigan Man Shoots His Son-in-Law to Death.

Ironwood, Michigan.—Charles Anderson of Jessieville location, a part of Ironwood, was shot and instantly killed by his father-in-law, Thomas Pierson, aged 83 years. Pierson is said to have been drinking and to have snapped the revolver three times in Mrs. Anderson's face. It failed to explode. He will have his hearing on Thursday on a murder charge.

FIVE MEN TO COUNT MILLIONS.

Chicago Sub-Treasury to Be Examined Before New Management Goes In.

Washington, D. C.—Five men on next Friday night will begin counting the several millions of dollars in the Chicago sub-treasury. They expect to finish by the next Monday morning, when the office will be turned over to the newly appointed assistant treasurer, Len Small of Kankakee, Ill.

His bond of $350,000 was approved by the treasury department.

Mrs. Cochran's Sister Found.

San Antonio, Texas.—Miss Jean Miller, sister of Mrs. Elsie Cochran, who was mysteriously murdered at Danville, Ill., Oct. 28, was found on a ranch at Victoria, Tex., by George Garrard, city detective of Danville, Ill., who left with her for that city. It is expected she will prove an important witness. A man now is being held suspected of the crime. Miss Miller had returned here only a week ago from a visit to her sister and was with her three days before the murder.

He Was Mistaken.

"This country would be all right," said the traveler in a heathen land, "but it isn't civilized."

Frenchman's Suspicions Really Something of a Compliment to the Men of America.

Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, praised, at a dinner in New York, the good fellowship of Americans.

"The American woman is regarded abroad as an angel," he said. "The man is admittedly a good fellow, but an angel he is far from being.

"You've heard of the Frenchman perhaps whose sweetheart spent the summer in America? After her return the poor Frenchman seemed quite blue.

"'What's the matter with you?' a friend asked.

"'I am worried,' the other muttered, 'about my fiancée. You see, since her return from America she kisses so much better than she used to.'"

AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The itching was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth were wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald.

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. A neighbor said it must be salt rheum. Having used Cuticura Soap merely as a toilet soap before, I now decided to order a set of the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them according to directions for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated, but toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, and had very little trouble. On my scalp I used about one half a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment in all. The first time I took six or seven bottles of Cuticura Pills and the last time three bottles—neither an expensive or tedious treatment. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind. Standing up, with my hair unbound, it comes to my knees and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald.

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience may help someone else. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Me., Oct. 29, 1909."

WHAT?

Weeks—Why are you stopping? You didn't run over that man.

Swiftly—I know it. I just want to see what ails the steering gear.

TRAINS WRECKED

FIVE STOCKMEN ARE KILLED: AND TWO MORE MAY DIE FROM INJURIES.

HAPPENS AT MONTEVIDEO

Passenger Section Collides With Cattle Special.—Accident Is Blamed to Glare of Electric Lights in the Stockyards.

Montevideo.—Five men were instantly killed, two were perhaps fatally injured, an engineer and fireman severely hurt and a score of others badly shaken up and bruised in a wreck which occurred here between two sections of train number six on the Hastings and Dakota division of the Milwaukee road. Three carloads of livestock were incinerated, and a caboose and half a dozen cars of the freight train were either burned or smashed to splinters. The locomotive was also destroyed.

The Dead.

WILLIAM B. HILL, Miles City, Montana.

THOMAS HILL, son of W. B. Hill, Miles City, Montana.

GEORGE LEPER, Hosmer, S. D.

J. DECHTER, Greenway, S. D.

HERMAN RAHFELD, Aberdeen.

Seriously injured, now in Montevideo hospital:

George Rahseld, Aberdeen, S. D., stockman, caught in burning caboose, rescued by firemen. Possibly fatally burned.

William Borning, Miles City, Mont., stockman, caught in burning caboose. Burns very serious, will probably die.

G. Parker, Montevideo, engineer of passenger train, hurt in jumping.

Stickler, Montevideo, fireman of passenger train, hurt in jumping.

Train No. 6 is the regular night passenger train from the West, which enters Montevideo at 5:45 a. m. daily. On account of the heavy traffic the train was run in four sections, the first being the regular Aberdeen passenger, the next two sections being special stock trains, run on passenger time, and the last section being the heavy Butte passenger train.

First Section on Time.

The first section reached here at 5:45, exactly on time. It was closely followed by the second section, but the third section was slightly delayed. Just as this second stock train was backing into the Montevideo stock yards, about a mile west of here, the heavy passenger train, which making up time, was seen to come down the steep grade at high speed.

It was too late for the train crew to stop. Reversing their engine, Engineer Parker and Fireman Sticker leaped for their lives and the passenger train struck the rear end of the freight train with a deafening crash. There was a hiss and roar of steam, and the locomotive of the passenger dived under the caboose of the freight train, containing the six ill-fated stockmen. Almost immediately the caboose was a mass of flames, and the adjoining cars began to burn.

Mingled with the cries of the imprisoned stockmen in the burning caboose were the cries of several hundred head of cattle which were being incinerated in the stock cars. Terrified passengers who had been thrown from their seats by the impact of the collision came up to the wreck and with axes made an opening in the blazing caboose through which the two stockmen, Rabseld and Borning, were rescued. The others had already been overcome by the flames and when the rescuers reached them their bodies were blackened and charred.

The train crew attributes the accident to the electric lights in the stockyards here, the glare of which prevented them from seeing the rear lights of the stock train until it was too late to stop.

NORTH FRAMES BILLS EARLY.

Minnesota Development Association Has Everything Ready.

Brainerd. — The Northern Minnesota Development Association intends to see that immediate legislation is undertaken, and for that reason the people attending the December meeting in Brainerd will see and hear read the prepared bills as they will be presented for vote as soon as the legislature convenes this coming session.

Although the platform of this organization was well rounded into form many months ago, recent events in the state have given rise to conditions which demand immediate attention. The association has recognized these conditions, and is losing no time to meet them and prepare for them.

Accordingly, on Nov. 11, there will be a meeting in Bemidji of some of the members to frame up a measure on matters pertaining to forestry protection, and are expected to outline a bill that will need no amending to meet the approval of the north country.

SALOONKEEPERS ARE ARRESTED.

Three Grogshop Men in Cass Lake Nabbed for Selling to a Minor.

Cass Lake.—Special Revenue Officer S. G. Sero arrested the three Cass Lake saloonkeepers charged with selling liquor to J. Miller of Bemidji, several days ago. Miller is a minor and said he was sent here by Sero to produce evidence against each saloonkeeper. Trials will take place here next Monday and Wednesday before Judge L. M. Lange.

THOMAS DOWNS CUMMONED.

Veteran Custodian of Minnesota State Capitol Is Called, After Long Illness.

St. Paul.—Thomas Downs, the veteran custodian of the Minnesota state capitol, who has been confined at the Asbury hospital in Minneapolis for some time suffering from a combined attack of typhoid and spinal meningitis, died there at midnight Saturday. Mr. Downs was 70 years of age and has been in the employ of the state for many years.

UNIQUE WILL ATTACKED.

Sauk Center Man Ties Up Sums for Life Time of Two Heirs.

St. Cloud.—Claiming that the provisions of the will of the late Solomon Pendergast of Sauk Center, in which he leaves part of his estate to accumulate in the life of a person, is illegal, all of the beneficiaries under the will, with the exception of Mabel Carr, of Hunter, N. D., have filed an appeal in the probate court in this city praying that the will be set aside. The case will come up in the district court in December.

In the original will of Pendergast, his estate, amounting to $15,000 personal property and $78,000 real estate, was divided into four parts, and J. Fred Cooper and Robert Kells of Sauk Center were named as executors and trustees. One-fourth was given outright to his daughter, Mrs. Mabel Carr of Hunter, N. D. The second fourth was given outright to his daughter, Mrs. Maud Dewey of Sauk Center.

The third quarter was given in trust to the trustees, and out of the income, Mrs. Nellie La Fond of Sauk Center, his daughter, was to be provided for. After her death this part of the estate was to revert to his other daughter, Mrs. Carr. The remaining quarter was also placed in trust with the trustees, and from the income of it the trustees were to be compensated, and his daughter, Mrs. Carrie Baldwin of Sauk Center, and his granddaughter, Percy Lambert of the same place, were to be supported. After the death of Mrs. Baldwin this share was to go to Miss Lambert.

The action is brought on the grounds that the accumulation of the profits of an estate for a longer period than the minority of a person is illegal and that none of the persons concerned are minors.

RAILWAYS LIFT LIQUOR BAN.

Shipments Now Made to All Parts Outside Indian Reservations.

St. Paul. — The territory in Minnesota to which liquor can be sent has been extended by the railroads. Just to what extent the railroads have removed the barrier is not obtainable from the officials, but, orders have been given local freight agents to accept shipments to all points except within the Indian reservation.

The officials point out that more than two-thirds of Minnesota is included in various Indian treaties, and it has been difficult for the railroads to ascertain just what localities are exempted. They are waiting for an official interpretation of the department's orders before they put the lid on shipments outside of the Indian reservation.

TEACHERS HEAR FOLK SONGS.

Pretty Feature at Opening of the Minnesota Educational Association.

St. Paul.—An interesting group of folk songs given by 400 boys from nine of this city's grade schools was the pretty feature with which the Forty-eighth annual convention of the Minnesota Educational Association opened here. The young singers were directed by Miss Elsie M. Shaw, supervisor of music in the city schools. Superintendent E. M. Phillips of Albert Lea delivered his address as president, and talks followed by Superintendent M. G. Brumbaugh of Philadelphia and S. Y. Gillan of Milwaukee. The convention address will be delivered by President E. J. James of the University of Illinois. The convention lasted three days.

HIGH BIDDER RAISES PRICE.

Government Sells Timber on Ceded Chippewa Lands.

Washington. — Secretary Ballinger has approved the sale of the timber on the ceded Chippewa land in Minnesota to E. A. Engler for $73,794.90. Bids were opened on September 15 last at Cass Lake, when the Shevlin Mathieu Lumber company bid $52,138.25 and Mr. Engler bid $66,615.90.

On the next day the Minnesota and Ontario Power company attempted to file a bid for $71,925.75, but it was not accepted as being beyond the date of the call. Subsequently Mr. Engler raised his bid to the price at which he has been awarded the contract.

CATTLE SINK IN LAKE PEPIN.

Squall Hits Barge in Which They Were Being Ferried.

Red Wing.—Lake Pepin was the scene of a small disaster when the steamer Verana and barge, loaded with cattle, was struck in midlake by a squall and sunk. The cattle in the face of a heavy sea started for the Wisconsin shore.

Several launches came to the rescue of J. H. Mahey, the owner of the boat, and he with nineteen head of cattle were saved. Eleven head were drowned. The loss will reach $500. The barge was pulled ashore and grounded.

DIPHTHERIA AT WHITE EARTH.

Twelve Cases Reported and the Agency Quarantined.

Agency officials have quarantined the school buildings and hospital agency. Police patrol the quarantined grounds both day and night. Three doctors are in attendance.

Model Dairy Farm Burns.

Chicago, Illinois.—The buildings on the Model Dairy farm of Mrs. Scott Durand, Chicago society woman, in Lake Bluff, Ill., were destroyed by fire. There are about 100 thoroughbred cows on the farm, which is conducted on the most improved methods. Mrs. Durand applied the profits of the dairy farm toward the support of several missions in Chicago. The loss on the buildings is about $40,000. All of the cows were saved. The fire is believed to have been started by a tramp who was smoking.

MUCH GOLD IS LOST

Large Amount of Last Year's Production Disappears.

More Than 1,300 Tons of Precious Metal Mined Last Year, According to British Home Office—American Miners Expert.

London.—More than 1,300 tons of gold were mined last year, according to the British home office. Much of this precious metal has already vanished as completely as though it had never been taken from the ground. What becomes of all the gold is one of the perpetual mysteries which no government ever has been able to solve. Enormous amounts are supposed to be hidden, or buried, in the various countries. Much of the gold turned into jewelry is practically lost to general observation. The rich and the noble put away their most precious gems for state occasions. They are scarcely ever seen by the public. The gold used in decorating the palaces of the world is virtually lost to the general view. Even the gold taken by the banks and bankers as their coin reserves is often hidden in vaults for years.

The gold mined last year is valued at $450,000,000. The British empire supplied 60 per cent. of the output. Of this proportion, one-third came from the Transvaal and 15 per cent. from Australia. The United States gold mines turned out 22 per cent. of the total production.

The civilized nations of the world are now burning up about a billion tons of coal a year, says the British home office. More than a million tons in addition is wasted in the operation of mining, so that the store of "black diamonds" is being used at a rate which may bring about the extinction of the visible supply in the present century.

The United States is still the greatest coal producer—her mines contributing one-third of the total supply. Great Britain is next and Germany is third. Then come, in order, the Austro-Hungarian empire, France, Russia and Belgium. Almost three million persons are engaged in mining coal, which is as many as are engaged in all other kinds of mining and quarrying. More than a million coal miners work in Great Britain.

In iron, as in coal, the United States is still ahead of all the rest of the world as a producer, with an output of 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 tons a year. The German empire stands second, Great Britain third and Spain fourth, with 4,500,000 tons.

America leads, too, in the highest proportion of loss of life from accidents in mines and quarries—3.42 a thousand persons employed. The lowest rate is in France, 0.95 a thousand employees. It is a curious fact that while Great Britain mines only two-thirds as much coal as the United States—206,000,000 tons, as against 377,000,000 tons—there are 972,000 coal miners in Great Britain and only 590,000 in the United States.

Turning now to wheat, the incoming crop in the North and South American continent is estimated by Dornbusch at 120,500,000 quarters; that for Europe at 242,500,000 quarters; Asia at 53,000,000 quarters; Africa at 5,550,000 quarters, and Australia at 10,000,000 quarters—a grand total of 432,800,000 quarters. This is 20,000,000 quarters less than the crop of the year before. The United States now grows 82,000,000 quarters, slightly more than the Russian empire, and almost twice as much as India. In the North and South American continent Argentina is second as a wheat producer, and Canada is third. In Europe, France is the second largest wheat producer, with 34,000,000 quarters; Hungary is third, and Italy fourth. Norway grows only 50,000 quarters, but there, as in all the high countries of the north, the people eat oats, rye and buckwheat. Sweden, though in Norway's latitude, grows 830,000 quarters. Turkey in Asia grows 4,000,000 quarters, and Japan 2,750,000 quarters. Algeria (4,000,000 quarters) grows nearly three times as much wheat as Egypt. Germany, Roumania, Bulgaria, Argentine and India all are going to have bumper wheat crops. The United States wheat crop will be 10,000,000 quarters shy of last year, it is estimated.

WOMAN RUNNING FOR CONGRESS

SARAH M SIEWERS M.D.

CINCINNATI.—One of the novelties of the present political campaign is the candidacy of a woman—Dr. Sarah M. Siewers—for a seat in congress. She is running against Congressman "Nick" Longworth, son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt, and is the nominee of the Susan B. Anthony club. Dr. Siewers says her campaign is being made for "righteous rule," which, as she interprets it, means women in the government. It is fair to assume that Dr. Siewers does not expect to be elected, but hopes that her campaign will benefit the cause of women suffrage.

Ill Once in Ninety-Five Years.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Having just celebrated the ninety-fifth anniversary of her birth, Mrs. Esther Confer of this place says she was never ill a day in her life, save when as a child she had scarlet fever. She has lived half a century in the same house and has been blessed with eight children, six of whom survive. She has 29 grandchildren, 24 great-grandchildren and seven great-great-grandchildren.

AFTER INDIAN TRIBAL SONGS

Woman Agent of Government Is No Novice in Gathering and Preserving Them.

Brainerd, Minn.—As agent of the bureau of ethnology at Washington, Miss Frances Densmore passed through the city on her way to the Leech lake Indian reservation, where she will make a special study of the music of the Chippewas, submitting her report on the Chippewas, having visited the Red Lake, Mille Lacs and other reservations.

Several hundred of the tribal songs have been recorded on the phonograph and sent to the Smithsonian Institution for preservation and reference.

Miss Densmore has taken these records, transcribed them in piano score and analyzed them scientifically. She has also made a study of Filipino music, and thinks the Chippewa music is of a high grade and most excellent, occupying a higher plane than the few tones embraced in the music originating in our island possessions.

The voice of one of the leading chiefs of the northern Chippewas, Gemi-Urinac, is preserved in a phonograph record at Washington.

Of special interest to Miss Densmore will be the Indian celebration at the Leech lake agency. One of the features furnishing her with rich material for study will be the war and squaw dances of the Chippewas.

COINS BRING FANCY PRICES

At a Recent Record-Breaking Sale in New York American Half-Eagle Brought $265.

New York.—At a recent sale of coins in this city the amount realized was $20,754. This was a record-breaker. The largest amount at such a sale before this time was $19,000, at the Parmelee sale in 1892.

Two American half eagles dated 1797 were sold for $250 and $255. An 1819 half eagle brought $180 and one of 1821 brought $190. The highest priced coin was an 1829 half eagle, which sold for $370. The prices for quarter eagles were $260 for a 1795 with stars on it; 1797 for $150; 1798, $50; 1821, $40; 1824, $40; 1827, $43. An 1843 quarter eagle without a motto was sold for $810. A confederate cent was sold for $30, while a New York continental cent with bust of Washington on it brought $255.

The prices for old and rare coins are given below:

Dollar (the rarest of all is that of 1804), price $400 to $500, according to condition. Half dollar, that of 1796, with sixteen stars, price $20 to $27, although that of 1796, with only fifteen stars, and that of 1797, each command nearly the same premium, $20 to $25.

Quarter dollars of 1823 and 1827, each quoted at $15 to $25. A dime of 1804 is quoted at $4 to $8. A half dime of 1802 is worth $25 to $40. A half cent of 1796 brings $5 to $8.

The rarest of the cents is that of 1799, and is worth from $4 up. The 1804 cent is rare. Three to five dollars is the usual price for it. Collectors pay $1.50 to $2 for an 1856 nickel cent with the flying eagle on it.

Half cents—1796, the rarest of all, $5 to $8; 1793, rare, $1.75 to $2.50; 1852, $2.50 to $3.50; those for 1831, 1836, and from 1840 to 1849, inclusive, bring from $2.50 to $3.50.

The 2 cent piece of 1873 is worth from 50 to 75 cents.

As stated before, the half cent of 1796 is extremely scarce and valuable. The number of this coin issued amounted to 904,585, but their scarcity is attributed to a shipment to the coast of Africa by a Salem (Mass.) firm of several hundred thousand on an order from that country, where, being punched with holes, they were bartered away to the negroes, who put them on strings and used them as neck ornaments.

Deer Takes to Preserve.

Allentown, Pa.—As William Jones, a Schnecksville tinsmith, was walking along the road through the territory which Col. Harry C. Trexler is inclosing as a game park, he suddenly came upon a beautiful wild deer, the first seen in this county in almost a century. At sight of him it jumped into the bushes. The deer is believed to have come from the Blue mountain, and it is regarded as a peculiar coincidence that it should seek a hiding place in the area which Colonel Trexler selected as ideal for a game park.

WISE GANDER ALMOST TALKS

Bird of African Descent Even Speaks One Word Plainly When Called by Its Master.

Norton, Mass.—Frank E. Brown, a railroad man of this place, has an African gander that possesses unusual bird intelligence.

This gander, Joe by name, stands about four feet tall, weighs about 14 pounds and is three years old.

To begin with, there came near being no Joe at all. The egg had to be warmed in the oven and Mrs. Brown had to pick the shell off before Joe first saw the light of day. By tenderest care Joe lived.

Mr. Brown began training Joe early. He built a small four-wheeled carriage, which Joe draws about. There is a harness, and Joe turns either way to the guiding of the rein. Every night the gander awaits the home coming of its master, and when he sees him runs to meet him with all the joy of a pet dog.

As in the pose for a picture, Mr. Brown simply kneels on one knee and Joe hops on to the other. Another trick Joe performs after seating himself on Mr. Brown's knee. The bird winds his long neck around Mr. Brown's neck, looks his master in the face, and, in his way, talks.

If Mr. Brown lies on the couch and calls Joe, the latter trots into the house, stations himself comfortably near, and anybody who approaches Mr. Brown, even to the family members, is savagely driven off. Joe is as valuable as a watchdog.

When Mr. Brown is at home Joe follows nearly everywhere. If Mr. Brown does a little carpentering, Joe delights in bothering by trickily taking out hammers and other tools and placing them out of reach. Whenever Mr. Brown calls Joe by name Joe answers. His reply always sounds like "What."

An amusing incident occurred recently in the middle of the night. Mr. Brown hearing a noise and thinking Joe was out of his yard, shouted from his room: "Joe!" The reply came plainly and promptly, "What." Joe was safe in his customary shelter.

Mosquito-Proof Steamer

Liverpool.—A mosquito-proof steamer named the Thomas Holt, left the Mersey recently for West Africa. The vessel is proof against the mosquito, which is one of the deadliest enemies of the white man in West Africa. The plan adopted is to bar the way of the mosquito into all the living apartments on board by providing all doorways, side port openings, windows, skylights, ventilators, and passages with close copper gauze coverings.

MADE $433 FROM 20 CENTS

Peach Trees Planted by Pennsylvania Man in Idle Moment Prove Big Bonanza.

Siegersville, Pa.—An idle moment and 20 cents have just brought $100 to the pockets of Oscar Wotring, superintendent of the Lehigh Portland Cement company. Several years ago he planted 20 peach trees in his front yard at a cost of a cent each. He wanted to see whether, if they were sprayed, they would die as all the peach orchards of the neighborhood then were under the ravages of the San Jose scale. The trees this year bore their second big crop.

Wotring picked 284 baskets of choice fruit, which he has sold at an average of $1.05 a basket, or a total of $293.16. Last year, when the peaches were scarce and netted more than double this year's prices, Wotring got $140 for his crop, and the man who bought them picked 222 baskets.

Novel Hat Pin Suit.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Mrs. Laura Clas, wife of A. C. Clas, one of the best known architects in the northwest, and designer of the new Milwaukee Socialistic $20,000,000 civic center, has started suit against the Soo railroad for $5,000 damages because of an injury by a hatpin while she was traveling in Minnesota. Mrs. Clas says that she boarded a train for Bemidji from Brooks, Minn., and it started so suddenly that she was thrown to the floor of the car and badly scratched and bruised.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

Lover's Wedding Cake.

Four pounds of flour of love, half a pound of buttered youth, half a pound of good looks, half a pound of sweet temper, half a pound of self-forgetfulness, half a pound of powdered wits, half an ounce of dry humor, two tablespoonfuls of sweet argument, half a pint of rippling laughter, half a wineglassful of common sense.

Then put the flour of love, good looks and sweet temper into a well-furnished house. Beat the butter of youth to a cream. Mix together blindness of faults, self-forgetfulness, powdered wits, dry humor into sweet argument, then add them to the above. Pour in gently rippling laughter and common sense. Work it together until all is well mixed, then bake gently forever.

A Complaint.

We're for women, first, last and all the time. We like her beautiful or plain, clever or just ordinary; witty or not; shapely or pudgy, but confound it we do wish that each and every one of them would get over the notion that a man has no right to turn the pages of a newspaper just because he's wedged against her in a street car. We've been frozen by a look, stabbed by a sneer and wounded to the quick by a sigh just because we've tried to read the story continued on page seven, column five, and the thing that hurts the most is that we still think that we had a perfect right to do so.—Detroit Free Press.

The Test of Time.

Benjamin Hapgood Burt and U. S. Epperson of Kansas City were motoring in Long Island the other day and stopped at Even's hotel in Douglaston. They ordered large quantities of raw oysters, some of which were thrown aside by the oyster opener.

"How do you determine when an oyster is bad?" asked Mr. Epperson.

"You wait a short time and if you have ptomaine poisoning the oysters were bad," said Mr. Burt. "If you are not ill they were good. That's the only safe way to tell good oysters from bad ones."

STOPPED SHORT

Taking Tonics, and Built Up on Right Food.

The mistake is frequently made of trying to build up a worn-out nervous system on so-called tonics—drugs.

New material from which to rebuild wasted nerve cells is what should be supplied, and this can be obtained only from proper food.

"Two years ago I found myself on the verge of a complete nervous collapse, due to overwork and study, and to illness in the family," writes a Wisconsin young mother.

"My friends became alarmed because I grew pale and thin and could not sleep nights. I took various tonics prescribed by physicians, but their effects wore off shortly after I stopped taking them. My food did not seem to nourish me and I gained no flesh nor blood.

"Reading of Grape-Nuts, I determined to stop the tonics and see what a change of diet would do. I ate Grape-Nuts four times a day, with cream and drank milk also, went to bed early after eating a dish of Grape-Nuts.

"In about two weeks I was sleeping soundly. In a short time gained 20 pounds in weight and felt like a different woman. My little daughter whom I was obliged to keep out of school last spring on account of chronic catarrh has changed from a thin, pale, nervous child to a rosy, healthy girl and has gone back to school this fall.

"Grape-Nuts and fresh air were the only agents used to accomplish the happy results."

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Governor Burke has violated all the political rules in twice proving that an Irish Democrat can beat a Scandinavian Republican.

County option is still an issue, and it is likely to bob up in the legislature notwithstanding the governor's message will be dumb as an oyster on the proposition.

Six years of husks has made the clover fields look good to the Republican office-seekers. It is estimated that there are ten candidates for every job at the state capitol.

Some newspaper wag has discovered that the Democrats made a grave error in the late campaign. They neglected to get Teddy to make a speech for Governor Eberhart.

Dan Lawler has twice bolted the Democratic party on what he chooses to call "moral issues." It would probably suit the Democrats just as well if Dan would stay in the Republican camp.

The Minneapolis Tribune uses a clever illustration in citing the result of Teddy's campaign tour as something like the proud boast of the young obstetrician who lost mother and child, but managed to pull the old man through. Teddy saved New Hampshire, anyway.

The really big question before the incoming legislature is reapportionment. Northern Minnesota has suffered long and patiently and is not inclined to view with complacency any further effort to deny proper representation to this part of the state. The platforms of both parties promised this measure of justice, and as the Republicans will be in control it will be up to them to "make good." It is especially up to Governor Eberhart to recommend a fair and equitable re-apportionment bill in his message, and to tell the legislature just what he regards as "fair and equitable."

The election of John Saugstad as senator from Polk county illustrates the fact that money and influence do not always control elections. Saugstad started in the campaign with the handicap of being defeated at the primaries, necessitating the use of "stickers." Senator Stephens had been the leader of state politics, and is wealthy, resourceful and able. Furthermore, he was regarded as personally clean and honorable, and had accomplished more for Crookston and Polk county than any other man who had previously occupied the position. But an aroused constituency will sometimes overturn all prophecies and precedents.

The election results over the country cannot be regarded so much of a Democratic victory as a protest against Taftism and Cannonism. But however that may be the Democrats will elect the next president unless the Democratic party neglects the opportunity that will be presented in the next two years. The Democratic majority in the house of congress can pass a tariff bill that will lower the cost of living and fairly represent the sentiment of the people of the country. If this is done it will be up to the Republican senate and president to accept or reject the work of the house. A failure of the Democrats to comply with the reasonable demands of the people will mean an overwhelming and deserved defeat two years from now.

BEATS MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota primary election law, while an improvement on the old party caucus system, is notoriously defective. Minnesota should go to Oregon to learn, says the Hutchinson Leader. Her primary plan is far the best yet, and it does away with days of registration. The town clerks and city clerks, three months before the primaries, open books of registration. Every voter must register, give residence and state to what political party he belongs. This list is furnished the judges of election at the primary. A voter calls for a ballot. The registration list is referred to and he is given a ballot of the political party to which he registered himself as belonging and no other. The ballots are all printed on the same paper and of the same size and are placed bottom up so that none but the judges know what political party a voter belongs to. A voter who has not registered must produce four sworn witnesses as to his residence and qualifications. These witnesses must be personally known to the judges as responsible persons and residents of the precinct. The same qualification of a non-registered vote is required at the general election. Now, then, how could either party pack the primary under such a law? Not only that, but the registration is made before any of the candidates have had much time to work on the voters.

WHAT HE WAS DOING.

The Information Came as a Shock to His Enthusiastic Friend.

When Victor Murdock dropped into Newark the other day to give a monologue on the tariff, conservation and the high cost of living he said he wanted most of all to see a friend of his boyhood days who was living there. Here is Mr. Murdock's description of his friend:

"A husky, freckle-faced little devil, as I remember him, in short pants. We used to rob birds' nests and pilfer apples together out in Kansas—glorious state, Kansas—and get into all sorts of deviltry. Fred—that's his name—was the terror of the countryside. I suppose he's the town bully now. Why, I remember"—and then followed a long list of daredevil boyish episodes in which Murdock and friend Fred played stellar parts.

Fred—to be exact, Frederick W. Lewis of 600 Ridge street—heard that Murdock was in town and went down to renew acquaintance with him. They fell on one another's necks and swapped yarns for ten minutes. Then Murdock told all over again to an attentive group the tales of Fred's escapades. When he had finished he asked:

"By the way, Fred, what are you doing now?"

"Why, I am pastor of the Forest Hill Presbyterian church here," was the answer.

Murdock collapsed.—Newark News.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Shorthand Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All Fargo banks and 685 others employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers, stenographers or cashiers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement.

Our $50.00 Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk or bookkeeper. The new $85.00 course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court, Third Judicial District and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

The D. B. C. has built a magnificent new building (30,000 square feet) is seated with roll-top desks, has 60 typewriters, adding machines, billers, money changers, etc. Pupils deal with each other and with magnificently equipped offices, using aluminum money. The work is fascinating and practical. The Northwest has "no other school like the D. B. C." For catalogue and full information about any department, address

A Pawned Watch

It Was at the Bottom of a Plot

"Goodby, Harold."

"Goodby, Alice."

These, and these alone, were the parting words between Harold Rothwell and Alice Swain, for their hearts were too full to say more. They were to have been married within a few months, but Rothwell had developed pulmonary trouble, and it was decided that he should go west and live an outdoor life. The prospect before them was gloomy. Even if Harold recovered his health the giving up of prospects he was leaving might keep him in poverty and necessitate their continued separation. He turned away and set out for the railway station. Alice watched him till he reached a bend in the road, when he turned and threw her a kiss. She returned it, and he passed out of sight. Sad as they were, they would have been far more so had they known what would happen before they should meet again.

That same day two years hence found Rothwell financial manager for Henry Palmer, a rancher, though but just appointed to the position. Rothwell had long been a sheep herder for Palmer, and the out of door life had completely cured him of his ailing. As soon as it was considered safe for him to lead a more confined life Palmer, who had taken a great fancy to him and who needed a clerk, put him in charge of the financial part of his ranching. Then Rothwell wrote to Alice Swain that within another year he hoped to return for her and bring her back with him.

The ranch was not a large one, and the owner and his clerk were the only two persons engaged upon it except a few herders, who were always away in care of the flocks. The men became very warm friends and were almost constantly together. One day Palmer said to his clerk:

"You know, Harold, that I am a bachelor and have no one in the world to leave what belongs to me. I'm going to make a will bequeathing this ranch and the stock on it to you."

Rothwell smiled. "Considering that you are but ten years older than I and far stronger, I think I would better leave my possessions, if I had any, to you."

"Furthermore," Palmer continued without noticing the comment, "there are five $1,000 bonds, which will also be yours. These bonds, together with some old family trinkets, I have placed in hiding, and I am going to show you where they are hidden. They, too, will go to you at my death."

He led the way to the attic and from a recess formed by a corner in the roof between two joists took a tin box, opened it and showed Rothwell the bonds and the trinkets referred to. The latter consisted of a gold watch bearing the initials H. P. and some articles of jewelry.

"You are very kind," said Rothwell, "to make me your heir; but, as I have said, I don't think there is the slightest chance of my ever receiving my inheritance."

"There is a better chance than you think," said the other.

Rothwell looked at him inquiringly, but received no further confidence. Palmer replaced the box, and the two men returned to the lower story. Then Palmer opened a safe kept on the premises, took out a will, showed Rothwell that it was in his favor, put it back and closed the safe door.

"Why," asked Rothwell, "don't you keep the bonds and the other things in the safe?"

"I have a special reason for not keeping the bonds there. As to the watch and jewels, it doesn't much matter where they are kept. Some day you may learn the reason. So long as I live I can trust you not to disturb the box in the garret, and after my death what it contains may be of some benefit other than for their intrinsic value."

"To whom?"

"That will appear at the time."

This was not very satisfactory, but Rothwell was obliged to be satisfied with it.

It was but a few weeks after this that Rothwell, having got in some funds for the sale of sheep, rode to the town, some dozen miles away, to deposit the money in bank. The day proved an eventful one. On the way two masked men sprung upon him from a wood beside the road and robbed him. Returning to the ranch, he found Palmer lying in the living room of the house with a bullet hole in his brain.

As soon as he had sufficiently recovered from the shock to think he determined to ride to the nearest ranch, get a messenger and send for the proper authorities to come and take legal action upon the matter. Within a few hours an officer of the law arrived and took charge of both the premises and the body.

When Rothwell had told him the whole story of his connection with Palmer, concluding with the statement that he was Palmer's heir, that he had started for the bank that day to deposit some $1,200, been robbed on the way and returned to find his benefactor murdered, the official looked at him curiously. Then he called a messenger and sent him off posthaste. When the messenger returned he brought the sheriff with him, who, without a word of explanation, clapped a pair of handcuffs on Rothwell's wrists. The prisoner was taken to town and lodged in jail, charged with the murder of Henry Palmer and the embezzlement of the funds he claimed he had intended to put in the bank.

The case was one of circumstantial evidence—or, rather, of motive—alone. It was assumed that Rothwell had got behind in his accounts, had embezzled the amount of which he claimed he had been robbed and, fearing that if detected he would lose his inheritance, had killed the man whose property he would inherit.

This made a strong case against him, and there was very little to be said in his favor. No trace of any one having attacked Palmer and no evidence of Rothwell's story that he had been robbed appeared. The court retained charge of Palmer's property, but allowed the legatee sufficient funds to pay a lawyer to defend him. His attorney did the best in his power for him, but was unable to establish his innocence. The jury hung for some time between murder in the first and second degree, but finally brought in a verdict of guilty of the former. He was sentenced to suffer the death penalty.

And so it was that Rothwell, having escaped death from tuberculosis, having reached a condition where he might bring his sweetheart to him as his wife, was doomed to suffer on the gallows for a crime he had not committed. There are not the delays in punishment for crime in new countries there are where the safeguards against infringing on the rights of accused persons are more strictly enforced. Rothwell was sentenced to be hanged a few weeks after his conviction. No new trial was granted, no stay of proceedings, and the day of doom was near when something happened.

A young woman stood looking in through the window of a pawnshop in the town where Rothwell was convicted. At the time an officer of the law dressed in plain clothes was in the shop interviewing the pawnbroker about some stolen goods that he had loaned money on. The woman entered the shop and produced a watch on which she asked for a loan. The broker inspected the watch and at once caught sight of two letters, "H. P.," on the case.

"Whose initials are those?" asked the broker.

The woman said she did not know. The detective took a hand in questioning her and, her replies being contradictory, took her to police headquarters. There, after many surmises, some one noticed that "H. P." were the initials of Henry Palmer, for whose murder Rothwell was to be hanged in a few days. The chief of police put the woman through the "third degree" process, with the result of a confession that she had murdered Palmer.

Many were inclined to doubt that the confession was genuine. Had it not been for the fact that the woman had attempted to borrow money on a watch with Palmer's initials on it little attention would have been paid to her statement. She claimed to have been a discarded wife of Palmer's, and it was for this casting off that she had killed him. The watch was shown to Rothwell, and he told the police where he had seen it. This identified the woman with Palmer, she was charged with his murder, and Rothwell was released. He asked to see the person who stood in his place and was taken to her cell.

What was his amazement to recognize Alice Swain.

Before he had time to betray their relationship she gave him a look that put him on his guard. She then spoke to him as a stranger, telling him that if he could get permission to see her alone she would throw additional light on the murder. Permission was granted, and the two were left alone.

Not daring to embrace each other, they refrained. Alice talked about the murder, but, fearful of being overheard, said nothing to reveal the true situation. Meanwhile she scratched on a bit of paper:

> This is a plan to save you. Luckily you wrote me of the tin box. I came, took the watch and pawned it to get arrested. Go away and I will convince them of my innocence.

It was agreed between them through the same medium that Harold should have a week before Alice revealed the trick. When the period had expired and he was safe in hiding she called for the lawyer who had defended him and told him how Rothwell had written her of the interview he had had with Palmer and of the tin box, showing him the letter—how she had gone to the hiding place, taken the watch and pawned it, knowing the man who was at the time with the pawnbroker to be a detective. The attorney soon obtained a dismissal of the charge against her, and later she was set at liberty.

She at once went to the ranch house and in her future husband's name claimed for him his inheritance. Making a more thorough examination of the contents of the tin box, she found a bit of paper on which were written the following words:

> If I am murdered it will be by my old partner, Jacob Wilcox. When we separated I took some bonds that he claimed belonged to him. He told me then that he would have the bonds if he had to kill me to get them.

In time Rothwell came into his inheritance and married the girl who had saved him. He spent considerable money trying to find Wilcox and bring him to justice, but never succeeded. The Rothwell ranch is now one of the largest in that section of country.

He Observed.

"Be observing, my son," said a father to his boy. "Cultivate the habit of seeing, and you will be a successful man. Don't go through the world blindly. Learn to use your eyes. Boys who are observant know a great deal more than those who are not."

Willie listened in silence.

Several days later when the entire family, consisting of his mother, aunt and uncle, were present his father said:

"Well, Willie, have you kept using your eyes, as I advised you to do?"

Willie nodded and after a moment's hesitation said:

"I've seen a few things about the house. Uncle Jim's got a bottle of hair dye hid under his bed, Aunt Jennie's got an extra set of teeth in her dresser, ma's got some lots of false hair in her bureau drawer, and you've got a pack of cards, a box of poker chips and a box of dice behind the books in the bookcase."

At Parting.

Until we meet again! That is the meaning
Of the familiar words that men repeat
At parting in the street.
Ah, yes, till then, but when death, intervening,
Rends us asunder with what ceaseless pain
We wait for thee again!

The friends who leave us do not feel the sorrow
Of parting as we feel it who must stay,
Lamenting day by day
And knowing when we wake upon the morrow
We shall not find in its accustomed place
The one loved face.

Knew What to Do.

"I hope it will be a long time before I have such another test applied to my honesty," a downtown merchant remarked as he returned from waiting on a customer.

"What was the trouble?" asked his partner.

"Those near wool suits. An old fellow came in just now and asked me the price of one.

"'Seven dollars,' I told him.

"'Speak louder!' he said, holding his hand behind his ear. So I yelled, 'Seven dollars!'

"'Eleven dollars! Too much! I'll give you $9!' he replied.

His partner looked at the speaker in alarm.

"You—er—of course you did the right thing?"

"I guess you can depend on me to do the right thing," was the haughty retort. Then he paused. "You'd better get some dollar bills when you go to the bank," he remarked. "I just gave an old fellow a ten spot for one for change!"—Harper's Magazine.

A Man of Little Faith.

A colored preacher took some candidates for immersion down to a river in Louisiana. Seeing some alligators in the stream, one of them objected.

"Why, brother," urged the pastor, "can't you trust the Lord? He took care of Jonah, didn't he?"

"Y-a-a-s," admitted the darky, "but a whale's different. A whale's got mem'ry, but if one o' dem 'gators wus ter swaller dis nigger he'd jes' go to sleep dar in the sun an' forgit all about it."

His First Words.

"I guess," remarked simple old Farmer Hoe, "that we'd better have Andrew stop studyin' so hard. 'Tain't good for his mind."

"I haven't noticed anything unusual," answered his wife.

"No? But I have. When he comes home from school for his holidays, after travelin' scores and scores of miles, what do ye think his fust words was?"

"'TAIN'T GOOD FOR HIS MIND."

"I d'no."

"He seys, 'Well, father, I'm halfback now.'

"I looked at 'im, and I says, 'What do ye mean?'

"'Just what I say. I'm halfback.'

"I says: 'Andrew, don't ye realize where ye are? Ye ain't half back. Ye're all the way back, and I'm glad to see ye too.' An all he done was to jes' laugh and say he'd tell me all about it some time."—Omaha World-Herald.

Terrible Kidney Trouble Cured After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

Mrs. F. M. Hill, 188 W. 10th St., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "It makes me shudder to think of my awful suffering. I was languid and weak and never free from dull pain in my back. My hands puffed and my feet became so swollen I could not wear my shoes. The kidney secretions were painful and frequent in passage. I gradually grew weaker until the doctors gave up hope. It was then I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. Continued use cured me."

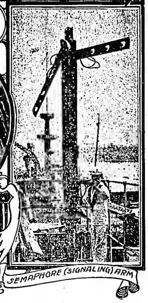
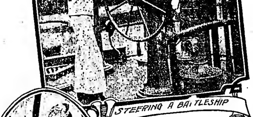
On the Bridge of a Battleship

CHART TABLE FOR THE USE OF NAVIGATORS

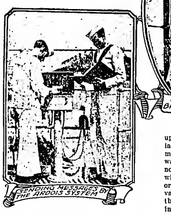


SEMAPHORE (SIGNALING) ARM



STEERING A BATTLESHIP

MANIPULATING BATTLESHIP SEARCHLIGHT



SENDING MESSAGES BY THE ARDOIS SYSTEM

THE modern battleship is a marvel of concentration and space economy. There is no room for things purely ornamental, but every foot of space is used to some purpose in connection with the storage or operation of the myriad adjuncts necessary for the work, the safety and the comfort of the hundreds of men who crowd one of these floating fortresses. If one were to choose, however, the one section of a battleship which above all others is a veritable nest of wonders and surprises choice would unhesitatingly fall upon the "bridge"—that elevated structure which is so appropriately named and which extends the full width of the deck on the forward part of the ship—in front of the huge smokestacks, as a "land lubber" might designate its location.

For one thing, we find on the bridge an even greater array than anywhere else on the ship of those remarkable mechanical and electrical devices which do so much of the work on shipboard that would seem to require human intelligence. But the bridge has in addition a special significance which multiplies many times its importance and the interest of its equipment. It is the "nerve center" of the ship, the seat of authority and command which directs all the operations within the bounds of the big armorclad, and also the intelligence office through which this warship community communicates other vessels of the fleet and, indeed, with the entire outside world.

Under ordinary conditions when the battleship is cruising at sea, participating in battle drill or target practise or engaged in any of the other important functions of a sea warrior the captain commanding, the navigating officer and other responsible officials of the ship have their positions on the bridge. In time of actual battle those directing heads of the fighting machine would not expose themselves on the bridge, but they would not be far away. Sheltered by conning towers or some other protective screens, they would be as near as possible to the vantage points to be found only on the exposed bridge and from those substitute observatories—some of them located directly behind or otherwise adjacent to the bridge—would direct the action of the battling armorclad.

In order to enable the officers on the bridge to be at all times closely in touch with all parts of the ship this elevated promenade is made the nerve center of elaborate telephone, telegraph and signaling systems that afford instantaneous communication with the engine and fire rooms, the ammunition magazines, all the different "gun stations" throughout the ship, and, in fact, every scene of activity that has part in the complex mission of one of these great fighting machines. The telephone system on a battleship is much like the private telephone system in a great store or manufactory, but with the difference that on shipboard most of the receivers are of the pattern which fit close to the head, covering both ears and strongly resembling those used by the hello girls in telephone exchanges. This special equipment is designed to shut out disturbing noises and is very essential when officers and men may be called upon to listen to telephone conversation when the guns are roaring or against the opposition of the various distracting noises always to be encountered on shipboard.

Near the bridge of a battleship is the wireless telegraph station which is one of the newer yet easily one of the most important adjuncts of the up-to-date battleship. However, the wireless telegraph is not used for interior communication aboard the battleship but solely for the exchange of messages with other ships and with shore stations. What are sometimes referred to as "telegraphs" on shipboard are not telegraphs at all, as the lay reader understands them, but are rather signaling systems. The most common of these communicative systems is that whereby the pressure of a button or lever at one station on a battleship—say on the bridge—will cause a printed command to suddenly appear in illuminated form in a distant part of the ship. For instance, the movement of a certain lever on the bridge of the battleship will cause an illuminated sign to suddenly appear before the eyes of the engineers, 'way down below the water line, reading, "Full Speed Ahead," or "Full Speed Astern," or any other command which it is desired to give. By means of this method of signaling a command can, if need be, be communicated simultaneously to a number of different stations scattered throughout the ship. Indeed it is by this expedient that the captain of the battleship insures uniformity of action during target practise or in battle. In a twinkling he can send the command "Begin firing" or "Cease firing," or any other instructions to each and every gun crew scattered throughout the length of the ship.

On the bridge, likewise, we find all the paraphernalia for steering the ship, including the great wheel, the electrical control, the compasses, the chart board, with its stores of charts and all the other mechanical adjuncts for keeping the huge vessel on the proper course. Here, too, are the seemingly simple devices which now control the manipulation of the huge searchlights perched up aloft on skeleton steel towers—a means of managing the searchlights which is not only more rapid but more effective than the old plan of turning them this way and that by manual labor. On the bridge, too, are no end of signaling devices for supplementing the wireless telegraph in communication with other ships or with the shore. There are signal flags for use with various codes and with the always useful "wigwag;" there are the semaphore and Ardois systems for signaling at night by means of different combinations of red and white lights, and there is the electric torch for unofficial messages.

The American navy has been the most successful military organization, from its very inception, which the world has ever seen. That is a pretty broad statement, but it is absolutely true. There are good reasons for this.

In the early days we were a commercial people. We were natural sailormen. Our people lived along the shores. They made their money in commercial pursuits. The men who commanded merchant ships were not only good sailors; they were good merchants, and the foundations for many of the great fortunes of this country have come from that source. In order to protect themselves they were obliged to go armed. Their ships were armed as were privateers in time of war. The result is that they not only knew navigation, but they knew gunnery, and combined with these qualities the intelligence which makes great merchants.

Naturally, when those men came into positions where they commanded men-of-war, they were equal to the occasion, although they had had no naval training. As time went on they acquired a naval training, so that in the later wars, in the early part of the nineteenth century, they met every requirement, and in the recent wars the graduates of the Naval academy have been equal to every duty which has been imposed upon them. They have made a record of which every American citizen should be proud.

The American sailorman has always been efficient. They were good men in the time of the Revolution; competent men in the time of the war of 1812. They are better men today than they were in those days, because today 95 per cent. of them are American citizens, and not a man is shipped in the American navy who has not declared his intention to become a citizen. Twenty five years ago not more than 30 per cent. of our men-of-war's men were American citizens.

The American navy has been successful because our ships have always been as good ships as any that were built in the world. Our merchantmen, in the Revolutionary times, and down to the Civil war, were the best merchant ships sailing the seas. They were, no doubt, the best manned, and they made the fastest time. During the period of wooden ships, when we built men-of-war they were of the same general character. Our men-of-war, gun for gun, were equal to, and probably superior, to those of any other nation.

We have always been able to shoot better than most people. Go back to the early times, to the revolutionary war. We lost 24 men-of-war, carrying less than 500 guns, in the Revolutionary war, while the British lost 102 men-of-war, carrying more than 2,500 guns. We captured 800 of their merchant ships, and it is not too much to say that if it had not been for the damage caused by the American navy we would not have won the Revolutionary war at all; that is, it might have been necessary later to have fought that war over again.

The same relative skill prevailed in the War of 1812. Our ships of the same class were superior to the ships of our opponents. This statement is confirmed when we study the exact figures. For instance, in the Hornet-Peacock contest the British ship lost five men killed and 37 wounded, out of a crew of 130, while the American ship had but three wounded—this in eleven minutes. In the Wasp-Frolic fight the British ship lost 15 men killed and 47 wounded, out of a crew of 110, while the American ship lost but five killed and five wounded from a crew of the same size.

I could mention a number of similar instances which demonstrate my statement that at that time we were able to shoot well, and we have been shooting better ever since. Not only the men of the north, but the men of the south, shot well during the Civil war; they shot well during the Spanish war; and we can shoot half a dozen times as well today as we could during the Spanish war.

Never has the American navy made such a record as it is making today, and never has there been a navy having a record excelling the one which our navy is now making for capacity to hit the target. That is really the whole war problem—to hit what you are shooting at.

We have not in the past built homogeneous fleets. We build a surplus of battleships and then provide the men to man them, and frequently provide more than we have ships for. We build auxiliaries and torpedo boats, if we do it at all, without any regard to the relation which such craft should bear to the battleship fleet, and while we have built or have in construction 29 battleships, we have practically no means of furnishing tenders for them under service conditions.

When the battleship fleet was sent to the Pacific recently it was necessary to charter 40 foreign ships to carry coal for it. If it had been found necessary to send the fleet around the horn in time of war it could not have been attempted, because we could not have furnished American vessels in which to carry the coal.

Very few people realize the deplorable condition we are in, as far as our merchant marine is concerned. If we had a large merchant marine we could draw from it without having special auxiliaries for the navy, but we are so lacking in both that it makes our present situation almost hopeless.

When the Spanish war broke out it was necessary to purchase colliers and transports. One hundred and two vessels were bought at a cost of something over $17,000,000, but they cost a very large percentage more than their market value, and more than twice as much as they could have been sold for if they had been put on the market at the termination of the war. In other words, we paid out millions of dollars because we had not provided ourselves with suitable auxiliaries for our battleship fleet. We should have a navy adequate for our needs; not only adequate in battleships, but adequate in every other respect.

Surgery on Heart

Surgical operations upon the heart have become more or less of a commonplace in medical history. Something approximating 100 cases of the sewing up of heart wounds are on record, and the recoveries have been considerable when one considers the highly dangerous character of such work. Hitherto, however, heart surgery has been limited to accident cases.

In a recent issue of the annals of surgery one of the workers at the Rockefeller institute for medical research discusses the possibility of treating diseased hearts surgically. He has made numerous experiments on animals and believes that such operations will be successfully performed on human beings in the near future. His tests have convinced him that the heart can be opened, scraped out (cleaned, so to speak), sewed up and started off on its "beating" path again without any great, at least insuperable, difficulty. By an ingenious system of side piping and new channeling he is able temporarily to cut out of the circulation portions of such important vessels as the descending aorta the largest artery in the body, without killing the animal. Among his suggested operations is one on the coronary arteries of the heart for the cure of angina pectoris.

This doctor has apparently proved to his own satisfaction on animals that successful surgical interference with the great vessels and the heart itself is a possibility. It is, of course, a long step from these experiments to actual operations on human beings, but there is every indication that the latter feat will be attempted in the near future. The intractability of cardiac affections and their high fatality make the proposed new surgery a thing of great general interest, and may justify the extreme boldness of the proposal.

Mills' Opinion of Marriage

Among the letters written by the late English philosopher and economist, John Stuart Mill, recently published, is the following document, dated March 6, 1851, upon the occasion of his marriage to Mrs. Taylor, whom he had loved since long before the event of her widowhood:

"Being about, if I am so happy as to obtain her consent, to enter into the marriage relation with the only woman I have ever known with whom I would have entered into that state, and the whole character of the married relation as constituted by law being such as both she and I entirely and conscientiously disapprove, for this, among other reasons, that it confers upon one of the parties to the contract legal power and control over the person, property and freedom of action of the other party, independent of her own wishes and will, I, having no means of legally divesting myself of these obvious powers (as I most assuredly would do if the engagement to that effect could be made legally binding on me, feel it my duty to put on record a formal protest against the existing law of marriage, in so far as conferring such powers, and a solemn promise never in any case or under any circumstances to use them.

"And in the event of marriage between Mrs. Taylor and me, I declare it to be my will and intention to absolutely disclaim and repudiate all pretense to have acquired any rights whatever by virtue of such marriage.

"J. S. MILL."

"'Papa' and 'mamma'?"

"Stuff and nonsense!" ejaculated the father in a tone of disgust. "Why, the day he was 12 months old he suddenly laid down his algebra and said to me: 'Father, the longer I live the more indubitable proofs I perceive that there is in Boston as much culture to the square inch as there ever was in the ambient area of ancient Athens!'"

Strong Preaching.

The minister's eight-year-old daughter was returning with her parents from church, where the district superintendent had that morning occupied the pulpit.

"Oh, father," asked the little girl, her face alive with enthusiasm. "Don't you think Brother C. is a very strong preacher? I do."

Gratified by this evidence of unusual intelligence on the part of his offspring, the minister eagerly inquired into her reasons for her statement.

"Oh," replied the little miss, artlessly, "didn't you see how the dust rose when he stamped his feet?"—Judge.

An Awful Moment.

The company always included many delightful women, and I remember the consternation caused among them one day by Burnham, the scout. He explained that he attributed his success as a scout to the acuteness of his sense of smell; it was like a bloodhound's.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Gertrude and her fiance, Jack Bailey, had conversed in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found unconscious at the bottom of the circular staircase. She said something had brushed by her in the dark on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a note in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace." A ladder found out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned, and in the dark Miss Innes shot an intruder. Halsey mysteriously disappeared. His auto was found wrecked by a freight train. It developed Halsey had an argument in the library with a woman before his disappearance. New cook disappears. Miss Innes learned Halsey was alive. Dr. Walker's face becomes livid at mention of the name of Nina Carrington. Evidence was secured from a tramp that a man, supposedly Halsey, had been bound and gagged and thrown into an empty box car. Gertrude was missing. Hunting for her, Miss Innes ran into a man and fainted. A confederate of Dr. Walker confessed his part in the mystery. He stated that the Carrington woman had been killed, that Walker feared her, and that he believed that Paul Armstrong had been killed by a hand guided by Walker. Halsey was found in a distant hospital. Paul Armstrong was not dead. Miss Innes discovered secret rooms in which the Traders' bank treasure was believed to be. Mrs. Watson, dying, said she killed Arnold Armstrong, who years before had married her sister under the alias of Wallace. Lucien Wallace was born of the marriage.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

At the Foot of the Stairs.

As I drove rapidly up to the house from Casanova station in the hack, I saw the detective Burns loitering across the street from the Walker place. So Jamieson was putting the screws on—lightly now, but ready to give them a twist or two, I felt certain, very soon.

The house was quiet. Two steps of the circular staircase had been pried off without result, and beyond a second message from Gertrude that Halsey insisted on coming home and they would arrive that night there was nothing new. Mr. Jamieson, having failed to locate the secret room, had gone to the village. I learned afterwards that he called at Dr. Walker's, under pretense of an attack of acute indigestion, and before he left had inquired about the evening trains to the city. He said he had wasted a lot of time on the case, and a good bit of the mystery was in my imagination! The doctor was under the impression that the house was guarded day and night. Well, give a place a reputation like that, and you don't need a guard at all—thus Jamieson. And sure enough, late in the afternoon, the two private detectives, accompanied by Mr. Jamieson, walked down the main street of Casanova and took a city-bound train.

That they got off at the next station and walked back again to Sunnyside at dusk was not known at the time. Personally, I knew nothing of either move; I had other things to absorb me at that time.

Liddy brought me some tea while I rested after my trip, and on the tray was a small book from the Casanova library. It was called "The Unseen World" and had a cheerful cover, on which a half-dozen sheeted figures linked hands around a headstone.

At this point in my story, Halsey always says: "Trust a woman to add two and two together, and make six." To which I retort that if two and two plus X makes six, then to discover the unknown quantity is the simplest thing in the world. That a houseful of detectives missed it entirely was because they were busy trying to prove that two and two make four.

The depression due to my visit to the hospital left me at the prospect of seeing Halsey again that night. It was about five o'clock when Liddy left me for a nap before dinner, having put me into a gray silk dressing-gown and a pair of slippers. I listened to her retreating footsteps, and as soon as she was safely below stairs I went up to the trunkroom. The place had not been disturbed, and I proceeded at once to try to discover the entrance to the hidden room. The openings on either side, as I have said, showed nothing but perhaps three feet of brick wall. There was no sign of an entrance—no levers, no hinges, to give a hint. Either the mantel or the roof, I decided, and after a half-hour at the mantel, productive of absolutely no result, I decided to try the roof.

I am not fond of a height. The few occasions on which I have climbed a step-ladder have always left me dizzy and weak in the knees. The top of the Washington monument is as impossible to me as the elevation to the presidential chair. And yet—I climbed out on the Sunnyside roof without a second's hesitation. Like a dog on a scent, like my bear-skin progenitor, with his spear and his wild boar, to me now there was the lust of the chase, the frenzy of pursuit, the dust of battle. I got quite a little of the latter on me as I climbed from the unfinished ballroom out through a window to the roof of the east wing of the building, which was only two stories in height.

Once out there, access to the top of the main building was rendered easy—at least it looked easy—by a small vertical iron ladder, fastened to the wall outside of the ballroom, and perhaps 12 feet high. The 12 feet looked short from below, but they were difficult to climb. I gathered my silk gown around me, and succeeded finally in making the top of the ladder. Once there, however, I was completely out of breath. I sat down, my feet on the top rung, and put my hair-pins in more securely, while the wind ballooned my dressing-gown out like a sail. I had torn a great strip of the silk loose, and now I ruthlessly finished the destruction of my gown by jerking it free and tying it around my head.

Luckily, the roof was flat, and I was able to go over every inch of it. But the result was disappointing; no trap-door revealed itself, no glass window; nothing but a couple of pipes two inches across, and standing perhaps 18 inches high and three feet apart, with a cap to prevent rain from entering and raised to permit the passage of air. I picked up a pebble from the roof and dropped it down, listening with my ear at one of the pipes. I could hear it strike on something with a sharp, metallic sound, but it was impossible for me to tell how far it had gone.

I gave up finally and went down the ladder again, getting in through the ballroom window without being observed. I went back at once to the trunkroom, and, sitting down on a box, gave my mind, as consistently as I could, to the problem before me. If the pipes in the roof were ventilators to the secret room, and there was no trap-door above, the entrance was probably in one of the two rooms between which it lay—unless, indeed, the room had been built, and the opening closed with a brick and mortar wall.

The mantel fascinated me. Made of wood and carved, the more I looked the more I wondered that I had not noticed before the absurdity of such a mantel in such a place. It was covered with scrolls and panels, and finally, by the merest accident, I pushed one of the panels at the side. It moved easily, revealing a small brass knob.

No Trap-Door Revealed Itself.

It is not necessary to detail the fluctuations of hope and despair, and not a little fear of what lay beyond, with which I twisted and turned the knob. It moved, but nothing seemed to happen, and then I discovered the trouble. I pushed the knob vigorously to one side, and the whole mantel swung loose from the wall almost a foot, revealing a cavernous space beyond.

I took a long breath, closed the door from the trunkroom into the hall—thank heaven, I did not lock it—and pulling the mantel-door wide open, I stepped into the chimney-room. I had time to get a hazy view of a small portable safe, a common wooden table and a chair—then the mantel door swung to, and clicked behind me. I stood quite still for a moment, in the darkness, unable to comprehend what had happened. Then I turned and beat furiously at the door with my fists. It was closed and locked again, and my fingers in the darkness slid over a smooth wooden surface without a sign of a knob.

I was furiously angry—at myself, at the mantel-door, at everything. I did not fear suffocation; before the thought had come to me I had already seen a gleam of light from the two small ventilating pipes in the roof. They supplied air, but nothing else. The room itself was shrouded in blackness.

I must have dozed off. I am sure I did not faint. I was never more composed in my life. I remember planning, if I were not discovered, who would have my things. I knew Liddy would want my heliotrope poplin, and she's a fright in lavender. Once or twice I heard mice in the partitions, and so I sat on the table, with my feet on the chair. I imagined I could hear the search going on through the house, and once some one came into the trunkroom; I could distinctly hear footsteps.

"In the chimney! In the chimney!" I called with all my might, and was rewarded by a piercing shriek from Liddy and the slam of the trunkroom door.

I felt easier after that, although the room was oppressively hot and enervating. I had no doubt the search for me would now come in the right direction, and after a little, I dropped into a doze. How long I slept I do not know.

It must have been several hours, for I had been tired from a busy day, and I waked stiff from my awkward position. I could not remember where I was for a few minutes, and my head felt heavy and congested. Gradually I roused to my surroundings, and to the fact that in spite of ventilators, the air was bad and growing worse. I was breathing long, gasping respirations, and my face was damp and clammy. I must have been there a long time, and the searchers were probably hunting outside the house, dredging the creek, or beating the woodland. I knew that another hour or two would find me unconscious, and with my inability to cry out would go my only chance of rescue. It was the combination of bad air and heat, probably, for some inadequate ventilation was coming through the pipes. I tried to retain my consciousness by walking the length of the room and back, over and over, but I had not the strength to keep it up, so I sat down on the table again, my back against the wall.

The house was very still. Once my straining ears seemed to catch a footfall beneath me, possibly in my own room. I groped for the chair from the table, and pounded with it frantically on the floor. But nothing happened; I realized bitterly that if the sound was heard at all, no doubt it was classed with the other rappings that had so alarmed us recently.

And then—I heard sounds from below me, in the house. There was a peculiar throbbing, vibrating noise that I felt rather than heard, much like the pulsing beat of fire engines in the city. For one awful moment I thought the house was on fire, and every drop of blood in my body gathered around my heart; then I knew. It was the engine of the automobile, and Halsey had come back. Hope sprang up afresh. Halsey's clear head and Gertrude's intuition might do what Liddy's hysteria and three detectives had failed in.

After a time I thought I had been right. There was certainly something going on down below; doors were slamming, people were hurrying through the halls, and certain high notes of excited voices penetrated to me shrilly. I hoped they were coming closer, but after a time the sounds died away below, and I was left to the silence and heat, to the weight of the darkness, to the oppression of walls that seemed to close in on me and stifle me.

The first warning I had was a stealthy fumbling at the lock of the mantel-door. With my mouth open to scream, I stopped. Perhaps the situation had rendered me acute, perhaps it was instinctive. Whatever it was, I sat without moving, and some one outside, in absolute stillness, ran his fingers over the carving of the mantel and—found the panel.

Now the sounds below redoubled; from the clatter and jarring I knew, that several people were running up the stairs, and as the sounds approached, I could even hear what they said.

"Watch the end staircases!" Jamieson shouted. "Damnation—there's no light here!" And then a second later. "All together now. One — two — three—"

The door into the trunkroom had been locked from the inside. At the second that it gave, opening against the wall with a crash and evidently tumbling somebody into the room, the stealthy fingers beyond the mantel-door gave the knob the proper impetus, and—the door swung open, and closed again. Only—and Liddy always screams and puts her fingers in her ears at this point—only now I was not alone in the chimney room. There was some one else in the darkness, some one who breathed hard, and who was so close I could have touched him with my hand.

I was in a paralysis of terror. Outside there were excited voices and incredulous oaths. The trunks were being jerked around in a frantic search, the windows were thrown open, only to show a sheer drop of 40 feet. And the man in the room with me leaned against the mantel-door and listened. His pursuers were plainly baffled; I heard him draw a long breath, and turn to grope his way through the blackness. Then—he touched my hand, cold, clammy, deathlike.

A hand in an empty room! He drew in his breath, the sharp intaking of horror that fills lungs suddenly collapsed. Beyond jerking his hand away instantly, he made no movement. I think absolute terror had him by the throat. Then he stepped back, without turning, retreating foot by foot from The Dread in the corner, and I do not think he breathed.

Then, with the relief of space between us, I screamed, ear-splittingly, madly, and they heard me outside.

"In the chimney!" I shrieked. "Behind the mantel! The mantel!"

With an oath the figure hurled itself across the room at me, and I screamed again. In his blind fury he had missed me; I heard him strike the wall. That one time I eluded him; I was across the room, and I had got the chair. He stood for a second, listening, then—he made another rush and I struck out with my weapon. I think it stunned him, for I had a second's respite when I could hear him breathing, and some one shouted outside:

"We—can't—get—in. How—does—it open?"

But the man in the room had changed his tactics. I knew he was creeping on me, inch by inch, and I could not tell from where. And then—he caught me. He held his hand over my mouth, and I bit him. I was helpless, strangling—and some one was trying to break in the mantel from outside. It began to yield somewhere, for a thin wedge of yellowish light was reflected on the opposite wall. When he saw that, my assailant dropped me with a curse; then—the opposite wall swung open noiselessly, closed again without a sound, and I was alone. The intruder was gone.

"In the next room!" I called wildly. "The next room!" But the sound of blows on the mantel drowned my voice. By the time I had made them understand, a couple of minutes had elapsed. The pursuit was taken up then, by all except Alex, who was determined to liberate me. When I stepped out into the trunkroom a free woman again I could hear the chase far below.

I must say, for all Alex's anxiety to set me free, he paid little enough attention to my plight. He jumped through the opening into the secret room and picked up the portable safe.

"I am going to put this in Mr. Halsey's room, Miss Innes," he said, "and I shall send one of the detectives to guard it."

I hardly heard him. I wanted to laugh and cry in the same breath—to crawl into bed and have a cup of tea, and scold Liddy, and do any of the thousand natural things that I had never expected to do again. And the air! The touch of the cool night air on my face!

Police Women in the West

Cities of Portland and Seattle Are Said to Have Found the Innovation Satisfactory.

The cities of the west are never afraid of innovations, says the St. Paul Dispatch. This is one explanation of the existence of police women in Portland and Seattle. The other explanation must be found in the fact that these cities have discovered that police women are needed in the business of maintaining order and solving problems of order in the large cities. The old theory that men are the criminals and must be policed by men is giving way before the fact that there do appear from time to time women criminals, and especially before the fact that women can be saved before crime fixes them permanently in its possession.

In Portland there is a woman on the police force who has done efficient work in connection with the Young Women's Christian association—another vital factor in large towns in the ordering of the city. She had also accomplished much as a probation officer. Having served her term in these, the woman was ready when Portland decided that it required a police woman. She is a regular member of the department, with the same recognition shown to men. In Seattle there is also a police woman, although her appointment is temporary—during the Alaska-Yukon exposition. In all probability, however, Seattle will find this one police woman of such value that she will be retained.

Worried Over His Trousers.

The humors and tragedies of New York East side life are delineated by Frank Marshall White in an article in Harper's Weekly. Master Jacob Rosenberg, eleven or twelve years of age, was suffering from a broken leg. "His supreme agony came, however, when Dr. M. ripped up one side of the juvenile trousers with a pair of scissors to make room for bandages. 'My new pants! My new pants! He's cutting my new pants!' Jacob shrieked, and almost wriggled himself out of the grasp of the policemen and the driver in his efforts to prevent the mutilation of his raiment. All the way to his home in the ambulance the boy bewailed his mangled trousers more than he did his broken leg.

We think that preachers ought to say more about hell fire and brimstone; people are feeling altogether too easy about themselves.

The wonder of baking powders—Calumet. Wonderful in its raising powers—its uniformity, its never failing results, its purity.

Wonderful in its economy. It costs less than the high-price trust brands, but it is worth as much. It costs a trifle more than the cheap and big can kinds—it is worth more. But proves its real economy in the baking.

Rev. Fr. Conrad of St. Thomas, who has had charge of the work of St. Mary's church during the absence of Rev. Fr. Ambrose, is to remain for next Sunday, though it had been previously announced that he would leave this week. There will be services at the church at the usual hours, 8 and 10.30 o'clock. Rev. Fr. Ambrose is returning from his European trip and will be in Red Lake Falls before Thanksgiving.

A crew of men in the employ of the Red River Power company have been employed all of the week making improvements in the local light and power plant. This week they have been re-wiring the town and they will be employed two or three weeks more before all of the improvements will be made. The all-day service will then be installed and Red Lake Falls will have one of the best light and power plants in the Northwest.

A man is known by the company he keeps and a merchant is known by what he sells. Pick out the merchant who sells good goods—reliable goods—he is the fellow you went to do business with. C. Gotzian & Company in Saint Paul, have been making the Gotzian Shoe since 1855. It is a good shoe and they won't sell these shoes to any but the best of merchants. The Gotzian Shoe is sold in Red Lake Falls by Mat Skala. That means something to you.

The opening of The Farmers National Bank, announcement of which was made in the last issue of the Gazette occurred on Monday, Nov. 14. The new bank has an auspicious beginning. The officers are local men of known financial and business standing. They have an elegant banking house equipped with modern fixtures and conveniences and the location of the building could not be improved upon. Every indication gives promise of a prosperous future for the new institution.

The Gazette has word from P. L. Malvin, who was elected vice president of the State Butter and Cheese Maker's association at Crookston last week, that it is possible that Red Lake Falls can secure the next annual meeting of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association if people here will put forth a little effort. Everybody in Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county should be interested in dairying for the dairy cow will lift the mortgages from the farms in this land of clover and good rations if given half a chance. That being true the growth of the industry should be encouraged and it would be well for Red Lake Falls people to secure the next meeting of the association for this city.

Born, Tuesday, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Garceau, a son. Mrs. Garceau and the baby are at St. Michaels hospital at Grand Forks and are getting along nicely—and Barry is liable to go to the Forks most any time to see that baby.

The Gazette printers enjoyed the delightful sensation this week of fondling thousands of dollars of velvety bank notes. The bank notes for The Farmers National bank were received and signed by the officers this week. The notes came in big sheets and the printers had the pleasure of running the sheets through the paper cutter and slicing off the bank notes—but they have already forgotten the color of the money.

ALL DAY SERVICE IN TWO WEEKS

Power Company Announces That Needed Repairs and Improvements are Nearly Made.

New Generator Arrived Tuesday And the Motors are Coming Every Day.

The new generator to be installed by the Red River Power company in its station here, arrived Tuesday and as soon as the foundation is completed will be put in place. The machine, which is a product of the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y. is one of the latest improved pat[illegible] direct from the factory. It is a 150 k. w. [illegible] machine [illegible] horse power generator, capable of providing more than twice as much electrical energy as will be needed when the 24 hour service is instituted. The voltage has been increased from 1100 to 2300 and all [illegible] will be replaced by [illegible]. In connection with this change in generating machinery [illegible] of the power house will be replaced by latest model appliances. A marble switchboard will replace the old wooden affair in use at present. The system of regulating the water wheel will be changed, and in fact the generating station will be practically rebuilt.

Up town there are just as many changes being made. Instead of having but one pole to the block as heretofore, the poles are being set 125 feet apart. New wires are being strung, new and up-to-date transformers are being put up to replace the old ones and their number is being reduced. Everything, barring nothing, is being brought up to as high a standard as present day science has been able to provide, and when the work is finished, Red Lake Falls will have a light and power plant second to none in the northwest. The motors are arriving every day and the work of installing them will be commenced at once. It is the aim of the company to have everything in readiness to turn on day current within two weeks. A number of electric flatirons have also been received, and as these can be used at present as well as later, there is no reason why there should not be a brisk demand for them now.

WRESTLING MATCH

Ober and Miller at the Bijou Theatre Tonight.

Ed Ober of Crookston, the clever welterweight wrestler who appeared in Red Lake Falls a few weeks ago, will take on Harry Miller of Angus, a professional, at the Bijou theatre this (Thursday) evening. The men will go it for two falls out of three. The men are fast and clever and mat game fans are anticipating a lively scramble and some fun.

SEVEN NEW CITIZENS.

Papers Granted to Six Norwegians and One Swede.

Seven residents of Red Lake county were granted their naturalization papers at the fall term of district court held here the first of the month. Norway contributed six of the new citizens, one being from Sweden. The names of those to whom citizenship was granted, their native country and present place of residence are as follows, Halvor Hoberg, Norway, Deer Park. Asmund A. Rue, Norway, Deer Park. Thomas Hofstad, Norway, Garnes. Lars A. Grindo, Norway, Reiner. John Markuson, Norway, Reiner, Nils Hanson, Sweden, Kratka, Andrew Nelson, Norway, Silvertoe.

ESSAY CONTEST

Opportunity for Boys and Girls in Rural Schools.

Mr. Joseph Chapman not long ago offered a series of prizes for the best essays on the above topic. Mr. Charles M. Loring, of Minneapolis, thinks that along with this discussion there should be a discussion of the counter proposition. Therefore for the best articles on the topic, "Why I Remain on the Farm," he will give one hundred dollars in prizes, as follows: 1st, $20 2nd, $15; 3rd $10; next ten best, $5 each, 14th, $3; 15th, $2. The competition is open to all Minnesota boys and girls in the seventh and eighth grades, living on a farm. Essays must be written on ruled paper. They should not exceed 500 words in length. Each must be marked with the name, age and post-office address of the writer, and be mailed so as to reach the Extension Division, St. Paul, not later than Jan. 1, 1911.

Measures For Forest Safety.

Twenty-five experts working under the direction of a chief supervisor, each man patrolling twenty townships, is the most important provision of a forest protection bill now being drafted as a result of the meeting in Bemidji Saturday. The bill is being drawn up by State Auditor Iverson and G. E. Marshall, U. S. forest supervisor of Cass Lake, and it proposes a system of safety which will cost the state approximately $125,000 per annum to organize, equip and execute.

Only crusiers and expert timber men will be employed as forest supervisors and they will be employed under civil service rules. When not employed in forest fire work they will classify the state land as to soil and merchantable timber.

A second bill, having for its purpose additional assurance against possible forest fires is being drawn by a committee composed of Archer Murray of Wadena, W. R. Mackenzie of Bemidji, C. R. Craig of Duluth, H. J. Hughes of Minneaplis and C. S. Jameson of Little Fork. This measure will be known as the good roads bill and its details will follow the judicial ditch law as far as practicable. All work is to be done under the supervision of the state highway engineer and state highway commission. An appropriation of $50,000 per year is provided.—Bemidji Pioneer.

SHORT COURSE IS NO DISAPPOINTMENT

Enough Young Men Have Been Secured But Young Ladies Are Scarce.

Course Starts Next Monday and Will Continue for Period of Four Months.

Supt. L. V. Koos informs the Gazette that all the boys that can be accomodated have made application to take the work of the short course of farm students. Applications from three or four more girls would be considered, but any who may desire to take the work should make application at once for work in the course will be commenced next Monday.

The announcement of the Farm Students' Short Course at the local high school has called out an abundance of favorable comment, A class of ten young people has been chosen from the number of candidates for the work in the course. No more young men can be accomodated than are at present signed up, but there is still room for a few young women who can meet the necessary age requirement of fourteen years or over. Any young woman, whether from town or country who is intersted, should make application at once to Superintendent L. V. Koos.

Mr. George B. Aiton, State High School Inspector, has sent a letter to the local authorities in which he lends the idea and speaks very favorably of the "practical nature of the instruction offered."

The course opens Monday morning next, at nine o'clock. Circulars describing the course still available.

It is understood that Ingber will fight the case and make a test of the law, the company for which he is buying standing behind the case.

HOW IT HAPPENED

Details of Terrible Tradgedy at Halleck Last Week

Ben Smith, one of the brothers injured in the Hallock shooting affair, has written the following statement of the case which was published in the last issue of the Hallock Weekly News:
